David & Charles Reprints

BAINES'S LANCASHIRE

Edward Baines, journalist, author and business man, produced the first directory and gazetteer of Lancashire to cover the whole county and to deal fully with its trade and industry. Published in two substantial volumes in 1824 and 1825, it of course portrayed a very important area at an interesting stage of the industrial revolution. Some of the general and political history has long become obsolete, but local and economic historians still find it an essential and mainly reliable reference book, while the total of about 1400 pages produces much entertaining reading, including some of the classified lists of traders.

The type has been slightly enlarged to make easier reading in this edition, whose first volume includes an introduction by Owen Ashmore.

ADVERTISEMENT.

THE arrangement of the matter in this Second Volume of LANCA-SHIRE, like that of the volume by which it was preceded, stands in need of but little explanation. After the List of Gentlemen's Seats, the TOWNS succeed each other in alphabetical order, from Lancaster, the first, to Wigan, the last, in the volume. The Classification of the Names of the Inhabitants under the heads of their respective trades, might occasion trouble in finding the name when the trade or profession of the person sought for is not known, but this is obviated by an Index of Names, with references, at the end of the Directory of each principal town, except Manchester and Liverpool, which, having the names in alphabetical order, as well as the Trade and Street Directories, require no Index. At page 625, the VILLAGES commence, under an alphabetical arrangement of the Parishes in their respective Hundreds, and of Townships and Villages in their respective Parishes; but as in some cases the Hundred or Parish in which any Town or Village is situated may not be known, a copious Index of Places is inserted at the end of the Second Volume, which points out the page at which each place in the County is to be found. Supplemental to the Index of Places is a general Index of such Subjects as the names of places might not serve to conduct to. With these aids, it is hoped that this laborious Essay towards a History of the County Palatine of Lancaster, (combined with the Names of all its principal Inhabitants) will be found as complete and satisfactory to its numerous Patrons as the circumscribed limits of the work and the vast body of information claiming attention would allow.

COUNTY PALATINE OF LANCASTER.

To avoid swelling this List, Gentlemen's Villas in the Neighbourhood of large Towns are not inserted here, but will be found subjoined to the Name of their Occupiers, in the Directories of the respective Towns or Townships.

This List comprehends the Names of all the Acting Magistrates in the County, according to the last official return, each of whom is indicated by an Asterisk to the left, and figures to the right of the name; the latter showing the year when the oath of qualification was taken: and, to render the Magistrates' List complete, a few places, not in the County, are inserted.

HISTORY OF LANCASTER.

LANCASTER is a Market Town, Borough, and Parish, in the Hundreds of Amounderness and Lonsdale (south of the sands,) in the Deanery of Amounderness, and in the Archdeaconry of Richmond; 11 miles N. of Garstang; 15 miles S.W. of Kirkby Lonsdale; 22 miles N.N.W. of Preston; and 239 miles N.N.W. of London. This parish contains one borough, twelve townships, and seven chapelries, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821; and the estimated annual rental of the lands, messuages, and other buildings in each township and division in the parish :—

* Those marked thus* are in the Hundred of Amounderness, and those unmarked in the Hundred of Lonsdale, south of the Sands.

Of the 3811 families in this parish, 1135 are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 1707 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft, the remaining 969 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed.

This capital of the principal palatinate county of England is situated in 54° 3' N. latitude, and 2° 48' W: longitude, on the descent of a bold eminence, whose summit is crowned with the bastions of the castle, and the lofty tower of St. Mary's church, below which is seen the river Lune opening in successive sweeps till it empties itself into the Bay of Morecambe, the great receptacle of the waters of Lonsdale. The township or borough, which are commensurate with each other, is bounded on the N. by Skerton, on the E. by Quernmoor, on the N.E. by Bulk, on the S. by Scotforth, and on the S.W. by Aldcliffe, and contains about 1600 statute acres. The buildings are of stone, which is so much preferred in this place, that there is in the whole town but one brick structure.

Early History.

The early history of Lancaster, the Caer Werid, or Green City of the ancient Britons, is included in the general history of the county. The Aborigines were a Celtic tribe of idolaters, existing by the produce of the chase, and clothed in the skins of the animals which disputed with them the dominion of the country. Caesar first planted the standard of civilization in Britain;^b and Agricola, upwards of a hundred years afterwards^c renewed the invasion, and carried his conquests into Lancashire. The Roman stations were marked out by this General, and those in the country of the western Brigantes will be found, in general, to be situated upon principal rivers, at the exact point where the waters cease to be navigable to vessels of considerable burthen. Hence Aluna was placed near the mouth of the Lune, secure from piratical visitation, and convenient for the purposes of commerce. The Roman geographers have involved the stations they describe in so much uncertainty, that the discrepancies in their maps and charts have served for a perpetual theme of contest amongst the antiquaries of after times. The name given to Lancaster by the conquerors has long been a subject of dispute, and while some British topographers have applied to it the name of Ad Alunum or Aluna,^d according to the Itinerary of Richard de Cirencester; others^e have judged it to be the Longovicum of the Notitia; and others^f the Selantiorum Portus of Ptolomy. The limits of this work do not admit of an examination of evidence on the point at issue, and judging the reasons assigned by the historian of Manchester, on the whole to be the most satisfactory, his exposition of the Roman Itineraries has been adopted.^g

Roman station.

That Lancaster was a Roman station of the first order, is universally allowed; the number of Roman antiquities found in this place remove all doubt on the subject, and the termination Caster given by the Saxons to towns where the Romans had fixed their station serves to confirm the fact. The historian of Eboracum the capital of Maxima Caesariensis, and the birth-place of Constantine the Great, has observed, that York, once the Imperial residence, stands upon a magazine of Roman antiquities; and the same observation may be made, though certainly in a much more limited degree with regard to Lancaster. Altars, statues, urns, and coins, all of Roman construction, have been found here, as well as many other remains.

Antiquities.

In a garden, near the top of Church street, was found a fine altar to the memory of Flavius Ammausius, the præfect of an ala of Gallic horse, from the banks of the Sambre, and the restorer of the dilapidated bath, and court-house of the station. The tablet has suffered some fractures and erasures, but Dr. Whitaker has supplied the deficiency in the inscription, which he reads thus:—

“Imperatore Marco Aurelio Antonino Augusto, Balineum refectum et Basilicam vetustate conlapsam a solo restitutam equites ala Sebustianæ Antoninianæ, sub Octavio Sabino, viro consulari, præside nostro curante Flavio Ammausio, præfecto equitum dictorum, undecimo kalendas Septembres, Censore secundum et Lipido secundum consule.”

At a place called the Folly, in the township of Skerton; another Roman altar was found in the year 1802, supposed to be dedicated to the topical deity of the Lune, "Deo Ialono," as the altar found at Ilkley, and inscribed "Verbeisæ Sacrum," is dedicated to the Wharf: the inscription is

DEO | IALONO | CONTRE | SANCISSI | MOIVLIVS |
IANVARIVS | EMEXDECV,

In the church yard of Halton, close to the Saxon cross, an altar was dug up and conveyed to the stable yard at Halton Hall, thus inscribed :—

DEO | MART... | SABINV... | P. P. ET MILIT...
N. BARC S... | EIIVS. P. O... |

This unique relic is supposed to be a votive offering for a body of soldiers embarking upon a military expedition.

In making the alteration in Lancaster Castle in 1797, a perfect and beautiful altar, dedicated to Cocidius, was found at a little distance, without the old wall, between Hadrian's round tower and the great square tower of Saxon architecture, which is now placed at the head of the staircase in the great tower of the castle, and which bears this inscription :—

DEO | SANCTO MARTI | COCIDIO VIBINIUS

A few years ago, a high flood brought down a fine milliard stone, six feet in height, of the date of the third consulate of Hadrian, which is now standing in a garden in Caton, and thus inscribed :—

Imp. Cæs. Tr. Hadrianus Aug. Pont. Max. Trib. Pot. Cos. III.
Pat. Patriæ centuria secunda mill. pass. quinque.

The workmen employed in cutting the Lancaster canal found, in the line which passes through Burough, a milliard stone inscribed with the name of the Emperor Philip, who reigned between the year 244 and 249, and which may therefore be considered of that date. Inscription :—Imp. C. M. Jvlio Philippo Pio Fel. Aug. and it is placed in the garden at Stodday Lodge.

In the spring of 1794, a group of Roman antiquities was found by the canal excavators, deposited in a field near the road from Lancaster to Cockerham, about a mile from Ashton Hall, the seat of the Duke of Hamilton, consisting of a headless figure of Ceres, about two feet in height, four sculptured heads, and two sea lions, cut in free-stone. These ancient relics suffered some mutilation by the tools of the workmen, and they are now to be seen in the carpenter's yard, near the canal basin, at Lancaster.

In 1811, a Roman millarium or milestone was found in the township of Ashton, so near to the surface of the earth, that it was struck by the ploughshare of a husbandman.

At a much earlier period than the discovery of any of the above antiquities, several Roman Disci and Sympyvia, or cups used in sacrifice, and coins of Ælius, Hadrianus and Augustus Cæsar, were found in digging a cellar in Lancaster. The cups have upon their sides the figures of various animals, and Julius Flavius in letters, with the word Regin. I. on the bottom of one of them. These remains, together with the Roman wall, usually called Wery Wall, abundantly demonstrate Lancaster to have been a most eminent Roman station.*

* Leigh.

On the subject of the Wery Wall, Leland has observed that "The old waul of the circuite of the priory commeth almost to Lune Bridge. Sum have thereby supposed that it was a peace of a waul of the Toune. But yn deade I espyd in no place that the Toune was ever "waulid." Other antiquaries have been more fortunate: Camden speaks of Wery Wall as a piece of Roman work, deriving its name from the green city of the ancient Britons, called Caer Werid. West supports this opinion; and Stukeley, in his animated sketch of Roman Lancaster; says, "I found a great piece of the wall made of the white stone of the country, and very hard mortar, and still very thick, though the facing on both sides had been peeled off for the sake of the squared stone which they used in building. A year or two ago, a great parcel of it was destroyed with much labour. This reached quite to the bridge lane, and hung over the street, at the head of the precipice, in a dreadful manner: it went round the verge of the close north of the church, and took in the whole circuit of the hill, and the ditch on the north side of it is now to be seen. I suppose it originally inclosed the whole top of the hill where the church and castle stand."^b

In digging a cellar in the ancient part of the town in 1772, about five feet under ground, in a bed of fine sand, a square votive stone was found, four feet long and two feet six inches wide, bearing the following inscription, from whence it appears that the Augustan wing of the Roman army was stationed here in the time of the Emperor Gordian:—

DIS[^] MANIBVS[^] L[^] IVL[^] AP^oLLINARIS[^] TREV^{REV} R[^]
AN[^] xxx[^]. EQ[^] AI AE[^] AI IV.

This fine piece of antiquity was formerly in the possession of Sir Ashton Lever, Knight, and was deposited in the Leverian Museum.

Four years after this discovery, in sinking a cellar in the upper part of Church-street, without the wall of the Roman fortification where the garrison was kept, a Roman sepulchre was found about six feet from the surface. Half-burnt fragments of wood, bones, and ashes, with broken pateræ, urns, Roman bricks, coins, horns of animals, &c. and two fragments of a thick wall, at about five yards distance from each other, were found within. In addition to other remains an earthen sepulchral lamp entire, with the nozel, at which the wick had issued, burnt black, and a large human skull were also discovered. At the back part of this site there is a descent of about seventy or eighty yards, where it is thought the river Lune anciently ran, but it is now built upon, and in levelling the ground towards this descent, a number of similar remains were found, which constituted a stratum of ashes and bones from a foot to about five feet in thickness. How far these Roman vestiges extend it is not possible to ascertain, but they, no doubt, run entirely under Church-street, as, on digging a drain on the opposite side of that street, at about six feet from the surface, the same sort of stratum of ashes and bones was found, with boars' tusks, and a small brazen head, resembling a dog's, and also the pedestal and foot part of a small image. Many of the vessels indicate the perfection to which the art of the potter was carried by the Romans, being elegantly glazed and embossed with figures, but the urns are a coarse kind of ware resembling oil jars, and some of them blackened, as if they had been submitted to the fire after they had received the mortal remains, and before they were consigned to the tomb. The inscriptions on the coins were very few of them perfect; but there was one of brass of Marcus Aurelius, and another small one of silver, in high perfection, of Faustina, his wife, inscribed on the obverse "Diva Faustina pia," and on the reverse a monument with consecratio. A few years afterwards, on digging a cellar on the opposite side of Church-street, a large hewn stone, six feet under the surface, about three tons weight, supposed to have been the corner stone of a Roman temple, was dug up, and under it were found a number of coins of Vespasian, Domitian, &c.^a

A hypocaust, or Roman pottery, (similar to those discovered at Slack, the Roman Cambodunum, about the middle of the last century, and also in the year 1824,) was found on the estate of the Honourable Edward Clifford, at Quernmoor, some years ago, and a great variety of bricks, tiles, and earthen vessels, were taken from the ovens. A tile with elevated edges, and a number of the bricks, bore the inscription of ALIA SEBUSIA, which designates a wing of Roman cavalry not before known, and these antiquities are supposed to be of the time of the Emperor Severus, in the year 207, when that sovereign, from his imperial palace at York, had given his orders for the erection of that most gigantic of all British structures, ancient or modern, the Wall of Severus.^b

That more Roman remains have not been found in Lancaster is matter of no surprise, when it is considered that the church and the castle have both been built upon the site of the Roman station; and that the terrible demolition made by the Scotch invaders in 1322, with the consequent removal of the town itself from its original elevation to the declivity and foot of the hill, must have had the effect of burying in one indiscriminate and impenetrable heap, magazines of antiquities.

The Saxons, during the stormy period of the heptarchy, gave to Lancaster the name of Lone-caster, or the castle on the Lone; as they designated Ribchester Ribblechester, or the castle on the Ribble. To the ancient worshippers of Thor is also attributed the erection of the parish church of St. Mary, after Paulinus, the Roman missionary, had introduced the light of the gospel into the north of England.^c The Danes have left no memorial of their residence here, though their successful invasion from the Humber, rendered the kingdom of Northumbria one of the first scenes of their visitation and exaction

The Normans found Lancaster in decay, the ancient city reduced to a village, and the Roman castrum little better than a ruin. In the munificence of the Conqueror's disposition towards his followers, he conferred on Roger de Poitou, the son of Roger Montgomery, three hundred and ninety-eight manors, and "Loncastre" and "Chereal-loncastre"^d formed part of this princely possession. The aspiring Baron fully aware of the advantages of a situation surrounded by a fine country, on the banks of a navigable river, and commanding an extensive view of his own domains, founded or enlarged the present castle which he constituted the great baronial residence. A flourishing town soon gathered round the castle, and the burgesses acquired extensive privileges from their lords. The county of Lancaster which had almost lost its identity, and partly merged into Yorkshire and Cheshire during the contests between the Saxons and the Danes, was now definitively formed, and Lancaster, being the seat of the great Baron, was erected into the capital. Situations more convenient might have been found, Capital.

must be admitted that the capital of Lancashire, with all its disadvantages, is nearer to the centre of the county, than the capital of Great Britain is to the centre of the kingdom.

BARONS. The repeated defection of Roger de Poitou, the first Baron of Lancaster, lost him the favour of the crown, and with it the possession of his castle of Lancaster, and his estates between the Mersey and the Ribble.

After the battle of Tewkesbury, in 1106, the honour of Lancaster devolved by royal grant, upon Elthred, the son of Ivo de Taillebois, another of the Norman chiefs to whom the Conqueror had already given the Barony of Kendal, with the northern parts of Lancashire, including Furness; but that portion of the forfeited estates of Roger de Poitou, which lay between the Mersey and the Ribble, was conferred by the king^a on Ranulf de Briscasard, the third Earl of Chester. These great barons became the lords of the county of Lancaster, the former of the northern and the latter of the southern parts. The history of the lords of Lancaster has already been sketched,^b but it may be proper in the immediate seat of their power to enlarge the details, and to trace with distinctness, from the best authorities,^c the succession of these illustrious houses from the baronial dignity to the sovereign power.

v.l. p. 19.

Elthred, the second baron of Kendal, was succeeded by his son Ketel, who was the father of Gilbert, the fourth baron, succeeded by William the fifth. This William, by permission of Henry II. assumed the surname of Lancaster, and was summoned to parliament by that name. In the 18th of Stephen, he married Gundred, the widow of Roger, Earl of Warwick, and his son and heir was usually styled

William de Lancaster the Second, which lord married Helewise, daughter of Stuteville, Lord of Knaresbro'. The only issue of his marriage was a daughter named after her mother Helewise, who was married to

Gilbert Fitz Reinfrede, a favourite of king John: Gilbert obtained from that monarch the possession of the honour of Lancaster, and executed the office of high sheriff of the county in the 7th and 17th years of John's reign. The favours of the king did not prevent the baron from discharging his paramount duties to his country; Gilbert united with the other barons of the realm, and, by contributing to gain Magna Charta for the people of England, lost the custody of the honour and castle of Lancaster. His successor in 4 Henry III. was his son

William, who in the 18th year of that reign, was high sheriff of the county of Lancaster, and held the office without intermission till the 30th year inclusive. This William died without issue in the year 1246, and

Peter le Brus, the son of Peter, by Helewise de Lancaster, obtained the castle and manor of Kendal; but the castle and honour of Lancaster, were in the year 1266, conferred upon Edmund Crouchback, who obtained also the possessions between Mersey and Ribble, and thus concentrated the great honours and domains of the county.

It has already been seen that after the second rebellion of Roger de Poitou, his possessions between the Mersey and the Ribble were conferred on Ranulf de Briscasard, the third Earl of Chester.

Ranulph, the fourth Earl of Chester, succeeded to the honours and possessions of his father, but not till they had been presented by king Stephen, to his son William de Blois.

From the fourth Earl of Chester, the inheritance descended in 1156, to Hugh de Kevelioc, and to Ranulph, surnamed de Blundeville, son and grandson of the former; in 13 Henry III. Ranulf had a confirmation from the king of all his lands between Ribble and Mersey, viz. the town of West Derby, with the wapentake; the borough of Liverpool; the town and wapentake of Salford; and the wapentake of Leyland. This great baron executed the office of sheriff, by deputy, for the county of Lancaster, in the 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 9th years of the king's reign; he also purchased all the lands of Roger de Maresay, which he had in the hundred of Blackburn, for 240 marks of silver, and a pair of white gloves, to be rendered annually at Easter.^a Ranulf died in 1232, and leaving no issue his inheritance was shared by his four sisters and co-heiresses.

Agnes, the third sister, married William Earl of Ferrers, the 6th in lineal descent from Robert de Ferrers, raised by king Stephen to the earldom of Derby, (from the county town of that name) for his prowess at the battle of the Standard, fought on the 23rd of August, 1138. In the distribution of the property of Earl Ranulph, all the lands between Mersey and Ribble were apportioned to Agnes, and became in right of this marriage the possession of Earl Ferrers, who in the year 1223, was constituted governor and made custos of the castle and honour of Lancaster.^b On the 20th of September, 1247, the earl died, and his countess died the month following, having lived together, as man and wife, seventy-five years.

William, Earl of Ferrers, his son and heir, did homage to Henry III. and had a mandate to the sheriff of Lancaster, for the enjoyment of all the lands between Ribble and Mersey, possessed by his uncle Ranulf, Earl of Chester, in Lancashire and elsewhere. At his death he was succeeded by his eldest son,

Robert de Ferrers, in the earldom of Derby, but Robert having taken part with Simon de Montfort, he was deprived of his earldom and his lands in 1265, amongst which were confiscated all his possessions between Ribble and Mersey, which Henry III. united with the honour of Lancaster, and gave in 1266 to Edmund Crouchback, the king's youngest son, who was created the first Earl of Lancaster. The king gave also to this prince the honour of Hinckley, and the stewardship of England; the honour, town and castle of Derby, with all the goods and chattels whereof Robert de Ferrers, Earl of Derby was possessed; also the honour, town and castle of Leicester, late parcel of the possession of Simon de Montfort, with all his lands; with the honour, castle and town of Lancaster, and their appurtenances, together with the forests of Weresdale and Lonesdale, and the honour and castle of Monmouth, to hold of himself and the heir of his body. These vast possessions laid the foundation of the future greatness of the house of Lancaster. Edmund, ample as were his possessions, died deeply in debt, about the feast of Pentecost, in 1296, and was succeeded by

EARLS.

Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, his eldest son, then a minor, who marched with Edward I. in the 26th year of the king's reign into Scotland. The Earl of Lancaster being then sheriff of Lancashire, by in-

Heritage, as the Earls of Thanet are still hereditary sheriffs of the neighbouring county of Westmoreland, he substituted Richard de Hoghton as his deputy in office. In 5th Edward II. Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, was the chief of the nobles that entered into a combination against Piers de Gaveston, the king's favourite, which terminated in actual rebellion, and having suffered a signal defeat at Boroughbridge, he was brought to Pontefract and executed for high treason 15 Edward II. The munificence of this Earl of Lancaster was unbounded : when land let for from 3*d.* to 6*d.* an acre, and a fat ox sold for 16*s.* his annual expenditure amounted to £7,597 13*s.* 4½*d.*^a which at a very moderate computation could not be less in value than £100,000^b of our money.

Henry, Earl of Lancaster, the brother and heir of Thomas, obtained an act, dated March 7th, in the 1st Edward III. for reversing the attainder of his unfortunate brother, on the ground that he had not been tried by his peers, and thereupon he came into possession of all his honours, lands, and lordships, namely, the Earldoms of Leicester and Lancaster, and all the lands thereunto appertaining. This Earl died in 1345, and was succeeded by his son Henry, who was created Earl of Derby 2 Edward III. for his service in the Scotch wars. This Earl distinguished himself greatly in the wars in France, before his father's death, and at the cry of "A Derby ! a Derby !" the gates of their principal cities flew open from the terror of his name. In his victorious career he subjected no fewer than 66 cities in France. He was the Marlborough and the Wellington of his age. The famous order of Knights of the Garter was instituted in this reign, and Prince Edward was the first knighted champion, and Henry Earl of Lancaster, the second. The expenditure of the Earl, like his honours, was princely, and, while engaged in the foreign wars he spent a hundred pounds a day, which was equal at least to £1000 of our money.

DUKES.

In 25 Edward III. having merited so highly by prudent conduct and renowned exploits he was advanced, by special charter, bearing date the 6th of March, 1351, to the title and dignity of DUKE OF LANCASTER, with power to have a Chancery in the County of Lancaster, and to issue out writs there under his own seal, as well touching pleas of the crown as any other relating to the common laws of the nation ; and also to enjoy all other liberties and regalities belonging to a county palatine in as ample manner as the Earl of Chester was known to enjoy them within his county. The palace of the Savoy was built by this duke, at a cost of 52,000 marks, and the captive King of France was entertained here. For his acts of piety he was called "The good Duke of Lancaster," and when the King of France presented him with valuable gifts he declined them all, except a thorn out of the Crown of our Saviour ! which he brought to England, and left as a relic to the Colligiata Church of our Lady at Leicester. To the Monks of Whalley, in the County of Lancaster he gave something less rare, but more substantial : by a deed dated January 2d, 1360, he conferred upon this house two cottages, seven acres of meadow land, 183 acres of pasture, 200 acres of wood, called Rommesgrove, all lying in the chase of Blackburn ; likewise two messuages, and 126 acres of land, 26 acres of meadow, 13 acres of pasture, called Standen Holcroft, and Grenelache, lying within the towns of Penhulton and Clitherhow, to maintain two recluses in the church-yard of Whalley, there to pray for the souls of him, the said Duke, his ancestors and heirs. In the year 1360, the life of this distinguished peer, if he can be called a peer who had no equals amongst subjects, was terminated by the plague on the 24th of March. He left issue two daughters, his heirs—Maud, married to Ralph Lord Strafford; and Blanch, married to John of Gaunt, Earl of Richmond, fourth son of Edward III. This prince inherited, in virtue of his marriage with the daughter of the good Duke of Lancaster, “a number of castles and manors in Yorkshire, Leicestershire, Warwickshire, Cheshire, Essex, and Northumberland; and in the county of Lancaster, the wapentakes (or hundreds) of Leyland, Amounderness, and Londesdale; the manor of Oves-Walton, Preston, Shingleton, Riggeby and Wra, Overton, Skerton, the towns of Lancaster and Slyne; the royal bailiwick of Blackburnshire; the office of master forester beyond Ribble; the vaccary of Wyreldale with its members; likewise the manors of Penwortham, Totyngton, and Rochedale; the wapentake of Elderhowe, (Clitheroe) with the demesne lands there; the lordship and vaccary of Bowland; the forest of Blackburnshire, and the park of Ightenhiell.” The possessions of John of Gaunt were further extended by the death of Maud, on which event the whole of the possessions of the late Duke of Lancaster devolved upon him, and a few months after this acquisition of fortune he was elevated to the Dukedom of Lancaster, by his royal father, in full parliament, with all the liberties and regalities of an Earl Palatine;^a as also Earl of Leicester and Derby, with the office of high steward of England. Subsequently he procured the grant of a Chancery in his Duchy of Lancaster. These grants, dated 1340, were accompanied by an obligation to send two knights to parliament, as representatives of the commonalty of the county of Lancaster, and two burgesses for every borough within the said county.^b This illustrious prince rendered himself obnoxious to the clergy by his firm and manly support of Wickliff, the most eminent of all the Lollards of that time, and by his recommendation that the bible should be translated into the vulgar tongue. With the populace he was not in favour, partly owing to this cause, and partly to his lofty demeanour, combined with his immoral connection with Catherine Swinford, his concubine, during the life time of both his wives; and when the insurrection under Jack Straw and his men of Kent broke out, they burnt down the duchy palace in the Savoy. The duke by a second marriage with Constance, daughter of Peter the Cruel, King of Castile and Leon, became allied to the reigning family in Spain, and when he returned with his wife’s dowry in November, 1389, he had 47 mules laden with chests of gold.^c The castles of Lancaster and Leicester formed alternately the residence of this great prince, who surpassed all the subjects of his time in power and fortune. From his infancy he was trained to public affairs, and in the vigour of manhood he was placed at the head of the king’s councils in the senate, and of his army in the field. He was the father of sovereigns, and allied his children more nobly than any king from the conquest to the present time.^d As he advanced in years the cares of state and the mis-rule of the king,^e enfeebled his athletic frame, and the banishment of his son hastened his dissolution.

Henry Plantagenet, surnamed of Bolingbroke, from the place of his birth, was the only surviving son of John of Gaunt by Blanch of Lancaster, and succeeded to his father’s title and inheritance in 1398. In 9 Richard II. during his father’s life time he was summoned to parliament by the title of Henry Earl of Derby.^f Two years afterwards the king confirmed all the grants that had been made by his grandfather and himself to the family of Lancaster, and extended the grant of County Palatine, which had been originally given to John of Gaunt for his life only, to his heirs male, as a mark of his regard towards Henry of Bolingbroke. In 15 Richard II. the king sitting in royal majesty upon his throne, and holding in his hand a rod, made his cousin Sir Henry of Lancaster, Earl of Derby, a duke by the title of Duke of Hereford. In the 21st of this king's reign, a violent quarrel arose between Henry of Bolingbroke, Duke of Hereford, and Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, who had each accused the other of disloyal expressions towards the king. An appeal to arms was made by the Duke of Hereford, who challenged the Duke of Norfolk to wager of battle. This memorable duel had the sanction of the king, and on the 16th of September, 1398, the combatants mounted on their chargers, splendidly caparisoned, appeared at Coventry, by appointment, armed cap à pie. The king and his whole court were assembled to witness the combat, and proclamation being made, and the trumpet sounded for the charge, the Duke of Hereford spurred forward his horse, but before the Duke of Norfolk could advance, the king cast down his warden, and the heralds cried "Stay! Stay!" The king in his "mercy and grace" then caused both the dukes to be disarmed, and banished them the kingdom, "inasmuch as one of them at least must have been very culpable," and did ordain and adjudge that Henry of Lancaster should be banished the kingdom for ten years, and that Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, should be exiled for life." The nation was highly incensed at this capricious proceeding and cruel sentence; and when Henry of Lancaster, the great favourite of the people, passed through London, on his way to France, he was followed by more than 40,000 citizens, with the lord mayor at their head, who, according to the chronicles of the times, cried after him and lamented his fate and their own in the most moving manner. His father, John of Gaunt, died the same year; on which Henry of Bolingbroke, assumed the title of Duke of Lancaster, though his estates were withheld from him. A rebellion in Ireland, the natural consequence of bad government, summoned the king to that country, and, during his absence, the Duke of Lancaster, under a sense of his own wrongs, and in obedience to the public voice, returned to England. Early in the year 1399, he landed at Ravenspurn,* in Yorkshire. Being joined by a number of the northern lords, and large bodies of the commonalty, the Duke marched by way of Doncaster to London, and on the 28th of September, 1399, mounted the throne, from which Richard II. was deposed, under the sanction of Parliament, and by the will of the nation. The ducal house of Lancaster having thus given a sovereign to the throne of England, arrived at the summit of earthly grandeur, and from that time to the present, with the exception of the short period in which the house of York reigned, the title of Duke of Lancaster has been associated with the regal dignity.

SOVEREIGN-REIGNS.

The history of the duchy in its possessions, jurisdiction, and revenue, is already written, (See Vol. I. page 30, 34, and 130) and the nature and limits of the county palatine are shewn in pages 30 and 130 of the same volume. The most brilliant period in the history of Lancaster was that in which John of Gaunt held here his ducal court. While residing in the castle he obtained for the town of Lancaster from his royal father a charter for the exclusive right of holding the sessions of pleas, expressed in the following terms—"Know ye, that we of our special favour, and at the prayer of our beloved son, John Duke of Lancaster, have granted, and by this our charter confirmed, for us and our heirs, to our beloved the mayor, bailiffs, and the whole community of Lancaster, their heirs and successors, that all pleas and sessions of all justices whatever assigned for the county of Lancaster, shall, in the said town of Lancaster, as the capital town of the said county, and not elsewhere within the said county, be for ever held. Wherefore, we will and declare for us and our heirs, that the pleas and sessions of all justices whatsoever assigned for the said county, shall be held in the said town and not elsewhere. It is thus decreed by us."

* Ravenspurn, once a considerable commercial city at the mouth of the Humber, is now swallowed up in the deep, and not a vestige remains to shew its situation.

Edw. III.

A decree of the Chancellor and Council of the Duchy of Lancaster, under the duchy seal, is also quoted, in which it is said, that in the reign of Queen Mary two of the original quarter sessions of the peace, formerly held in Lancaster, had been withdrawn from the said town to Clitheroe, by an order of the duchy court, but that upon the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of Lancaster producing the original charter of Edward III. and the various confirmations thereof, it was ordered and decreed by the said chancellor and council—"That all general sessions of assizes and gaol delivery, to be appointed, shall be yearly, from henceforth for ever holden in and at the said town of Lancaster, in the accustomed manner, and not elsewhere in the said county, and that the four other quarter sessions of the peace shall be held here and not elsewhere."

After the death of John of Gaunt the grandeur of the ducal residence declined, and for many ages justice has been administered in its stately halls, and imprisonment inflicted within the more gloomy recesses of the castle.

In the invasion of the Scotch, after the memorable defeat of Edward II. by Robert Bruce, at Bannockburn, ancient Lancaster was consigned to the flames, and the castle alone survived the fury of the conquerors, though it did not escape the marks of their violence. The town, which was gradually rebuilt, spread into the valley, and took the castle hill as its western boundary. Amidst the scenes of devastation produced by the invaders, the miserable inhabitants would naturally be anxious to conceal their treasure, and it was probably a deposit made on this occasion, consisting of a number of silver coins of the reign of Edward I. that was dug up some years ago in excavating a cellar in the Friarage. After the battle of Otterburn, fought in 1389, in which Young Percy, surnamed Hotspur, was taken prisoner, and Douglas slain, the Scots made another incursion into the northern counties of England, and part of the town of Lancaster, with its records, was again consigned to the flames.

The Wars of the Roses, between the houses of York and Lancaster,^a deluged the country with blood, but the actual ravages of war did not extend, in any one instance, during that long protracted contest to this town or county: and though the fictitious Yorkist—Lambert Simnel, landed at the pile of Fouldrey, in the bay of Morecambe, the young adventurer and his adherents, on their march from Furness, passed through Lancaster without offering any violence either to the persons or the property of the inhabitants.

^b See

Up to the period of the reformation, when the monastic houses fell with as much rapidity, and in much greater numbers, than the castles fell in the time of the commonwealth, Lancaster contained a number of religious houses,^b but they are now so entirely swept away that not a vestige remains to show the site of any of them. Their ancient situations are, however, pretty well ascertained, and it is known that the site of the Benedictine, or Alien Priory, is partly occupied by the vicarage; that the hospital for lepers, dedicated to St. Leonard, stood in St. Leonard's Gate; that the priory for Black Friars, was in the Friarage, and that for the Grey Friars near the old bridge. A chantry, founded in 1485, by John Gardynor of Bailrig, one of the benefactors of Lancaster, for the reception of four poor women, as well as for the stated celebration of divine offices in the Parish Church, escaped the fate of the monasteries, and exists to the present time, in the humble edifice, rebuilt in 1792, on the ancient site, to the east of the vicarage court, affording a dwelling with an allowance of nine shillings and five pence halfpenny per quarter to each of the poor inmates. However splendid might be the accommodations and sumptuous the fare of the more elevated members of the monastic orders, the situation of others of them was humble in the extreme; and when we find that in the hospital of St. Leonard's, or the hospital for lepers, as it is called in the Notitia Monastica, the allowance per diem to each of the brethren was a loaf weighing 1lb. 12oz., and pottage on Sundays, Mondays, and Fridays; it will be allowed that the bill of fare in most of the workhouses of modern times is much more luxurious. Some uncertainty has existed as to the exact situation of St. Leonard's Hospital, but the discovery of a crossed tombstone and of several human skeletons in the year 1811, seems to fix it at the eastern extremity of St. Leonard's Gate. The revulsion in the national affairs, produced by the destruction of the religious houses, may be traced in a number of statutes passed in the latter part of the reign of Henry VIII. from one of which, of the date of 1544, it appears that "there had, in times past, been many beautiful houses in Lancaster," in common with several other towns in this county, but that they "were now falling into ruin." Camden's description, in the reign of Elizabeth, gives some confirmation to this account when he says, "Lancaster is at present but thinly peopled, and all the inhabitants farmers, the country about it being cultivated, open, flourishing, and not bare of wood."

In the interval between the Reformation and the reign of Charles I. this town seems to have regained a share of its former prosperity, and when, in an evil hour, that monarch determined to levy the obnoxious impost of ship money, without the consent of parliament, the borough of Lancaster stood higher on the scale of contributions than the borough of Liverpool,^c and next in rank to Preston. At the breaking out of the civil wars in this reign, the borough of Lancaster espoused the royal cause, but when General Fairfax^d dispatched the expedition from Manchester under Sir John Seaton to the north, a force under Serjeant-major Birch was ordered to Lancaster, on the 12th of February, 1643, which attacked the town and castle with so much vigour that they both surrendered almost without a struggle to the parliamentary forces. The Earl of Derby, determining that this important passage town should be wrested from the enemy, concerted a short campaign with Lord Molyneux^a, and with their joint force they marched from Latham-house on the evening of the 17th of March for Lancaster. Having accomplished a march of nearly 40 miles, without halting, they appeared before the town at the rising of the sun, on the 18th, and summoned the garrison to surrender. This demand being met with a peremptory refusal, the troops were immediately ordered to storm the town. The first assault was repulsed with considerable loss, but, on the attack being renewed, the Earl of Derby, to encourage his half intimidated troops, seized a pike and rushing forward, called out "Follow me." With such an example before them it was impossible any longer to hesitate; the troops rushed on, and in a few minutes the town was their own. His lordship having spent three days in refreshing his men and in demolishing the works, marched in the night of the third day to Preston, which place he also stormed and carried. During the remainder of the civil wars, though the inhabitants of Lancaster frequently beheld troops belonging to the hostile parties pass through the town, it was not their fate to witness any further military operations, till, in the month of August, 1648, Duke Hamilton, at the head of an army of seventeen thousand troops, marched into Lancaster, on his route towards London, with the avowed intention^b of "delivering the king from his base imprisonment, freeing the parliament from the constraint put upon them, and procuring a solemn peace." At that time the castle was occupied by the parliamentary troops, and Sir Thomas Tyldesley was charged with the duty of reducing that fortress for the service of the king. For some days the siege was pressed with much vigour, and at length the garrison was reduced to great exigencies; but the news of the defeat of the Duke at Preston by Oliver Cromwell, obliged Sir Thomas to abandon the enterprize. A tradition prevails that this fortress had been previously taken by Cromwell, and that he planted his cannon on a circular mount at the southwest side of the town in Hill-meadow; but the evidence of this fact is not to be traced to any authentic record.*

Duke's
Letter.

In the revolution, justly called glorious, of 1688, Lancaster took no distinguished part, nor is there any prominent event in the history of this borough during the reign of William III. except that in the year 1698, a casual fire broke out in one of the principal streets, and spread with destructive fury through a large portion of the town.

In the rebellion of 1715, this place was thrown into a state of great consternation by the arrival of the rebels from the north, led by General Foster, and accompanied by the Earls of Derwentwater, Wintown, Nithsdale, and Carnwath. The day they entered Lancaster was the 7th of November, and they advanced into the town with swords drawn, colours flying, and marching to the music of the bagpipes. Here they formed a circle in the market place, and proclaimed the Chevalier de St. George, king of England, by the title of James III. and prayers were offered up in the parish church for his safety and success. The inhabitants beheld these ceremonies with amazement and apprehension, scarcely conceiving to what they all tended, and themselves taking no part in the events that were passing around them. The discipline observed by the invaders was more strict than could have been expected; little mischief was committed during their continuance in the town, and they all paid punctually for every thing they purchased, except a few of the highlanders, whose means were so much exhausted that they were obliged to defer part of their payments till the Chevalier, their royal master, had mounted the throne! The number of insurgent troops amounted to about 1400, and they seized six pieces of cannon from a ship in the bay, along with several stand of arms, the better to carry on their military operations. They also seized the revenue officers in this port, and possessed themselves of the small fund which was contained in the public coffers. The protection of Lancaster had been confided to Colonel Hoghton, at the head of a body of militia; but this was a force in no degree calculated to withstand the invading army, and the colonel and his men retreated before the rebels arrived. Two days after their arrival they completely evacuated the town, taking the route of Garstang to Preston. At the latter of these places their career terminated; being overpowered by numbers they capitulated to General Wills and General Carpenter, and such of them as returned to Lancaster, amounting to about 230, came as prisoners to be lodged in the castle.* A number of them were brought to trial at this place several months afterwards; and Captain Bruce, John Winkley, Thomas Shuttleworth, George Hodgson, and ——— Charnley were executed here on the 2d of October in the following year. Four others of the rebels also suffered at Lancaster: the names of two of them were Crow and Macintosh, the former a Scotch mathematician, but the names of the two others are not recorded.

The failure of the rebellion of 1715, by no means extinguished the hopes of the house of Stuart, and Lancaster was doomed, in the year 1745, to witness another attempt, more formidable than that by which it was preceded, to supplant the king de facto by the king de jure. Having landed in Scotland, and collected a numerous army, Prince Charles Edward, advanced into Lancashire by the way of Carlisle at the head of 5000 men, accompanied by sixteen Scotch and English nobles. On the 24th of November, the rebels passed through Lancaster, where they put all the horses they could press into a state of requisition to convey their baggage and facilitate their advance. At Manchester they halted for some days to recruit their numbers and to refresh their troops. From hence they proceeded to Derby, but, being seized with the well grounded apprehension that they would be surrounded, they measured back their steps, and in their retreat passed through Lancaster on the 13th of December. General Oglethorpe's dragoons, by whom they were closely pursued, entered the town on the 16th, and the Duke of Cumberland, with the main body of the English army, arrived here a few days afterwards. Some excesses were committed in the retreat, but they were in general such only as are incident to the operations of a hotly pursued army; and the presence of the Duke soon restored confidence. A few stragglers of the rebel army who had loitered in the rear for the purpose of plunder, were taken and executed, but the main body reached Scotland in safety. The battle of Culloden, fought in the spring of the following year, sealed the fate of the Stuarts, and drove the young Pretender from the kingdom, leaving a number of his friends, who were less fortunate, to expiate their treason by the forfeiture of their lives.*

The centenary of the revolution was celebrated here, on the 4th of Jubilee. November, 1788, as in most of the other great towns of Lancashire, with considerable splendour. Processions were formed by the inhabitants, who repaired to the church to offer up their acknowledgments to God for the blessings enjoyed under a free constitution and settled government; cannon were fired from the surrounding hills; and all those demonstrations of loyal affection were displayed towards the house of Brunswick, which served to shew that the king de facto, being the sovereign of the nation's choice, was firmly seated upon his throne, while all hopes on the part of the king de jure were for ever extinguished.

Since the extinction of the rebellion of 1745, two princes of the blood royal have visited Lancaster, Prince William Frederick of Gloucester, the military commander of the Northern district, who repaired to this place from his residence at St. Domingo house, in the neighbourhood of Liverpool, on the 21st of September, 1803, to inspect the volunteers; and on the 25th of September, in the following year, he repeated his visit for the same purpose, accompanied by his venerable father, the Duke of Gloucester, brother to the reigning monarch, George III.

The Public Buildings in Lancaster are numerous, and consist of the Castle, the Town Hall, the Custom House, the buildings applied to charitable purposes, the Churches and Chapels, the Markets, and the places of public amusement. Public buildings

It has been already assumed, that the baronial Castle of Lancaster Castle. was built by Roger de Poitou, on the site of the Roman castrum. From the age of the conquest, to the year 1322, it is probable, that no important change was made in this edifice; but when the Scotch invaded England in that year, and rased the capital of Lancashire to its foundations, the castle, which had withstood their attacks in times past, and which might prove a bulwark against their future incursions, would naturally become an object of their vengeance. From that period to the reign of Edward III. the town and castle could scarcely have recovered from the merciless stroke of the invaders; but under the munificent hand of John of Gaunt, the castle was re-edified, and endowed with more than its original strength and splendour. At this time it was surrounded by a moat, with a draw-bridge in front, and port cullis at the entrance-gate made of thick wrought iron. A part of the moat still remains, and the water, from its elevated situation, can be turned, in case of fire, into the principal street of the town. By this prince, the gateway tower, flanked by two large octagonal turrets, surrounded by watch towers, and defended by a triple row of machicolations was added, and the arms of France, semi-quartered with those of England, cut in a shield, were placed on one side of this entrance, with a label ermine, of three points, the distinction of John of Gaunt, on the other. The turret of the Lungess tower, at an elevation of eighty-eight feet, is called John o' Gaunt's chair, and from hence a prospect of vast extent opens upon the view, comprehending the hills of Cumberland and Westmoreland, the plain of south Lancashire, and the whole extent of the vale of Lune, terminated by the watery expanse of the Irish sea.

* For the History of this Rebellion, see vol. I, page 75 to 78.

The next era of renovation was during the shrievalty of Richard Ashton, Esq. in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, when Philip of Spain menaced England with invasion, and a stone in the battlement of the Lungess tower marks the period by this inscription, E. R. 1585, R. A. At this time the castle was rather a fortress than a baronial residence, and it has ever since served as the County Prison, and the seat for the administration of public justice. As the county has grown in population, and as criminal offences have multiplied, it has become necessary to enlarge the accommodations, and to improve the classification of the prisoners, and in the year 1788, the castle of Lancaster was enlarged by the authority of the Act for improving prisons. Under the direction of a committee of Magistrates, the house in which the gaoler now lives was erected in the space between the gateway and the well tower, so situated as to command a view of the castle yard. The prison for the female debtors, extending from the gateway to the penitentiary, was next completed, and the inside of the castle yard built up uniformly with the keeper's house. The new buildings for the female debtors, and male felons, perfected the prison accommodation, and all this work was as much as possible constructed on the fire-proof plan, with hewn stone, without timber. The county and crown halls at the west side of the castle, with appropriate offices, were at the same time completed, and they afford excellent specimens, particularly the Nisi Prius court,* of architectural beauty; but the approaches are ill contrived, and occasion considerable inconvenience to the Judges, who, however aged and infirm, are obliged to ascend a long flight of steps, either in the open air, or connected with gloomy subterraneous passages. The accommodation for the different public offices, and the custody of the records, are also yet insufficient, and capable of much improvement. One hundred and forty thousand pounds has been expended in the different alterations; a sum, which, in the days of Roger de Poitou, would have built twenty such edifices as the present castle of Lancaster.

Further additions to the castle have since been found necessary, and in July, 1818, the foundations of a new tower were laid, which was finished in May, 1821, and is called the penitentiary for female prisoners.† The classification and inspection of prisoners form an important feature in the discipline of this gaol; and nothing can more effectually tend to reclaim the vicious, and to preserve the young offender from the contamination which so generally prevails in our public prisons.

In the year 1822, a whole length figure of John of Gaunt, in the costume of the reign of his royal father, was placed, with excellent taste, in the niche of the gateway tower, where an effigy of the same personage probably stood when that tower was first erected. A terrace on the south side of the castle, and another on the north, communicate by the west, and form a fine promenade, where the gay are refreshed by the pure air, and delighted with the beauties of the surrounding scenery;

* In the Crown Court there is a fine equestrian portrait of his late Majesty George III. mounted on his cream-coloured charger, painted by Northcote, and presented by James Ackers, Esq. of Lark-Hill, during his Shrievalty; and in the Hall of the Civil Court, there is a full length portrait of Colonel Stanley, and another of Mr. Blackburne, many years Knights of the Shire, painted by Allen, and presented by Sir Robert Peel, Bart.

† For an account of the average number of prisoners in the castle, and the expense of maintaining them, in the year ending the 16th of June, 1823, see Vol. I. page 103. Taking the average for the last ten years, the number of debtors has been one hundred and fifty, and of criminals one hundred and eighty-five.

while the contemplative, passing through a succession of ages, behold in this stupendous structure the ancient residence of nobles, and the modern abode of criminals, doubting perhaps, whether the Barons of William the Norman, who stole a kingdom, or the unfortunate delinquents whose crimes have lodged them in the palace of the Duke of Lancaster, might better claim the title to figure, on that fatal platform which is here exhibited after every Assize.

The constablenesship of Lancaster Castle is vested in Sir Richard Clayton, Bart. of Adlington, in this county; and the Rev. Joseph Rowley, A.M. is the chaplain, with a salary of £350 a year. Mr. John Higgin, and Mr. Thomas Higgin, his son, are the Governors: formerly the salary attached to this highly responsible situation was parsimonious in the extreme, and as late as the year 1750, it amounted only to £40 a-year; but at present it is more commensurate to the trust reposed in the governors, who now receive jointly £1000 per annum, as their salary from the county fund, exclusive of an allowance of £250 a year towards paying the salaries of the turnkeys, matron, and watchmen. The walls of the castle inclose an area of 10,525 square yards, in which space are contained the various courts, towers, and prisons, with the house built for the governor.

THE COUNTY LUNATIC ASYLUM, situated on Lancaster Moor, Lunatic Asylum. is a handsome stone erection, from a plan furnished by Mr. Standen, an architect of Lancaster; the building is quadrangular, with a handsome front, ornamented with pillars of the Doric order, and occupies, with the gardens and airing ground, about five acres of land. There are in the house at present accommodations for 250 patients, with the necessary attendants; and a building is now erecting, which will, when completed, extend the accommodation to 300: a chapel is also building for such as may be deemed capable of attending divine service. Every part of the house is freely ventilated, and well lighted; warm and cold baths are provided for the use of the patients; and stoves are placed in the lower apartments to preserve a proper degree of warmth in the winter season. The long galleries afford opportunities for taking the exercise of walking under cover when the weather is unfavourable, while the spacious yards, and ample airing grounds, with the employment in the garden for such as are able and disposed to work, yield in their turn, exercise in the open air. Bowls, draughts, and other amusements are allowed for the recreation of the patients, and to enable them to pass their time as agreeably as their unhappy state of mind will admit. This asylum, as it now stands, is said, we believe truly, to possess almost all the advantages of the various institutions of the same kind in the kingdom. In their moral treatment no restraint is imposed upon the patients but such as is necessary for their personal safety, or for the protection of those by whom they are surrounded. In the medical practice none of those general and indiscriminating modes of treatment are adopted, which prevail in some institutions, but every patient is treated as the peculiarity of his or her own case may require. Since the opening of the Asylum, in 1816, almost every possible variety of mental disease has been brought under inspection here, from the raving maniac, with incessant exertion, to the melancholy hypochondriac, obstinately silent, and refusing the food necessary for his subsistence; and from such as do not utter a sensible sentence, to those whose minds are only erroneous on a single subject. Recently the public services of religion have been introduced into this asylum ; and from the Report, just published, it appears, that a large number of the patients join with becoming decorum in the duties of the sanctuary, and that the devotional services in which they engage, by soothing their disordered minds, have a tendency to restore their reason. The management of the institution is under the direction of a committee of visiting Justices, consisting of thirty-nine of the county Magistrates, with the Right Hon. Lord Stanley at their head. The officers are, a physician, superintendent, and surgeon, matron, treasurer, chaplain, and house steward ; and the number of patients in the house on the 24th of June, 1824, was 137 males, and 117 females. The number of patients admitted, and discharged, since the opening of the institution, has been already stated, and the result of the practice may be collected from that summary.*

The remote situation of the Asylum from the more populous districts of the county has been complained of, and with some reason. The site originally fixed upon was Bootle, near Liverpool, where the ground was actually purchased, and the materials accumulated for the building. This situation was afterwards abandoned, and Cadeley and Fulwood Moors, both near Preston, were mentioned as much more central ; but the scale was turned in favour of Lancaster Moor, by an offer on the part of the Corporation of Lancaster to present the county with the requisite site gratuitously, and by the further consideration, that facilities would be given for the inspection of the asylum, at the half yearly visits which the Magistrates are called to make to the county town, during the spring and autumn assizes.

The places of public worship in Lancaster are, the Parish Church, St. John's, and St. Ann's, with a number of chapels belonging to Dissenters of different denominations. There is no Cathedral here, nor indeed in any part of this county. The dignitaries of the Lancashire Church Establishment are to be found at York and Chester ; and till the time of Henry VIII. by far the largest share of this county was subject to the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of Lichfield.^a

The Parish Church of St. Mary stands on the " green and shapely Knoll" of Castle-hill, and is of the same date as the castle. A Saxon church, which gave denomination to Chercaloncastre in the Domesday survey, occupied the same site before the conquest, but in the devastation of those early times it was swept away, and the alien priory of Roger de Poitou, founded in 1094,^b laid the foundation of the church of St. Mary, which was bestowed by its founder on the Benedictine Abbey of St. Martin, at Seez, in Normandy. This structure consists of a central and two side aisles of equal length, terminated by a well proportioned and lofty tower at the west end, erected in 1759. The registry for this division of the archdeaconry of Richmond and the commissary's court are held within the church ; and are screened by ten ancient stalls, while six others of these richly ornamented pieces of antiquity are ranged on each side the organ. The grotesque figures on the turn-up seats, and the beautiful workmanship in front of the chancel and vestry, have for many ages attracted the notice of the curious, and will long continue to be admired as exquisite specimens of ancient carving. The living of St. Mary's is a vicarage, valued in the Liber Regis at £41, of which the king, by reason of the lunacy of Oliver Martin, is the patron, and the Rev. John Manby, A.M. is the incumbent. Several monuments adorn the church, the principal of which are a mural marble tablet and bust to the memory of Sir Samuel Eyre, one of the Judges of the King's Bench, in the reign of William III. whose remains were originally interred here, but removed on the 12th of Sept. 1698, to Salisbury; and a monument, by L. F. Roubiliac, to the memory of William Stafford, LL.D. Commissary of the Archdeaconry of Richmond, who died in 1753, at the age of 75 years. In this monument, as in the character of the deceased,* Charity is the prominent figure, and she is seen displaying her bounty to an aged woman and two children. Dr. Whitaker mentions the discovery of a Danish Cross in the church yard of St. Mary some years ago, and deduces from it the very probable conjecture, that there existed a church here in the reign of Canute. The cross is of large dimensions, adorned with entangled scrolls, and bears an original semi-Runic inscription of proper names, which the learned antiquary reads thus:—Ubbo, Aikfreth, Reafan, Siffred, and Druimond.

From an inquisition taken at Lancaster, in the period of the commonwealth, dated the 17th of June, 1650, it appears that the tithes of the parish church of St. Mary were then farmed at £510 per annum;—it also appears from this document that not only Fulwood, which is stated to be 16 miles distant, but Toxteth-park also, at the distance of 50 miles, was then returned as in the parish of Lancaster; and that there were within this parish the chapels of Wyersdale, Admarsh, Overton, Toxteth, Stalmine, Gressingham, and Caton:† since that period, Bleasdale and Poulton have become chapelries of Lancaster, but Toxteth-park, being extra-parochial, is no longer of the number. Two other chapels have been added in the town of Lancaster, St. John's, situated in Green Area, consecrated in 1755, and decorated with a steeple, designed by Mr. Harrison in 1784, and erected by the benefaction of the late Thomas Bowes, of Lancaster, gent.; and St. Ann's, situated in Moor-lane, erected by the Rev. Robert Houseman, the present minister, in 1796, who by a regular grant of nomination, has the appointment to the chapel, for the unexpired term of 22 years from 1824; after which the living will pass into the patronage of the vicar. The parish of Lancaster has unhappily been disturbed for a number of years by a succession of law suits, between the incumbent and his parishioners, but arrangements are now making to commute the tithes for an annual rent, varying with the price of corn, on the principle of the Act obtained by the neighbouring parish of St. Michael's, in the year 1815.

The privilege of Sanctuary existed here from the period of the erection of the Church of St. Mary's, till the final extinction of that pernicious immunity. The extent of this privilege varied in different places and in different ages. The words of William the Conqueror, in the charter given to Battle Abbey, were these.—“If any thief or murderer, or person guilty of any other crime, fly for fear of death, and come to this church, let him have no harm, but be freely dismissed.”^a

* This public benefactor bequeathed upwards of £3000 to particular charities, enumerated in his will, and the residue of his personal property, amounting to £9,390 he directed to be applied to charitable purposes by his executors, by means of which 58 small livings in the counties of Lancaster, York, and Chester, as well as in Westmoreland and Cumberland, were augmented, most of them with the sum of £100, on condition that the inhabitants, incumbent, or others, would contribute £100, in order to obtain the augmentation of Queen Anne's Bounty, by which accumulative operation each £100 was quadrupled.

† There is now a chapel at Littleddale, under Caton.

This was also the extent of the ancient privilege in other places. After the Reformation, persons who had committed murder, rape, arson, or robbery, either in a dwelling-house or on the highway, were not allowed to become refugees, and the Asyla in this county were confined to Lancaster and Manchester, by the statute 32 Henry VIII. cap. xii. In the 38th year of the same reign, Manchester was allowed to transport all its sanctuary-men to Chester, and from that time it ceased to form a "Centre of Sinners;"^a but Lancaster continued to afford sanctuary to delinquents till the 1st of James I. when the privilege was finally abolished in every part of the kingdom by the authority of parliament.

The DISSENTING PLACES OF WORSHIP in this town are—the Friends' Meeting-house, in Meeting-house-lane, erected in 1677, during the life time of George Fox; the Independent Chapel, adjoining to High-street, erected in 1772; the Presbyterian Chapel, in St. Nicholas-street, rebuilt in 1786; the Roman Catholic Chapel, in Dalton-square, erected in 1798, and ornamented with a beautiful altar-piece, executed in Chiaro Scuro, by Mr. Baker, of Wakefield; the Methodist Chapel, in Sulyard-street, erected in 1806, on the site of the ancient burying ground of the Dominican Friars; the Baptists have a licensed Meeting-room in Friar-street, established in 1810; and the Primitive Methodists have a Room in Fleet-street, opened on the 2d of Feb. 1823.

The principal places of religious worship in the town have Sunday Schools attached to them, and the number of Children receiving gratuitous instruction in Lancaster are as follows:—

The Grammar School of Lancaster is an ancient and valuable institution, but the date of its foundation is unknown. It is mentioned as belonging to the corporation as early as the year 1495. In 1682, it had sunk into decay, but in that year it was rebuilt by the contributions of the corporation and a number of individual inhabitants, and made capable of accommodating 120 scholars. Mr. Carlisle says, that James Pilkington, Bishop of Durham, at that time subscribed liberally to this new erection; but that is impossible—Bishop Pilkington founded and endowed Rivington School, in the year 1566, and though the Bishops of Durham are long-lived prelates, they have none of them yet attained the patriarchal age of 180 years.† A piece of land anciently called The Deep Carr, but now "The Usher's Meadow," probably granted originally by one of the Dukes of Lancaster, is appropriated to the increase of the usher's salary. Till the month of July, in the year 1824, the sons of the freemen of Lancaster were educated without charge, except that a gratuity was expected to be given at Shrovetide; and the sons of non-freemen paid 7s. 6d. per quarter while under the second master, and 10s. 6d. while under the head master; but at that time the constitution of this Grammar School underwent an important change, and the corporation, as trustees of the school, in council assembled, ordered—That the annual gratuity, called cock-pennies, to the master and usher should be discontinued; and that in lieu thereof all boys under the care of the usher should pay 10s. per quarter; that the boys on the two lowest benches under the head master, should pay 15s. each per quarter; and the boys on the upper benches, 20s. per quarter. That the head master's salary should be increased from £70 to £110 per annum; that the usher should have guaranteed to him by the head master, the sum of £60 per annum, including the rent of the Usher's Meadow and Randal Carter's Legacy of £10 per annum, and that the head master should have the appointment of both the usher and the writing master, subject to the approbation of the corporation in council assembled. The average number of boys in the school is from 60 to 70. The head master is the Rev. John Beetham, A.M. and the usher the Rev. George Morland.

The Boys' National School, in the Green Area, is a spacious stone building, 85 feet by 45, erected by subscription, at the cost of about 1100*l.*; the first stone was laid on the 4th of June, 1817, by the Rev. John Manby, A.M. and the land was given by the corporation of Lancaster. On the 1st of November, 1817, Matthew Pyper, Esq. of Whitehaven, one of the Society of Friends, liberally endowed this school with the sum of 2,000*l.* navy five per centum annuities. Previous to the establishment of the school, for the gratuitous education of the children of the poor of all religious denominations, there existed a separate Charity School, or Blue Coat Hospital, which was established in 1770, for educating and clothing 50 boys, who were allowed 6*l.* as an apprentice fee, out of funds raised by voluntary subscription: but this charity was united with the National Society on the 4th of Dec. 1816. At present there are 340 boys receiving instruction in this institution, 30 of whom were clothed last year (1823), agreeably to the intentions of the original benefactors. The Girls' National School, in Fenton-street, was also built by subscription, on land given by John Fenton Cawthorne, Esq. M.P. for Lancaster, in 1820; it is a good stone building, with a house attached, for the residence of the mistress. About 120 girls receive instruction at this school. A small weekly collection of one penny each is made to establish a fund to supply the children with certain articles of clothing. The children are instructed in reading, writing, and household work, to fit them for useful domestic servants.

A Girls' Charity School, in High Street, was established in 1772: 60 poor girls are clothed and taught to read, write, knit, spin, and sew, out of a fund raised partly by voluntary contributions, and partly by the proceeds of their own industry. Each girl is allowed the fourth part of her earnings, which is paid to her every Christmas, and which she immediately presents to her parents or deposits in the Savings' Bank. The mistress is Mrs. Jemima Townson. This school is much noted for producing good female servants.

The Catholic Charity School, situated in Friars' Passage, was established in 1820, for educating the children of poor catholic parents; the average number of scholars is eighty.

The Societies in this place for promoting religious objects are the Auxiliary Bible Society, established in 1816, and the Ladies Association; the Church Missionary Society, established in 1814; the District Committee of the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge; and the Religious Tract Society, auxiliary to the Liverpool Tract Society.

Public Buildings The Public Buildings in Lancaster, exclusive of the Castle, the places of religious worship, and of those applied to charitable purposes, are the Town Hall, built in the year 1781, at a cost of 1300*l.*, in which there are full length portraits of Mr. Pitt, and of Lord Nelson, painted by Lonsdale, a native of Lancaster, and presented by that artist to the corporation: the Custom House, on St. George's Quay, built in 1764, with a portico and plain pediment in front, supported by four Ionic columns, fifteen feet and a half high, each of which is formed from a single stone: the Assembly Room, in Back Lane; the Theatre, in St. Leonard's Gate; and the Public Baths, in Moor Street: the Shambles is a well constructed edifice; and the New Bridge, built in 1788 by the county, at a cost of 14,000, is a substantial and elegant structure, of five equal elliptical arches, and well comports with the noble pile of warehouses which stand on St. George's Quay, lower down the river. Another erection, for the accommodation of the Judges of Assize, built under the sanction of an Act of Parliament, passed in 1824, will speedily be added to the public buildings of Lancaster, and its beauty will be enhanced in the eyes of the inhabitants by the pledge which it tacitly conveys, that the assizes shall not be removed from the county town.

Charities The principal Charities in this place are Gardyner's Charity, already described; Penny's Hospital, founded by William Penny, Esq. Alderman of Lancaster, in 1720, comprising twelve small dwellings, situated in Back Lane, affording to as many poor men each a residence, with an allowance of 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* a quarter, and a new suit of clothes every year.* Gillison's Hospital, founded in 1790, by Mrs. Anne Gillison, consists of eight houses, for the reception of eight unmarried women, each of whom has an allowance of four pounds per annum, and a new gown value 20*s.* This charity was augmented in 1823, by Mrs. Mary France, who gave to it by deed the sum of 200*l.* in three per cent. annuities.† The Dispensary, on Castle Hill, supplies the sick poor with medicine, and affords to them, gratuitously, the best medical advice and surgical assistance. This establishment has existed ever since the year 1781, and, with an expenditure of 250*l.* a year, affords relief to an average of about 1300 patients. The House of Recovery is in connection with the Dispensary, and, at a cost of about 100*l.* per annum, serves to protect the town from the spread of contagious fever.

THE LYING IN CHARITY was established about eighteen years ago; it is supported by a numerous list of annual subscribers, who for every subscription of three shillings are allowed to recommend one person as a fit object to be relieved by this charity.

THE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY is supported by the congregation of St. Ann's Chapel. It extends relief to poor women in childbed, who are allowed ten shillings at each birth; also to the industrious poor during sickness, who are relieved according to their families, and occasional donations to the old and infirm, of whatever religious denomination.

* The Mayor and Aldermen are trustees of Penny's and Gillison's Hospitals; and the Mayor and Bailiffs are trustees of Gardyner's Charity.

† The same benevolent Lady left also £100 to the Dispensary.

Lancaster Marsh is a species of freehold inheritance to eighty of the oldest resident freemen or their widows, who have the net proceeds of the rent of the Marsh, which consists of 210 acres, divided amongst them. Since the inclosure, in 1795, it yields to each freeman 4*l.* annually.* William Heysham, Esq. M. P. for the borough of Lancaster, a native of this place, but a citizen and merchant of London, bequeathed by will, dated April 22, 1725, an estate called the Greaves, in the vicinity of Lancaster, to eight poor men resident in that borough for their respective lives, vesting the patronage in the mayor, recorder, and three senior aldermen, and the trust in the body corporate. This estate is now let at the annual rent of 256*l.* which is divided quarterly amongst the eight pensioners, to whom the benefit seems to impart, not immortality indeed, but a degree of longevity which does not fall to the lot of the great body of their fellow men.

The first charter was granted by John, Earl of Morton, (afterwards A.D.1193, King John) in the 4th of Richard I. when Ranulf de Blundeville was the Lord Paramount, and which, among other privileges, secured to the burgesses of Lancaster all the liberties he had granted to those of the city of Bristol. In the 23d Edward I. this borough first sent members to A.D.1294; parliament, and from that time to the 33d Edward III. Lancaster made ten distinct and separate returns. In the 37th of Edward III. the king granted his charter to the mayor and bailiffs, that all pleas and session of whatsoever justices in the county should be holden here and not elsewhere.^a From the year 1359 till the 1st Edward VI. no return was made, but in 1547 the privilege of the elective franchise was resumed, and it has been continued ever since without intermission.
The charters granted to Lancaster by John, Earl of Morton, and by Edward III. were confirmed by Richard II. Henry IV. Henry V. Henry VII. Queen Elizabeth, and James I. Charles II. extended the privileges of this charter; which were still further enlarged in the 59th of George III. The right of election is in the freemen, of whom there are about 3000; and the returning officers are the mayor and bailiffs. The corporation consists of a mayor, recorder, seven aldermen, two bailiffs, twelve capital burgesses, twelve common councilmen, and a town's clerk and clerk of the peace, whose officers and attendants are a mace bearer and two serjeants, with inferior officers. The mayor and aldermen are justices of the peace within the borough and town, and the mayor for the time being, who is elected annually, on the first Thursday after the feast day of St. Luke the Evangelist, is the coroner for the year.†

Exclusive of the Assizes and Quarter Sessions, there are certain inferior courts of local jurisdiction held here at stated periods, namely, the Wapentake Court of the Hundred of Lonsdale, for the recovery of debts under 40*s.* held on the first Wednesday in every month; the Borough Court, held every fourth Thursday, for the recovery of debts to any amount, contracted within the borough; and the General Quarterly Courts.

This borough is entitled to two weekly markets and three annual fairs by charter. The market days are on Wednesday and Saturday, the latter being the principal ; and the annual fairs begin on the first of May, on the 5th of July, and on the 10th of October ; they each continue three days ; and are all for cattle, cheese, cloth, and pedlery.

Literature and Arts.

The town is well supplied with Libraries and News-rooms ; and there is published here a weekly newspaper, established by Mr. William Minshull, on Saturday, the 20th of June, 1801, and issued every Saturday morning, under the title of the Lancaster Gazette.*

A Society for promoting the Fine Arts, by the purchase of paintings, in oil and water colours, from the pencils of the most eminent living artists, to afford the subscribers an opportunity of studying and practising from the best productions, was established here in 1820, under the designation of "The Lancaster Institution for promoting the Fine Arts." A Book Society, called "The Amicable," has existed ever since 1769, and has accumulated a good Public Library, consisting of upwards of 4000 volumes. An institution of an humbler cast, but which is likely to prove of considerable utility, was established here on the 4th of March, 1824, and opened on the 5th of July in the same year, called "The Apprentices' and Mechanics' Library," on the plan of the Liverpool institution of the same name.^a

THE SAVINGS' BANK of Lancaster, situated in Fenton-Street, was established on the 10th of January, 1823, and such has been its progress, that on the 10th of July, 1824, the number of depositors amounted to 488, and the amount of deposits to £9,487 ls. 2½d.

Commerce.

The foreign commerce of Lancaster is at present very circumscribed : the navigation of the Lune has become liable to considerable obstructions from the accumulation of sand in the channel, and the elevation in the bed of the river, called Scale-Ford,† about a quarter of a mile below the Custom House, has at all times operated as an impediment to the navigation. At length, the authorities of Lancaster have abated this obstruction by lowering the ford two feet, so that vessels of 200 tons burthen are now able to pass at spring tide without being exposed, as hitherto, to the danger of running aground. At Glasson, about five miles down the river, a spacious and safe dock was built in 1787, capable of receiving about twenty-five large merchant vessels, which discharge their cargoes by lighters ; but trade is easily repulsed by impediments, and won by facilities ; and while Liverpool, with its fine deep river, and its extensive inland navigation, communicating with all the most populous parts of Lancashire, and with the other great manufacturing counties of Staffordshire, Warwickshire, and Yorkshire, opens its spacious docks, on the very margin of the town, to the commerce of the world, Lancaster must be satisfied with the many other advantages which it enjoys, without aspiring to the rank of a first rate commercial place. A return from the office of the Inspector General of the Custom House in London, prepared for the use of this work, and inserted at page 120 of the first volume, exhibits the total number of ships, British and Foreign, with their tonnage and men, that have entered inwards and cleared outwards, with their cargoes, for the last nine years in the ports of Lancashire ; and serves to shew the relative extent of the trade of this and the other ports of the county. The foreign trade of Lancaster is chiefly to America and the West Indies, and the exports consist principally of mahogany furniture, provisions, saddlery, shoes, candles, soap, &c. with some woollen, linen, and cotton goods. The imports are sugar, coffee, rum, cotton, mahogany, dye-woods, hemp, and flax.

The colonial trade of this port is of no very remote origin; in the beginning of the last century it had no existence, and it appears from the commissioners' books, that the first Lancaster ship which sailed for the West Indies quitted the Lune in the year 1721. The first act for improving the navigation of the port of Lancaster was obtained in 1750, in which year the present quay was erected. From that period to the end of the 18th century commerce made considerable advances, and in the year 1799 the following were the Custom House returns:—

The failure of five of the principal mercantile houses in that year gave a severe shock to public credit in this place, and the foreign trade has very much diminished since that period, as will be seen from the following official returns:—

At present commerce appears to be reviving in this place, and during the first six months of the year 1824, no fewer than 267 vessels entered inwards with cargoes, of which 231 were coasters.

The Lune which has already been described,^a has a good salmon fishery, extending from a place called Denny Beck, to Scaleford, a little below St. George's quay, in Lancaster. This fishery, before the Reformation, belonged from time immemorial to the Abbot and Convent of Farness, subject to a claim to a third draught, in part of the fishery called St. Mary Pot, and to an alternate draught in all the other parts of it, claimed and established by the Prior of the church of St. Mary in Lancaster, in virtue of an ancient deed made by the Abbot of Furness. Upon the surrender and dissolution of the monasteries, Beaumont fishery, by which name it was called, became vested in the crown, and was subsequently held by Francis Tunstall, George Southworth, and John Ayliffe successively, as lessees at the annual rent of £12. In the 4th year of Charles I. it passed by patent along with other possessions, under the great seal of the duchy of Lancaster, to Edward Ditchfield, Richard Dalton, and others, and to their heirs and assigns. It afterwards passed by demise to Thomas Foster and others, and in the year 1759 it was conveyed, in fee, by purchase to the ancestor of R. F. Bradshaw, Esq. of Halton-hall, who now enjoys the exclusive right of the fishery of the Lune, on the payment of a fee farm rent of £12 a year, to the representatives of George (Monk) Duke of Albemarle, to whom the possessions, of which this fishery forms a part, were granted by Charles II. soon after the restoration. In addition to the salmon taken in the Lune, which is held in high estimation, this river yields considerable quantities of trout; and large shoals of salmon-fry or smelts come down the river in April and May, and serve to swell the value of the fishery, which is of the estimated worth of £500 a year.

The manufactures of Lancaster are mahogany furniture and upholstery, for which this place has long been famous, cordage, sail-cloth, cotton goods, worsted yarn, candles, &c. and there are two ship-yards, where vessels of considerable size, and of excellent construction, are built. Formerly sail cloth was manufactured to a considerable extent in Lancaster, and in the five years preceding the year 1800, there were made in this place 25,000 pieces a year, but the manufacture of this fabric has diminished with the decrease of commerce, and the quantity at present produced does not exceed 20 pieces a week. There are three cotton mills in the parish, at which upwards of 7,000 lbs. of yarn are spun weekly, and 290 power looms are at work in two of these establishments. There is also a mill employed in spinning fine worsted yarn for bombasins, which produces about 5,000 lbs. weekly.

Canal

The Lancaster canal is one of the great public works of this county, and if it does not materially add to the commerce of the town of Lancaster, it does very essentially advance the interests of the inhabitants of the extensive line of country through which it is conducted, by opening a communication between the ample mines of coal along the southern branch of the canal in the hundreds of Leyland, Salford, and West Derby, and the inexhaustible quarries of lime at its northern extremity, of both which articles, before this canal was cut, all the intermediate country was in great want. The original act for making and maintaining this canal was obtained, as already stated, in the 32d George III.^a and gave the company a power of raising 414,000*l.* in shares. The second act, passed in 33d George III.^b empowered the company to make and complete another branch from Galgate to Glasson Dock. A third act, enabling the company to raise 200,000*l.* additional, in shares, was passed in the 39th and 40th George III.^c A fourth act passed in the 47th George III. enabling the company to make railways; and a fifth, in the 59th George III.^d to alter and amend the former acts.

v. i. p. 126.

The original design of crossing the Ribble by an aqueduct,^e and of ascending from the south bank of that river through a series of locks to a height of 230 feet, till it gained its elevation, was postponed on account of the expense, and an iron railway, five miles in extent, from the canal basin at Preston to near Clayton Green, substituted in its place. When the company determined to adopt this measure, the town of Preston was considered inferior to Lancaster, and did not contain more than 10,000 inhabitants, but the population of Preston has now increased to upwards of 30,000, and the consumption of coal for steam engines and other purposes has increased in a double ratio to the population. The trouble and expense of unloading and reloading the ponderous materials conveyed on this canal involve great loss and delay, and it is presumed that the most advantageous appropriation of capital that could be made upon any part of the undertaking would be to sweep away the railroad entirely, and carry an aqueduct over the Ribble; in short, to accomplish the original design, though it should be at a cost of £100,000 for the aqueduct, and half that sum for the canal, in addition to the £600,000 already expended.^a The collateral branch to form a direct communication with the sea, conformable to the provision of 33d George III. from the dock at Glasson, at the mouth of the Lune, to Galgate, in the township of Ellel, is now in progress, and an expectation exists that when this work is completed, a considerable number of vessels will send forward their cargoes from hence to Preston and into the interior of the county, without navigating the Ribble. Last year the gross receipts of this canal amounted to £28,874, and there is little doubt but that, in the very first whole year after the alteration here recommended, of removing the railway and substituting an aqueduct in its stead, should have been completed, the income would be swelled to £40,000. The average income of the Lancaster canal, from 1802 to 1806, both inclusive, was £8430; and the following statement for the last seventeen years will show the improving condition of its revenue, even under the existing disadvantages:—

The aqueduct bridge for conveying the canal over the Lune, about a mile to the north-east of Lancaster, presents a fine exhibition of the triumph of art. This stupendous fabric was reared at an expense of £48,000, under the direction of the late John Rennie, Esq. civil engineer, and consists of five semi-circular arches, each seventy feet span, springing from rusticated piers, which rest on a flooring of timber, supported by piles driven thirty feet deep. This aqueduct is said to have one important defect, viz. that it is too shallow for deeply laden vessels.

Although Lancaster and the neighbourhood are extremely favourable to long life, the progress of population is unusually slow: according to a return made in 1783, the number of inhabitants amounted at that time to 8,584; in 1801 they had increased to 9,030, in 1811 to 9,247, and in 1821 to 10,144. The spirit of improvement has not been very active here for many years, but an act for lighting, watching, cleansing, paving, and improving the streets of Lancaster received the royal assent on the 28th of May, 1824, and its benefits are expected to be manifested in the establishment of gas works and other useful public institutions.

Here, as in most other places, the parochial assessments have been considerably reduced within the last seven years, as will be seen from the following statement of expenditure for the maintenance of the poor in the township of Lancaster:—

County Election.

The elections of knights of the shire are held here. The freeholders entitled to vote for county members are very numerous, and have increased amazingly within the present century. There are no authentic documents from which their numbers can be ascertained, and in the event of a contest for the representation of the county, it is supposed that great confusion must arise from the difficulty of proving the qualifications of the smaller freeholders. The production of title deeds in the booths is out of the question; and as to the land tax assessment books, they would be comparatively of little use, since the redemption acts. Until some new enactment is made upon this subject, it will be impossible for any candidate to form a correct estimate of his own strength, and a contested election for this county would be a mere lottery. The number of freeholders who voted at the great contested election in Yorkshire in 1807 was 23,007, and it is not unlikely that an equal number would now be found in the county of Lancaster. All freeholders are entitled to vote for coroners as well as for county members, but the coroner's elections are held at Preston, and the whole county has on several occasions been thrown into a state of ferment by a contest for this office, which might very properly, if the legislature so willed it, be decided by the freeholders of each hundred, as to the coroner acting within that hundred. At present, however, all the coroners are appointed by the whole county, and for the whole county, and each of them may act for any part of it without regard to the division or hundred.

The township of SKERTON is separated from Lancaster by the Lune; it is a considerable village, chiefly occupied by persons out of trade, and by farmers and their labourers. The township contains 719 acres, customary measure, at the rate of seven yards to the perch, exclusive of the wastes. There is an endowed Free School for the gratuitous education of 20 poor children; and 70 children receive instruction in the Sunday school. There is no place of public worship in this township; but the inhabitants have the free use of a number of pews in the parish church of Lancaster, which are known by the word SKERTON being inscribed on brass plates affixed to the pew doors. The parochial expenditure of this township amounts to about 500*l.* a-year; in the year 1823 the sum was 484*l.*

ASHTON is from three to four miles due south of Lancaster, and is principally remarkable as the ancient seat of the De Courcys, out of which family it passed, by marriage, to John de Coupland, the hero of Neville Cross. In 1454 it was possessed by Sir Robert Lawrence, Knight, whose son, Sir James, was knighted by Lord Stanley, at Hutton-field, in Scotland; from the Lawrences the manor and hall passed to the Ratcliffs through the Butlers, and from them by further marriage to Sir Gilbert Gerard, ancestor of Lord Gerard of Bromley; and Elizabeth, only daughter and heiress of Digby Lord Gerard, having married James, Earl of Arran, created fourth Duke of Hamilton in 1679, it thus came into the present ducal family. Ashton-hall is an oblong building, flanked by a projecting wing to the east, and a noble square tower with angular turrets to the west. The walls are probably of the 14th century, but successive alterations and additions have scarcely left any evidence of the origin of the baronial residence, except those exhibited in the tower. There is here some of the finest sylvan park scenery in the county.

The township of THURNHAM contains two objects worthy of attention—the modern harbour of Lancaster, called Glasson Dock, capable of containing 25 large merchantmen; and the ancient ruins of Cocker-sand Abbey. This abbey is briefly described with the other monastic institutions of Lancashire.^a Like the priory of Cartmel, this abbey was restored after its dissolution; but unlike that priory, two years after it was refounded it was again dissolved, and the site leased by the crown to John and Robert Gardner, of Pilling, at a rent of 73*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* per annum; and five years afterwards it was granted to John Kitchen, of Hatfield, Herts, Esq. afterwards of Pilling-hall.^b The marriage of Robert Dalton, of Thurnham, to Anne, the eldest daughter of the grantee, brought the possession into the Dalton family, and John Dalton, of Thurnham-hall, Esq. is the present proprietor. The ruin is situated on a neck of land which projects into the sea, on the sands of Cocker. Originally the buildings of this monastery covered nearly an acre of land, but of these the octagonal chapter-house, 30 feet in diameter, used for the burial place of the Daltons, alone remains. The roof by which it is covered is supported by a single massive column rising in the centre, and the walls are two feet and a half in thickness.

The Royal Forests of Wyersdale, Quernmoor, Bleasdale, Myerscough, and Fulwood, are all within the parish of Lancaster. Wyersdale Forest, which takes its name from the river, was well described by Camden in his time, as “a solitary and dismal place;” but the hand of cultivation has improved this region amazingly, and of the twenty thousand acres, of which the forest consists, a considerable portion is now inclosed and made applicable either to pasturage or to agricultural purposes. Quernmoor Forest, adjoining to Wyersdale northward, contains 3000 acres of inclosed land, in addition to the extensive wastes. Bleasdale Forest is co-extensive with the township of that name, and contains about 8000 acres, of which a large part is now inclosed. Myerscough Forest skirts the great north road from Preston to Lancaster, and is fourteen miles from the parish town; it consists of about 2200 acres, principally in cultivation. Fulwood Forest, which is within three miles of Preston, was anciently a very extensive tract, but it is now all inclosed. The race ground is included in the allotment made to the king in right of his Duchy of Lancaster, and Lord Stanley, who previously had a grant of the herbage of the moor, enjoys that allotment for life.

The county of Lancaster is famed for its Forests, which may be divided into two portions—those in the ancient honour of Lancaster, subject soon after the conquest to Roger de Poitou; and those in the great fee of Clitheroe, subject at the same period to the family of de Lacy. The forests in the honour of Lancaster are chiefly within the modern parish of that name, and have just been enumerated; the forests in the Clitheroe fee are those of Bowland and Blackburnshire, the latter comprehending Pendle, Trawden, Accrington, and Rossendale. After the marriage of Alice de Lacy with Thomas de Lancaster, they all passed into one family under the general designation of Foresta de Lancaster. During the commonwealth the four forests of Blackburnshire, together with the rents, royalties, and profits of the Halmot Courts, were sold by the authority of parliament for the sum of £6153 16s. 1d. to Adam Baynes, Esq. of Knowstrop,^a in the West-Riding of Yorkshire, the representative of the borough of Leeds, in parliament, and the only person who has ever filled that office. The privileged wild inhabitants of the forests of Lancashire have now disappeared; those of the forest of Bowland survived all their race, but in the year 1805 the last herd of wild deer in this forest was destroyed.

CATON, an extensive township in the parish of Lancaster, stands on the southern bank of the Lune, at the point where the scenery becomes highly beautiful and picturesque. Mr. Gray, the poet, in his letter to Dr. Wharton, thus describes it:—"The scene opens just three miles from Lancaster (on the way to Settle.) To see the view in perfection you must go into a field on the left. Here Ingleborough, behind a variety of lesser mountains, makes the back ground of the prospect: on each hand, up the middle distance, rise two sloping hills; the left clothed with thick woods, the right with variegated rock and herbage: between them in the richest of valleys, the Lune serpentine for many a mile, and comes forth ample and clear, through a well-wooded and richly-pastured fore-ground. Every feature, which constitutes a perfect landscape of the extensive sort, is here not only holdly marked, but also in its best position." An ancient Roman way passed through the vale of Caton; and a Miliarium, or mile-stone, six feet in height, was found in the channel of the Artle-beck rivulet some years ago, with a mutilated Latin inscription, and the numerals IIIII. plainly denoting its use. A relic belonging also to Roman times was found in the bed of the Fisher-beck, inscribed with the following consonants:—

P. R. S. V. R. Y. P. R. F. C. T. M. N.

Persevere ye perfect men,
Ever keep these precepts ten.

There are here several manufacturing concerns, which afford employment to a considerable number of the inhabitants. Formerly the cotton mills were worked principally by apprentices, many of whom were brought from distant parishes, and formed a little colony; but this mode of working mills is seldom found to answer, and free hands, as they are called, are now generally preferred. Littledale, which comprehends one-fourth part of the township of Caton, has a tolerably good bed of coal running through it, and the mountainous part of the district yields a considerable supply of slate. Anciently Littledale was parcel of the manor of Hornby, and the principal family mansion within it called The Cragg, was granted by the first Lord Monteagle to Richard Baines, his Lordship's standard bearer, for his heroic conduct in the battle of Flodden Field. There is still on this estate a field called Flodden, which the venerable standard bearer so named from its similarity to the field from whence his fortunes and his honours sprang. In 1752, the inhabitants of this hamlet, owing to their distance from Caton church, erected and endowed an episcopal chapel, to which they presented the incumbent; but on the last vacancy, the Vicar of Lancaster entered a caveat against this nomination; the present incumbent, the Rev. Rowland Bowstead, was collated by the Bishop of Chester, and, from the example of Astley chapel, in the parish of Leigh,^a it is probable that the patronage of the curacy will in future be in the Vicar of Lancaster.*

Leigh.

The township of FULLWOOD, though in the midst of the Preston townships, and only about three miles from that town, is in the parish of Lancaster, so that the inhabitants cannot legally intermarry except at the parish church of Lancaster, which is at a distance of 20 miles from their dwellings. It is unfortunate that this evil was not remedied when the common was inclosed a few years ago, as the site of a chapel yard, and an allotment for the minister, might have been reserved probably with the consent of all parties.

The parish of Lancaster, though inferior in wealth and population to several of the southern parishes, is superior to them all in the dignity of its ancient family, and in the station it holds as the capital of the county. From a variety of causes this place never has been, and probably never will be, either a great commercial, or a principal manufacturing station—the want of fuel will prevent the latter, and the difficulties of the navigation of the Lune will operate as a permanent bar to the former. Nor perhaps is it to be wished; in a county like this, a few retreats from the bustle of active life are necessary for those who wish for a species of retirement without the seclusion of a village. Preston formerly afforded such a retreat, but that town is now immersed in trade, and Lancaster, though not much resorted to, is almost the only remaining place within the limits of the palatinate, where the gentry of the old school can congregate, without seeing themselves outstripped by a new race, grown rich and powerful through the natural consequences of a successful industry. The humbler classes in this place are not exposed to the vicissitudes to which the labourers in the manufacturing districts are subject. In times of prosperity they have less money at their disposal, but when trade is depressed they are more free from the pressure of that penury which a small income and expensive habits never fail to produce. The periodical return of the Assizes infuses into this town a considerable degree of animation, accompanied by an accession of wealth, and there is sufficient trade and commerce at other times to keep up a moderate and profitable circulation.

* The Lancaster Tithe Commutation Bill, referred to at page 19, passed into a law in June, 1824, and this act comprehends all the townships and chapelries in the parish, with the exception of Caton, Fullwood, Gressingham, Preesall with Hackensall, and Stabbin with Stanall.

LEIGH.

LEIGH is a Parish and Market Town, in the Hundred of West-Derby, in the Deanery of Warrington, and in the Archdeaconry of Chester; 7 miles SE. of Wigan, 13 miles W. of Manchester, $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. of Bolton, 24 miles N.E. of Liverpool, and 197 miles from London. This parish contains six townships, including two chapelries, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821, and the estimated annual rental of all the lands, messuages, and other buildings of each township in the parish :—

Of the 3,541 families in this parish, 186 are employed chiefly in agriculture; 3,213 in trade, manufactures, and handicraft; and the remaining 142 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed.

The division of the townships of Pennington and Westleigh takes place in the middle of the town of Leigh, the market place being in the former and the church in the latter township, which anciently gave its name to the parish, as in 23 Henry VI. the Austin canons of Erdbury Priory, in Warwickshire (having obtained the royal licence to buy lands, &c. to the value of C. marks) purchased the church of "Westleigh,"* from William Lord Lovell, and in 24 Henry VI. had letters patent, "pro Eccl' de Westlegh approprianda."† The present abbreviated name, Leigh, (which is pure Saxon, and synonymous with the English "Lea,") is pronounced by the inhabitants with a peculiar guttural sound, said to be the shibboleth of Lancashire men, and quoted in the Archæologia, as indicatory of their descent from the Cumbrian Britons. By the endowment consequent on appropriation, the vicarage-house, with some glebe, and a pension, were reserved to the vicar and his successors, with 6s. 8d.‡ to the poor yearly, and the rectory thus appropriated by the canons passed, after the dissolution, to lay proprietors, and is now in severalties. The church is an ancient stone building, dedicated to St. Mary, with tower, nave, chancel, and two side aisles, terminating in private chancels, formerly oratories of the Athertons and Tildesleys, and the living is a discharged vicarage, (certified at £32 18s. 4d. valued in the king's books at £9), of which Lord Lilford is the patron, and the Rev. Joseph Hodgkin-son the incumbent. The revenue of the living was augmented in the year 1737, by a legacy left by Henry Bolton, formerly of Leigh, of £100, the interest to be paid to the vicar for the time being, for reading prayers in the parish church two days in every week. At a subsequent period, James Starkie, the elder, one of the executors, vested the £100, for the use of the vicar of the parish for the time being, and for his successors for ever, in land in Bedford, and a house, containing nine bays of windows, in Leigh. In 1822, the building, with an additional workshop, was leased by the trustees to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the townships of Pennington, Westleigh, and Bedford, in the parish of Leigh, for a term of thirty years, at the monthly rent of twenty shillings, and for the exclusive purpose of being used as a workhouse. In the church at Leigh, as in most of the churches of this neighbourhood, there are tablets recording the numerous charitable donations and bequests bestowed by different individuals, and belonging to the various townships, which serve at once to preserve the remembrance of the claims, and to remind the congregation that charity is an essential part of religion. In addition to the church, there are in Chapels. Leigh an Independent chapel, called Bethesda, built in 1813, at the cost of 900*l.*; a Methodist chapel, built in 1815; and a small chapel at Pennington Hall, for the followers of Baron Emanuel Swedenborg. Upwards of one thousand children receive instruction in the Sunday schools attached to the various places of public worship in the town; and the Methodist congregation here have an Auxiliary Missionary Society.

School. The Free School, situated in the Parish Church Yard, was founded and endowed in the year 1655, by Piers Ranicars, who left the sum of five pounds a year to this institution, chargeable upon certain lands in the township of Pennington. Subsequent benefactions have increased this sum to twenty-four pounds a year, and the master has a dwelling-house, rent free.

Courts. A Court Baron for the manor of Pennington is annually held here, of which Thomas Lord Lilford, Baron Lilford, of Lilford, in Northamptonshire, in right of his late lady, the heiress and representative of the Athertons, of Atherton, is the lord. A Court is also held annually for the manor of Westleigh, of which Lord Lilford and Samuel Cheetham Hilton, Esq. are the joint lords.

Markets and Fairs. The Market of Leigh is held on the Saturday, and although at one time it was likely to become obsolete, as some others of the markets in Lancashire have become, the spread of the cotton business, and the rapid increase of the population, have infused into it renewed life and vigour. There are here two annual fairs, each of two days' continuance, the first on the 24th and 25th of April, and the other on the 7th and 8th of December. Blome, in his Britannia, calls Leigh "a small market

A.D. 1672. town of mean account," and this designation continued to be applicable for nearly a hundred years afterwards, but about the middle of the last century, the local advantages of this place pointed it out as a fit station for manufactures, and the coal and lime found in the parish, with the advantages of inland navigation, all contributed to render its prosperity permanent. The lime is of the kind called by geologists magnesian limestone, but locally known by the names of Brown Lime, from its colour, and Sutton Lime, from the name of the gentleman in whose estate, at Astley, it was first found. The cement made from it sets so hard that it is impervious to water, and it is, on that account, used in the setting of vats, and for docks and drains, as well as for stuccoing houses. A branch of the Duke of Bridgewater's Canal forms a junction with the Leeds and Liverpool Canal at this place; and a packet boat, conveying passengers on the whole line from Manchester to Liverpool, passes the Canal bridge every day in the forenoon, and another, on its way from Liverpool to Manchester, passes in the afternoon, affording a regular and economical conveyance. Canal.

A public nuisance, in the form of a toll-gate, stands in the centre of the town of Leigh, which might be endured with patience when this was "a small town of mean account," but it is totally incompatible with the present trade and traffic of the place, and ought to be removed forthwith, by an arrangement between the inhabitants and the trustees of the road. Toll-bar.

This parish is entitled to rank high in the manufacturing annals of Lancashire.* It was here that the era of improvements opened; and in the year 1763-4, Thomas Highs, a reed maker by trade, constructed the first spinning jenny in his garret, in Leigh. This primitive machine was about a yard square, and gave motion to six spindles.^a But the great discovery of the place was the water-frame, invented also by Highs, in 1767, in which the roving passed through four pair of rollers to the spindle, and was drawn out to five times its original length. This invention a clock maker, of the name of Kay, residing at Warrington, who had been employed by Highs to make him a model of his machine, communicated to Richard Arkwright,^b then a poor barber, but afterwards elevated to the honour of knighthood. By the application of the principle of the rollers in roving and spinning cotton, Sir Richard made a large fortune, and, through the invention of the reed maker of Leigh, the county of Lancaster has attained its present manufacturing eminence. Highs does not appear to have derived any great personal advantage from his inventions; nor has Leigh ever ranked very high as a manufacturing town. Formerly the part of the population employed in the cotton business were principally engaged in making fustians, but at present cambric muslins constitute the prevailing fabric of the place. It is mentioned, as a fact strongly indicative of the rapid increase of population here, that, in the year 1758, one beast was slaughtered at Christmas, and overstocked the market, while, in 1792, thirty-five were slaughtered at the same festive period, when the supply was not found adequate to the demand. Since the year 1792, the population has been doubled, and it is highly probable that the demand for fat oxen has experienced a corresponding increase. The quantity of land in this parish amounts to 11,969 statute acres; the soil is in general very fertile, and the dairies round the town yield fine rich cheese, which is held in deserved estimation. The milk is produced from the pasture and meadow lands, on the banks of several small streams, which flow through the parish, and unite to form the brook that skirts the western side of Chat Moss, and falls into the Mersey, near Hollins Green. Population.

The Chapelry of ASTLEY in this parish has been subject to much litigation and disquietude, owing to the construction put upon the will of Adam Mort, a gentleman, who, in consideration of the inhabitants being "very rude and ignorant in good things," founded a Chapel here, in the early part of the seventeenth century, and by his will devised to trustees a certain messuage, and lands of the yearly value Astley.

of £10, for the maintenance of a preaching minister, directing that his son, Thomas Mort, should, during his life-time, have the power of nominating and appointing Ministers, and of setting down and appointing some due course for the nomination of such Ministers after his death; but that if he should not set down such order and course, the said Minister should be elected and appointed by all the householders and heads of families in Astley, and the heirs male of Adam Mort's body, and such of his kindred as should have lands in Astley, with the advice of some godly ministers adjoining, the vote of Adam Mort's heir male to be accounted as six votes. Adam Mort, the founder, it appears, died in the year 1630, and his son Thomas having, in the first year after his father's death, by a deed dated on the 3d of August, 1631, resigned all right, title, and interest for himself and his heirs in the chapel of Astley, to John, Lord Bishop of Chester, died at a subsequent period, without setting down any order or course of appointment for future ministers. Hence violent disputes, and, on some occasions, riotous proceedings, have arisen regarding the choice of a Minister to officiate in this chapel; the householders insisting that the right of nomination is in them, and the Vicar of Leigh claiming that right. In 1760, the old chapel was taken down, and a new and enlarged one built by the land owners in its stead, when the income of the living was augmented, principally by the munificence of Mr. Froggatt, and it is now of the value of one hundred and fifty pounds per annum. On the death of the late incumbent, the Rev. Robert Barker, on the 29th of April, 1822, the Vicar made choice of the Rev. Thomas Birkett, and the parishioners of the Rev. Edward Bowman, as his successor. The chapelry became much agitated in consequence of these conflicting claims; and at the Midsummer Assizes, at Lancaster, in 1823, the matter was brought to trial in the form of an action, instituted by the householders against the Bishop of Chester, the Vicar of Leigh, and the Rev. Thomas Birkett, the clergyman who officiated at the chapel, to the exclusion of Mr. Bowman, the nominee of the parishioners. The issue to be tried was, whether the householders had exercised the right they claimed in the election of a Mr. Mawdesley, a former Minister, and thereby established a precedent; and the verdict of the Jury was in favour of the plaintiffs, subject to the opinion of the Judges of the Court of King's Bench, whether there was evidence on the trial to go to the Jury. At the sittings after Trinity term, 1824, the matter at issue was brought before the superior court, by solemn argument; and on Monday, the 26th of July, the judges gave their final judgment in favour of the Bishop of Chester and the other defendants, whereby the right of appointing the minister is declared to be in the vicar of Leigh, and not in the householders. Morley's Hall, the ancient seat of the Lelands, and once the pride of the parish, stands in the township of Astley, adjoining to Bedford, but it has long since gone to decay. The description of this mansion, as given by Leland, the royal antiquary, about the year 1536, is interesting, and discloses to us the nature of the structures occupied by the gentry of Lancashire, about the period of the Reformation:—"Morle, (in Leghe Paroche,) Mr. Lelandes Place," says the Itinerant, "is buildid, saving the fundation, of stone squarid that risith within a great Moote, a vi. foote above the water, al of tymbre after the cummune sorte of building of houses of the gentilmen for most of Lancastreshire. Ther is as much pleasur of orchardes of great varite of frute, and fair made walkes and gardines as ther is in any place of Lancastreshire.”* Morley’s Hall was sold by the Tildesleys to the Leghs of Chorley; at a subsequent period the old hall, and a moiety of the demesne, were purchased by Josiah Wilkinson, Esq. who devised it to his son, the late John Wilkinson, F. R. S. F. S. A. and the other moiety to Thomas Lyon, of Warrington. Dr. Wilkinson devised his estate in this township to Richard Marsh, Esq. of Westleigh, its present possessor; but of Morley’s Hall, once the pride of the parish, only a few fragments now remain.

In the township of ATHERTON in this parish stands a magnificent Atherton-hall, built by the Athertons, in the early part of the last century, from a plan by Gibbs, at a cost of £63,000. A vast cubical hall at the entrance gives it an air of magnificence, but detracts from the interior accommodation. The Hall has for some time been unoccupied, and it is doomed to be taken down, and the materials disposed of. This manor and the estates passed by marriage to the Guillyms, who took the name of Atherton; and on the 2d of December, in the year 1797, Henrietta Maria, daughter and heiress of the late Robert Vernon Guillym Atherton, of Atherton, by marriage with the Right Honourable Thomas Lord Lilford, transferred the possessions to that family.

CHOWBENT is a large and populous village in the township of Atherton, in the parish of Leigh. About fifty years ago the manufacture of nails was carried on to a considerable extent in this place; but owing to the American war, which checked the demand, and ruined a number of the manufacturers, the trade fell off considerably, and was partly transferred into Staffordshire; this business has, however, never been entirely extinct here; of late it has revived, and is now rather an important branch of trade. Soon after machinery was introduced so freely into the cotton business, this place became famous for manufacturing carding engines, and spinning frames; and several of the minor improvements in the construction of those machines originated with the mechanics of Chowbent. It is also said, that the first application of heat in the dressing and finishing of certain kinds of cotton fabrics was the accidental discovery of a small manufacturer in this neighbourhood. There is here an Episcopal Chapel, which formerly belonged to the Dissenters, but of which they were deprived in consequence of an election dispute, and it was consecrated by the benevolent Doctor Thomas Wilson, at one time almoner of Latham, but subsequently Bishop of Sodor and Man. To this day the chapel, which is domestic, and in the gift of Lord Lilford, remains without the jurisdiction of the diocese of Chester. There is also a Dissenting Chapel, belonging to the Unitarians, built after the Presbyterians were deprived of the old chapel. The Rev. James Woods, son of the minister ejected from Ashton in Makerfield,^a officiated here in the year 1715, when the adherents of the Pretender penetrated into Lancashire, for the purpose of wresting the sceptre from the hands of the line of Brunswick, and transferring it to the house of Stuart. The loyal zeal of the venerable puritan was in-

^a Palmer’s Calamy, v. ii. p. 353.

* A tradition prevails in the parish, that a daughter of Leylands, having formed an attachment to one of the Tildesleys, in opposition to the wishes of her father, the young lady was shut up in her room; but, having provided herself with a rope, she tied one end of it round her body and threw the other to her expecting lover, on the opposite side of the moat, when, casting herself out of the window into the water, which was thirty feet wide, he dragged her to land, and they were married before the adventure was known to the family.

flamed by this attempt to change the reigning dynasty, and, placing himself at the head of the most athletic and courageous members of his congregation, they marched to Preston, armed with implements of husbandry, and interposed an effectual barrier to the rebels at the pass of the Ribble, over Walton bridge. For this service General Woods,^a as he was afterwards humorously called, received the thanks of Generals Wills and Carpenter, and his Majesty George I. was also pleased to acknowledge his brave and loyal conduct by an honourable memorial in his favour.

Tildesley TILDESLEY is situated at the eastern extremity of the parish of Leigh, and contains 2926 statute acres. This district lies north of the new red sand-stone formation, which composes the vale of the Mersey, and abuts on the strata of coal and schistus, rising with gentle elevations, and forming the first swell of the Lancashire hills. From this circumstance it commands an extensive view to the southwards, which extends to several points in the counties of Salop and Montgomery, ranging between the Cheshire and Staffordshire hills on the left, and the more distant Clwydian mountains on the right. The township is noticed in ancient records as forming part of the Norman barony of Warrington. With respect to the local proprietors, Henry de Tildesley, mesne Lord of Tildesley, under Almeric le Boteler, (Baron of Warrington, in the time of Henry III.) was a juror for the wapentake of West Derby when the survey, called the Testa de Neville, was taken; and from him descended the Tildesleys, of Tildesley, who divided into two branches immediately before the visitation of 1567. The elder brother settled at Wardley, which had passed by marriage to his ancestors, in the time of Edward II.; and the younger brother at Morley's Hall, in Astley, by marriage with the heiress of Leyland.* This younger line retained the Tildesley estate, and four generations afterwards was represented by the celebrated royalist Sir Thomas Tildesley, of Tildesley and Morley's, Knight. In 1672, Edward Tildesley, of Morley's, Esq. son of this gallant officer, sold his paternal estate in Tildesley to Ralph Astley; and from the Astleys, and their representatives, this and other estates in Tildesley, (including the "Banks," which was heretofore the inheritance of the Andertons, of Lostock,) were conveyed to Thomas Johnson, of Bolton, gent. in 1728 and 1752. This united property, on the death of the purchaser, in 1764, descended, in consequence of the previous death of his eldest son, who had served the office of high sheriff in 1755, to his grandson, the late Thomas Johnson, Esq. who held it till 1823. The same then passed by devise, with the other family estates, to his nephew, George Ormerod, Esq. of Chorlton, in Cheshire, who uses Tildesley House as an occasional residence. During the possession of the last proprietor, the town of Tildesley Banks, built exclusively on this estate, on leases for 999 years, has risen upon land which was occupied fifty years ago by three farms only, and now contains upwards of 2500 inhabitants. This extraordinary influx of population, arising from the healthiness of the situation, and its convenience with reference to the surrounding marts of Lancashire commerce, is still continued. Four large mills, used for the cotton trade, and one for the making of machinery, employ the inhabitants at present, and others are on the point of being erected. In consequence of this sudden increase, the commissioners for erecting national churches have placed one of their fabrics at Tildesley. The architecture is in the early pointed style, from the designs of Smirke, and the building is calculated to hold 2000 persons, consisting of a nave, with chancel, and side aisles, separated from the body of the church by six pointed arches. A tower, surmounted with a spire, rising to the height of one hundred and fifty feet, is placed over the principal western entrance. The late proprietor presented the site of the church and church yard, and the present one has undertaken to give the inclosure, and the commissioners have accepted his further donation of a peal of bells, with an organ, and three painted windows, executed by Willement, in imitation of the ancient stained glass of the fifteenth century.

Near the eastern boundary of this estate is the Dam House, once the head of that portion of it called the Banks, and purchased by the Morts from the Andertons, of Lostock, in the 36th of Elizabeth, under the name of "Hope or Langley House." It has subsequently passed, with the adjacent manor of Astley, to the present proprietor, T. S. M. Froggatt, Esq. The house, an ancient building, of brick, with bay windows and gables, standing in front of the remains of a more ancient half timbered mansion, is uninhabited and falling to decay.

Beyond this, and near the verge of the parish and hundred, is Chadwick or Chaddock Hall, which, in the early part of the last century, was the seat of a family bearing that name, and passed subsequently, by sale, to Clowes, of Broughton, near Manchester. By a recent purchase it is now vested in R. H. Bradshaw, of Worsley, Esq. M. P.

On the north-west of Chadwick is the site of Garrett Hall, now a farm-house, but formerly the residence of a collateral branch of the Tildesleys, which passed, about 1656, with the daughter of Lambert Tildesley, to the Stanleys, of Eccleston, (an illegitimate branch of the house of Derby,) who were afterwards settled at Culcheth, and possessed Garrett in the last century. It subsequently passed to — Clowes, of Broughton, and is now vested in the Rev. T. Clowes, a collateral descendant from that family.

On the high ground north of Garrett is the site of Cleworth Hall, formerly the residence and property of the Parrs, of Kempnough, in Worseley, and celebrated in the annals of witchcraft and demoniacal possession,^a from events which took place there, shortly after the succession of its present line of possessors, the Starkies, of Huntroyde. The old mansion was a respectable timber building, with bay windows and gables, and was destroyed about twenty years ago.

v. l. p. 51.

All these places are in the Lower Division of Tildesley. In the higher is the hamlet of Shackerley, which is almost exclusively the property of the Shackerleys, now of Somerford, in Cheshire, who descend in the female line from a younger son of the Tildesley family, who assumed the local name about the time of Henry III. The site of the hall is marked by a moat, and continued to be the residence of the Shackerleys till the middle of the last century.

This parish exhibits a strong manifestation of the influence of the manufactures of Lancashire upon the prosperity of those districts wherein they take up their residence. For several ages the tendency of the parish of Leigh seemed towards decay; population made little progress, and the public market was passing into disuse, till the talismanic hand of trade, acting upon the local advantages of the situation, and the native energy and intelligence of the people, gave an impulse to the whole parish, which will probably remain in operation for ages yet to come.

LYTHAM.

LYTHAM, a village, township, and parish, (without any dependent township,) on the northern bank of the estuary of the Ribble, in the Hundred of Amounderness, in the Deanery of Amounderness, and in the Archdeaconry of Richmond; 6 miles SW. of Kirkham, 7 miles S. of Poulton in the Fylde, 8 miles S. of Blackpool, (by the road, and 10 miles S.W. by the sands,) 7 miles N. of Southport (by sea), and 12 miles W. of Preston.

This parish contains 246 houses, occupied by 258 families, consisting of 1292 persons. Of these families, 75 are employed chiefly in agriculture, 55 in trade, fishing, or handicraft, and the remaining 128 are either engaged in professional pursuits, or unemployed. The rental of the parish, according to the estimate for the county rates, amounts to £6945.

This is one of the most popular sea-bathing places in the county of Lancaster; and if the company is less fashionable than at Blackpool, it is generally more numerous, and usually very respectable. Of the early history of Lytham little is known, except that Richard Fitz-Roger, in the latter part of the reign of King Richard I. founded and endowed a monastic cell here, to the honour of St. Mary and St. Cuthbert, for a Prior and certain Benedictine Monks under the church of Durham.^a Tanner's Notitia. King John granted a charter of confirmation; and in the 22d of Henry VI. the prior, under the authority of a bull from Rome, assumed a certain degree of independence of the church of Durham. Henry VIII. by dissolving this, along with the other smaller monastic institutions, rendered the bull nugatory; and his daughter Mary, in the second year of her reign, granted the cell and the two carucates of land attached to it, to Sir Thomas Holcroft, as parcel of the possession of Durham.^b See v. i. p. 45. The knightly family of the Cliftons inherit the possessions of the Holcrofts; and the lordship of the manor of Lytham, as well as the fee simple of all the lands in the township, is vested in them. Lytham Hall is built in front of the monastery, and the servants' hall, kitchens, and out-offices, are composed of renovated vestiges of that dilapidated edifice. The present hall, which is a fit residence for one of the great landed proprietors of the county, was built by the late Thomas Clifton, Esq. between the years 1757 and 1764, from a design of that eminent architect, John Carr, Esq. of York. The period of the erection of the church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is not well ascertained, but it is allowed to be posterior to the dissolution of the cell of St. Mary and St. Cuthbert. Within this edifice there are several monuments to the memory of the Clifton family, but none earlier than the beginning of the eighteenth century. The living is a perpetual curacy, of the certified value of 22*l.* in the patronage of John Clifton, Esq. and the Rev. Robert Lister is the incumbent. The church is now too small for the congregation in the bathing season, but the inconvenience is capable of an easy remedy by the erection of a gallery on the south side. A handsome Catholic chapel adjoins to Lytham Hall, and the members of the leading family in the parish, the occupants of the hall, are of that religious denomination. The parish enjoys the advantage of an endowed Free School, for the education of the children of the poor, which endowment arises out of the rental of a quantity of land, of the value of about 100*l.* a year, purchased with the accumulated pious bequests of the charitable, during the last century, and vested in seventeen trustees. Out of this revenue, 60*l.* is paid yearly to the master, and three pounds each to two mistresses for the education of ten girls. There is also a Sunday school at Lytham, wherein from eighty to one hundred children receive instruction.

This parish contains some excellent arable land to the north east of the village, though a large tract of sandy common, scarcely capable of affording pasturage for rabbits, extends for some miles to the north-west, along the banks of the Irish channel. The population has made some progress during the last twenty years, but it has not increased at the rate of more than two per cent. per annum. From the mildness of the air, and the local advantages of the situation, marine villas would doubtless spring up here in considerable numbers, at the cost of the respectable families in the neighbourhood, if the tenure of the land was placed upon a more liberal system. The term for which building leases are granted has, indeed, been lately extended from forty to sixty years, but few persons are disposed to build, so long as they are restrained from selling or even letting their houses without the previous consent of the landlord, or his agent, and rendered subject to all the obsolete reservations and covenants of the old feudal life-leases.

In the midst of all the improvements in Lancashire, Lytham is by no means stationary. The lord of the soil has lately made a sacrifice of one of the principal inns (the Wheat Sheaf), and an extensive range of old buildings, upon the site of which, after leaving a spacious opening from the Clifton's Arms Hotel to the beach, several new houses, and a billiard room, have been just erected at his expense. The greater part of the beach has also been levelled, and an esplanade, or public walk, is forming along the crescent-shaped beach, commanding a fine view of the ample estuary of the Ribble, at the point of its discharge into the Irish sea, and of the opposite coast, with its churches, mansions, and hills. A library and news-room are much wanted here; and it may not be judged impertinent to mention, that bathing machines are wanted with four wheels instead of two, to obviate the necessity of turning in the water.

In prosperous times, like the present, there is every year a great influx of strangers during the bathing season, and three coaches from Preston serve daily to bring in the contributions of company, and to return those who have laid in their stock of health for the ensuing year. Accommodation is to be had here of all sorts, from the highest to the most humble, regulated by the charge, and by other circumstances. At the Clifton Arms, the charge for board and lodging, exclusive of wine and liquors, is seven shillings per day in private, and six shillings in public; at the Commercial Inn the charge is 5s. 6d.; and the Ship Inn 3s. 6d. per day for board and lodgings.

The houses on the beach let off furnished to families at from a guinea and a half to three guineas per week, and in the back part of the village lodgings may be had as low as 4s. 6d. per week. The general rule for a cottage is 10s. 6d. per week for each bed; but in this, as in all the other affairs of trade, the price is partly regulated by the proportion which the demand bears to the supply, and varies according to the seasons.

It is not within the province of this work to descant upon the benefits of sea-bathing, but it may be allowed us to say, that those who have made the trial of a trip to Lytham two or three years, seldom fail to repeat the experiment at the appointed season.

Lytham is not to be viewed merely as a watering-place; it has other, and, what are generally considered, higher pretensions. So long as the Ribble remains in its present state, the large vessels visiting the port must discharge their cargoes at Lytham, or Freckleton, into lighters, which bring the corn up to Preston Marsh. The pool in Lytham, situated, about a mile east of the village, is nearly formed into a natural dock, large enough to contain a fleet of men of war, and there is a small graving dock at its northern extremity, where vessels are built and repaired. This pool belongs to Mr. Clifton, and at the summer assizes at Lancaster in 1824, he established his claim for anchorage on vessels loading and unloading there. If the proprietor would either sell or let the pool for a long term of years, with a certain portion of the adjoining lands for wharfs and other conveniences, great advantage would result to his other estates, as well as to the parish of Lytham, and to the public generally. A canal from Salwick, to pass by Kirkham at its southern extremity, might lock down to Lytham pool, and give this place the advantage of inland in addition to its sea and river navigation.

HISTORY OF MANCHESTER.

CHAPTER I.

Station held by Manchester amongst the Principal Towns of England—Era of the Aboriginal Inhabitants—of the Romans—of the Saxons—State of Manchester at the Conquest—Lords and Barons of Manchester—The Grisleys—Charters and Grants—the De la Warres—the Wests—Manor Purchased by John Lacye, Esq.—by Sir Nicholas Mosley—The Arms of Manchester.

MANCHESTER, as it is one of the most ancient of the towns of Lancashire, so it is one of the most important towns in the kingdom. London, Liverpool, and Bristol may claim a superiority over this place as seats of foreign commerce, but, as a manufacturing station, Manchester is unquestionably the metropolis of the British empire. Ever since the provident care of our Third Edward introduced the manufactures of Flanders into this island, Manchester has held a deservedly high rank, and every successive century has witnessed a progressive increase, till at length, of the thirty-two million pounds' worth of cotton goods produced annually in Great Britain, twenty million pounds' worth, at least, of this great staple are either actually manufactured here, or pass through this market. In point of population Manchester ranks the second town in the British dominions; and in opulence it probably holds the same rank.

The ancient history of this town is involved in considerable obscurity. According to Mr. Whitaker, the learned historian of the place, who has written two full-sized quarto volumes, entitled "The History of Manchester," without descending lower than the Anglo-Saxon period, "the parish of Manchester was originally a wild unfrequented tract of woodland, inhabited merely by the boar, the bull, and the wolf, and traversed only by the hunters of the neighbouring country. It was afterwards selected by the aboriginal inhabitants for the seat of a fort in the woods, and the rude outlines of the town were sketched about fifty years before the Christian era within the compass of Castlefield. In the first visit of the Romans to Britain, under Julius Cæsar,^a it does not appear that the invaders penetrated so far north as Lancashire, and it was not till the time of Agricola^b that Manchester passed under the Roman yoke. At that period, according to the authority just quoted, the tumults of war were introduced amongst the peaceable inhabitants, and Manchester was occupied by levies from the banks of the Tiber. A Roman station was constructed in the Castlefield, near the confluence of the Medlock with the Irwell; and another establishment, about a mile to the north of it, at the confluence of the Irk with the same river, received a colony of inhabitants, who made it their summer residence. Four minor fortresses were placed for their protection within, and the woodlands were intersected with Roman roads, all ranging at right angles, through the thickets, and converging to a point in the Castle-field. One thing more completed the great change in this transformed region; a regular town was now for the first time laid out in the parish; and a neighbouring baron and his clan were settled within it. Under the auspices of the Roman genius in Britain, that principle of population, which had faintly quickened before at the heart of the woodlands, now became active and vigorous; civility, literature, and politeness followed, and christianity closed the rear."

It must be admitted, that, in the delineation of this picture, the vivacity of the author's imagination has somewhat overstepped the sobriety of history; but it is also true, that the concurrent testimony of facts and of records tends materially to bear out his representations, and to stamp upon the principal of them the character of truth. That this was an important Roman station—the Mancunium of the itineraries, is proved by the remains which still exist; that the town received a considerable impulse from the presence of the conquerors of the world, is not to be doubted; and that the light of Christianity then began to beam upon this country, and upon this town, is an incontestible historical fact, though the honour of having introduced the Christian dispensation to England belongs, in no degree, to the Roman legions. That our author has frequently thrown the reins upon his fancy is not to be denied, and it is matter of regret for the character of his history, that he has not drawn, with more distinctness, the line between well authenticated facts and events which are highly probable, but of which, in the nature of things, he could not possess any positive evidence. In this particular he has adhered too closely to the example set him by certain classical historians.

The Saxon times followed the Roman. "A tribe of idolatrous savages," says our author, "hastens from the shores of Germany. Ruin marks their advance. Ignorance, incivility, and barbarism attend upon them, and the fate of Manchester approaches." These observations are much too general. To the Saxon period we owe many of our best institutions. The Romans kept aloof from the people. The Saxons identified themselves with the nation. It was during the Saxon era that the principles of free government first developed themselves in Britain: it was by them that the wittena-gemote or ancient parliament of England was instituted; that the constitutional control of the subject over the ministers of the crown was advanced; and that the principle upon which the house of Stuart lost, and the house of Brunswick acquired, the title to the throne, was established. The common, or unwritten law, which composes so large a portion of our criminal jurisprudence, was organized and completed during the existence of the Saxon dynasty;* the righteous institutions of Alfred and of the Confessor are daily acted upon in our English courts; and to the former of these monarchs we are indebted for that master-piece of judicial polity, the subdivision of England into tithings, hundreds, and counties. To him we owe the institution of Courts Baron, of Hundred and County Courts, of Courts Leet, and of the Sheriffs' Tourns—in a word, the whole system of what may be called our local judicature. Above all, we owe to the Saxons the trial by jury—a privilege so singularly and judiciously constituted, that it has maintained its ground for twelve centuries, and triumphed alike over the hostility of monarchs and of mobs. It may be admitted, then, that Manchester declined during the heptarchy; but that, in the five centuries which succeeded the departure of the Romans, "ignorance, incivility, and barbarism" advanced, either in England generally, or in Lancashire in particular, is contrary to the testimony of all history.

But to descend to some particulars. A sketch of the history of the ancient British, of the Roman, and of the Saxon history of Manchester, will carry us through a period of a thousand years, and bring us down to the Norman Conquest.

And first of the Britons. Antiquarians are at issue whether Manchester, in Lancashire, or Mancester, in Warwickshire, is the ancient Cair Manergurd, or Maunguid, mentioned in the most ancient copies of Nennius, as one of the twenty-eight cities of ancient Britain. Both Camden and Archbishop Usher incline to the latter place, though Camden admits that Mancester was but a small village in his time, consisting of about a dozen mean houses, and that it had no monuments of antiquity, saving an ancient mount, called Oldbury. Mr. Whitaker, without entering into this inquiry, says, that, although there were inhabitants here 500 years before the birth of Christ, the first rude station of Mancenion was formed half a century before the Christian era, about the time of Cæsar's expedition, and in consequence of an irruption of the Britons of Cheshire against the Sistuntians. The dimensions of this station are still discernible; it filled the whole area of the present Castle-field, except the low swampy part of it, to the west, and was nearly thirteen acres in extent. Terminated by the windings of the Medlock, near its confluence with the Irwell on the S.S.E. and S.W. it was bounded on the E. by a fosse, on the W. by the present very lofty banks, and on the north by a long and broad ditch. As to the original name, it was, according to Whitaker, called Mancenion, or the place of Tents; and, according to Stukeley, Mancastle, from the British maen, lapis, meaning a rocky soil.

The Roman era, which comes next under review, presents more facts and fewer conjectures. On the arrival of the Romans in the north of England, Mancenion fell, along with the other towns of the Brigantes, under the conquering arms of Agricola. The British fortresses of Lancashire, such as they were, speedily became Roman camps, and the name of MANCUNIAM^a was substituted for Mancenion.* "The encampments were marked out under the eye of the conqueror, and he explored for himself the estuaries and the forests."^b The Castle-field of Mancunium he chose for the Roman castrum, and occupied with its site nearly one-half the original fortress, the foundations of which, after a lapse of eighteen centuries, may still be traced. "All the indulgence that was consistent with the secure dominion of the Roman power he gave to the inhabitants; his first care was to possess the entire control over them, and his next to infuse into them a taste for literature and refinement. Under his fostering care, temples were erected, and courts of justice established. Education was given to the sons of the principal citizens; the character of the people won upon his affections; and he was more gratified with the native genius of the Britons than with the showy attainments of the Gauls. The native inhabitants no longer painted their bodies, but indulged in the luxury of dress. Their new wants increased their dependence upon the Romans, and the yoke of the conqueror wore the semblance of a silken cord."

Castrum.

The Roman castrum of Mancunium is thus described by Dr. Stukeley a century ago: "A Roman castrum was on the west side of the Roman road going from Chester by Stretford, and on the northern bank of the river Medlock. It is a small piece of level ground somewhat higher than that around it: it does not cover the whole piece, but it is a square 500 feet one way; 400 the other: nor can it be said to be ditched about; but the ground near it, for some distance, is manifestly removed into the castle and spread along its verge, not as a regular vallum, but sloping inwards; by this means the area of it is higher on the sides than in the middle, and the exterior ground is lowered around it to the foot of the castle, which is steep like the side of a vallum. Upon this edge there has been a wall quite round: the foundations of it are to be discerned almost every where*; in some places large parcels of it are left, but not above ground. Now they call it the Castle-croft. The river Medlock runs near it, but it is no security to it, as being not close enough; nor are its banks steep hereabouts, though its channel is rock, as is the whole country near. This is a quarter of a mile from the present town of Manchester. The Irwell river coming through the town runs on the west side of the castle, and there joins it."—"They call the castle the Giant's Castle. Probably there was a town on the river Medlock in Roman times: an annual fair is still kept there. The castle stands parallel to the road. The river Irk comes in here under the college walls: the castle walls were pulled down to mend and build the churches and bridges. The Roman road went across the church yard originally, and so by the common street to the bridge over the Irk, called Scotland Bridge; there it ascends the hill, and proceeds with its original direction N. E. to Rochdale. Edward the elder, by our monkish historians, is said to have built a castle here, which probably was by the church and college, and the church may be founded on its ruins. This drove the town that way; the meeting of the two rivers there, (the Irk with the Irwell) and the steep rocks upon them rendered it a convenient station for such a work."^a Mr. Whitaker carries the edifices on the site of the church and college to a higher antiquity than the monkish historians; the place which they have selected for the castle of Edward the elder, he has chosen for the Castra Æstiva or summer camp for the Romans, and he has stated with a great deal of ingenuity the considerations by which they were influenced in the rejection of others and in the choice of this precise spot, the principal of which is, that it was not exposed to the scorching beams of the summer's sun, which fell with such fervid heat upon the Castle-field. A fosse, he adds, commenced from the lofty margin of the Irk, and, supplied with water from that river, was carried through Toad-lane and, Hanging-ditch, discharging its redundant waters into the Irwell. The northern line of the houses in Cateaton-street, with all the buildings of what was then the Hanging Bridge, and which retains its name to the present day, are seated within the line of the fosse. Whether this situation was first chosen by the Romans or by their Saxon successors, as a stronghold, there is no existing evidence to decide; in either case the fosse would be necessary; and it is admitted that it became the baronial residence of the Saxon lord.

The Roman stations of Lancashire have been already enumerated;^a Stations. they were Blackrode, Ribchester, Colne, Overborough, Warrington, v. i. p. 3. See Lancaster, the Sistonian port, and Manchester. From the last mentioned of these places, situated in the direct line of communication from the south to the north of Britain on the west side of the island, Roman roads branched to six principal Roman stations, all of those roads having the Castle-field as their common centre. According to Mr. Whitaker, who with exemplary diligence and perseverance explored the Roman roads, that from Mancunium to Cambodunum^b commenced from the eastern gate of the castrum, and, taking a N. E. direction across Piccadilly and Ancoat's-lane, passed over Newton-heath by Haigh-chapel into Yorkshire; that to Eboracum^c branched off from the Cambodunum road about Ancoat's-lane, and, passing through Street Fold in Moston, by the townships of Chadderton and Royton, continued in a N. E. direction through the small halting station at Littleborough over Blackstone Edge, to the imperial city, where Severus died and Constantine was born. The road to Condate,^d like that to Cambodunum, originated from the eastern gate of the Castle-field, and, winding along the descent to the Medlock, proceeded through the village of Stretford by the ford of the Mersey to its destination: to Rigodunum^e the way was by the Condate road, for a mile at least; then, taking the line of Throstle-nest, it passed over the Irwell at the place which gave the original name to Old Trafford, and by the Hope estate to Blackrode: to Veratinum^f the road must have issued out of that which led to Rigodunum, about the end of Hodgeline, and, having passed Eccles, ranged through Barton to Warrington. The way to Rerigonium^g commenced at the N. W. gate of the castrum, and, passing across Quay-street, advanced nearly parallel with Deansgate, by the old church yard, to Hunt's-bank, crossed the Irk, and then proceeded along Strangeway's-lane, over Kersall-moor, to Ribchester. In addition to these, there were several smaller roads, called Vicinal-ways, from Mancunium, but the above were the principal.

The Roman cohort stationed at Mancunium was, it appears, Cohors Prima Frisinorum, the first which was raised among the natives of Friesland. The number of this legionary corps was upwards of 700 infantry, and it was, doubtless, supported by a number of cavalry. In Aldport, a district which encompasses the Castle-field on three sides, several Roman antiquities have been discovered. Anciently, the term port signified in the Teutonic a walled or enclosed city, as applied to English towns, and the chief magistrate, as at Preston in this county, was called the Portgreeve, but this was a Saxon and not a Roman officer. The name of Aldport, we are therefore inclined to think, was rather given after the departure of the Romans than before their arrival, as Mr. Whitaker erroneously imagines. That the Romans occupied Aldport, though not then bearing that name, is sufficiently proved, and Camden, in his Britannia, mentions two Roman inscriptions on stones dug up in this district: the first of these is thus expressed—

In 1612, a stone, twenty-eight inches high, fifteen broad, and eleven inches in thickness, forming part of a votive altar dedicated to Fortune by Senecianius, a commander in the 6th Roman Legion, was found under the root of a tree in the Medlock, (and afterwards in Lady Bland's garden,) with this inscription :—

TRICI.

TIVS E LEG VI: VICT.

This Legion, surnamed Victrix, was stationed at York during the residence of Severus in that city, and the arm of a silver votive statue of Valerius Rufus, which had probably been broken off and lost on the march of the troops between York and Manchester, was found near Littleborough in the year 1793. Dr. Stukely mentions a gold Otho, and a large Roman ring of gold, found here. In the bank of the Castrum were found about 1765-6 a number of Roman urns, wrought earthen vessels, a fibula, and several coins, with a Roman lachrymatory of black glass, half filled with tears; without the vallum several urns and vessels, one inscribed ADVOCISI on its outer limb, were found, and other coins and urns have been since discovered. A celt, found in Manchester, is shown in the College Museum; and a Roman bulla of gold was dug up in deepening the channel for the Duke's canal, close to the second lock of the Irwell. Mr. Whitaker, who mentions this fine piece of antiquity, and says that it was deposited in the Leverian Museum, exhibits what he calls a Roman sword, but Dr. Horsley pronounces it to be English. In 1771, the basement story of several inferior buildings, manifestly Roman, with some Roman coins, was discovered on the banks of the Medlock, at the south-eastern and south-western points of the station in Castle-field, where the offices stood;^a and a Roman mound is still visible at Broughton in this parish.

All the trades required for supplying the wants of the inhabitants and of the garrison, prevailed in Mancunium during the occupation of the Romans, and, as a prime requisite, a water mill was erected upon the rocky channel of the Medlock, below the station and the town, on a site which has for many ages been called Knot Mill. A Commune Furnum, or Common Bakehouse, was early introduced into Mancunium, and continued for ages to claim the exclusive privilege of baking the bread of the inhabitants. In an early age the fleece of the sheep was manufactured into drapery, and afforded clothing both for the military classes and for the cultivators of the soil; but no record is left to show whether Manchester was amongst the manufacturing towns of the Romans. Money was undoubtedly coined at York in this early period of British history, and Manchester is also supposed to have had its mint. The religion of the inhabitants was at that time a species of Druidical Paganism,^b but, before the departure of the Romans, Christian missionaries, glowing with the zeal of the early churches, and setting at nought all worldly considerations, visited this island for the purpose of introducing the light of the gospel. The religion of the pantheon, however, continued the popular faith till about five hundred years after the arrival of the Romans. Time has swept away all their temples, and the antiquary looks in vain for any remains of their sanctuaries or the images of their gods. After a residence of four hundred years in Britain, the declining fortunes of Rome obliged the Legionaries to relinquish many of the distant conquests; the Frisian Cohort quitted Manchester, and the native inhabitants were once more left to their own resources.

The third epoch of the early history of Manchester now opens upon us. Rendered effeminate by the long residence of the Roman conqueror amongst them, and exposed, particularly in the northern parts of the kingdom, to the hostile incursion of the Picts and the Scots, who scaled the wall of Severus, and pushed their hostile hordes into Lancashire, a panic seized the native inhabitants of Britain. Under the influence of despair, they made a short but ineffectual effort, to expel the invader; and, finding themselves incapable of contending with their enemies, or of stemming the tide of barbarism by which they were overwhelmed, they besought the Romans to return to their protection, and the terms of their petition to Aetius are sufficiently indicative of the horrors of their situation—" To Aetius, third Consul, the groans of the Britons—The Barbarians drive us to the sea, the sea drives "us back to the Barbarians. Between these two, two sorts of "death arise—we are drowned or we are massacred." This doleful lamentation had no effect; Rome was too much absorbed in her own cares to attend to the distress of others; and the Britons, in the extremity of their distress, called in the Saxons to their aid. These mercenaries were not slow to obey the summons. Hengist and Horsa, at the head of 1600 troops, partly Angles and partly of the other German tribes, landed in Britain,^a and, having expelled the invaders, advanced a claim to the country they had contributed to save. The perfidy of the Saxons, who had occupied the castle of Manchester, and other strong-holds, roused the resentment of the Britons; and king Arthur, a name so celebrated in the annals of patriotism and of romance, was amongst the most gallant of their adversaries. The battles he fought, and the victories he achieved on the banks of the Douglas, are recorded by Nennius, and a tradition has existed for twelve centuries, to the effect, that Sir Lancelot du Lake, one of the knights of king Arthur, slew in single combat Sir Tarquine, the giant occupant of the castle of Manchester, and liberated sixty-four British knights, whom the tyrant had conquered, and shut up in the recesses of his castle. Neither the heroic self-devotion of king Arthur, nor the chivalrous deeds of his knights of the Round Table, were sufficient to expel the invaders. Their dominion continued to extend itself, and in the year 586 Britain had become essentially Anglo-Saxon. The castle on the Medlock soon received another Saxon lord; the name of Mancunium was changed to Mancastle, and hence the name Manchester.

The time had now arrived when Woden, with the whole race of inferior deities, was doomed to be consigned to "the owls and to the bats;" the light of the gospel had dawned feebly upon Britain in the time of Constantius and Constantine, and through the preaching of Paulinus, the Roman missionary, sent forth by Gregory I. Manchester became Christian. The parish was soon after formed, and a parish church,* dedicated to Parish.

St. Michael, was erected in Aldport. The increase of the town soon rendered another church necessary, and St. Mary's, which is supposed to have stood at the top of St. Marysgate. completed the Saxon ecclesiastical establishment of Manchester. The deaneries of Manchester and Warrington were established at the time when the parishes were formed, and the county of Lancaster was assigned to the diocese of York. The deanery gave name to Deansgate; much of the property here was church land, and one portion of it is still called the parsonage, and another college land.

Camden's Brit. III. 376. The wars between the Saxons and the Danes raged principally in the North of England, and Manchester was exposed to its full share of their horrors. It is admitted by the highest antiquarian authority, that a gallant stand was made here against the invaders, though it is on the same authority asserted, that their valour administered to the pride of their posterity, who from hence called the place The City of Men, or wished to derive its name from that proud combination of terms. From the most authentic records, it appears that Edward the Elder re-edified the town in the year 920,^a and it is highly probable, that it extended at that time from the confluence of the Medlock to the confluence of the Irk with the Irwell—in other terms from the Castle-field to the College, and that Deans-gate and St. Mary's-gate formed the principal streets. In addition to the mill near the Roman Castrum, another was built on the banks of the Irk, where Cateaton-street now stands, and gave the name to Old Millgate, which is to be classed amongst the ancient parts of the town. The markets were held at Smithy-door, and Aldport; and the wakes were celebrated on St. Michael's and St. Mary's days, the former of them along the course of Aldport-lane, and the latter in the area of Acres-field, though it was rebuilt under the act of 1776. The ingenious author of the History of Manchester has exhibited a plan of the town at this time, which may not be far from correct: at a much more recent period Manchester consisted of little more than a market-place, two mills, three or four streets, skirted by some large fields, and the adjacent hamlets of Ancoats and Collyhurst; and even now Castle-field, Camp-field, Dole-field, Parsonage-field, and Acres-field, with the site of three or four large ancient pools, form the ground plan of a large portion of modern Manchester.

Manor. According to Mr. Whitaker, Manchester was formed into a manor before it was made a parish, and the baronial residence of the Saxon Lord was erected upon the ground where stood the summer camp of the Romans, hence distinguished in old records as Baron's-yard and Baron's-hall;^b but on these points there is, we think, much reason for doubt: Salford, with its dependencies, was a manor and royal possession in Saxon times; the Domesday record renders this fact incontestible; but there is not in that document a single tittle of evidence to show that Manchester then existed as a manor, and the probability is, that it is of Norman and not of Saxon creation. In Hollingworth's MS. in the College Library, there is a passage in these words, which has been partially erased:— “Certainly at, if not by the conquest, and for some hundreds of “ years after it, Manchester was in a servile and low condition.”
Dr. Stukeley says, “I look upon Manchester to be no ancient town!
“and even the hundred is denominated from Saltford, the village on the “other side of the bridge, therefore older; but Manchester is a better “situation, as higher.”^d How the Doctor, after the general admission of antiquaries, that Manchester is the Mancunium of Antoninus, could say he looks upon this place to be no ancient town, it is not easy to con-

ture Ancient it unquestionably is, but that it fell into decay during the heptarchy, and that Salford had the ascendancy at the period of the conquest, is highly probable, not to say morally certain. About the year 900, Salford, the Saxon settlement on the opposite bank of the Irwell, a royal possession, had risen to sufficient importance to impart its name to an extensive district, comprising a hundred townships, and over which it was the borough or watch tower.

On these subjects, Hollingworth says—^a “ About anno 890, Ælfred or Alured, first divided England into counties, sayth Ignatius of Crowland, and appointed certaine custodes or keepers of the kingdome, to suppress outrages in the county, and hee also divided the sayd counties into centuries or hundreds, and certaine courts were by him, or some other after him, appointed to bee kept in some town and place within the hundred, which some time was a place of good note, as Salford, neare Manchester now is, (though I cannot find any ancient name of it, or other monument of its antiquity,) and sometimes very obscure, as (West) Derby in Lancashire, Bulkeley in Cheshire, and Normans Cross in Huntingdonshire, where the hundred, (sayth Speed) takes its name from a Crosse above Stilton, where, in former ages, they mustered their people. Hence also hundreds or wapentakes are sometimes denominated from beacons, hills, &c. Manchester certainly did not give name to the hundred, whether because it was then a city, (as the story of those times calls it,) and noe citys that I know of doe give names to the hundreds, having (probably) government within themselves; or because it was sore defaced and almost ruined; or because Salford was then immediately in the king’s hands, as also it hath continued till very lately, I leave to the judgment of the reader.”

“ About anno 920, Edward, King first of the West Saxons, and afterwards of the Mercians, sent into the kingdom of the Northumbers an army of Mercians, that they should revivify, sayth Roger Hoveden, the city of Manchester, and place valiant souldiers in it; or (as Fabian expresseth it,) this noble Prince Edward, about the 20th yeare of his reigne, was chosen by the King of Scots and Cumbreys, to be their lord and patron. Hee repayed the city of Manchester, that sore was defaced withe the warre of the Danes; after w^{ch} and other notable deedes by this puissant prince finished, this noble man died and was interred in the Monastery of St. Swithen, in Winchester. Manchester was a frontier towne, betweene the Mercians, w^{ch} inhabited Cheshire, Derbishere, and the Northumbers, which inhabited Lancash^e, Yorksh^e, and in their warres and mutuall incursions was sometimes possessed by the Mercians, sometimes by the Northumbrians. It was anciently a burrough. Now with the Saxons, a burrough was the same with a city, as St Henry Spelman observes in his Glossary, though afterward those principall townes which were episcopal sees, did engrosse the name of cities, and the rest were called burroughs. Manchester also found burgesses, as that accurate exact lawyer, Sir Humphrey Davenport, Lord Chiefe Baron of his Ma^{ties} Exchequer, and others, have asserted. The ancient houses thereof are in ould deedes called Burgagia, and the owners of them doe hould in burgage-tenure, or soccage-tenure within a burrough. By what meanes it lost its power and priviledge hath bin conjectured by some learned men, but not cleered by any that I know of. Certainly at, if not by the conquest, and some hundreds of yeers after, it was in a servile and low condition.”

William, the Conqueror, soon after the conquest, gave to Roger de Poitou all that land or province lying between the rivers of Ribble and Mersey, (which land or province in Domesday Book is not described with the title of Lancaster, but under Yorkshire or Cheshire) concerning which there is an old prophecy :—

“ When all England is aloft, “ Weel are they that are in Christ's Croft, “ And where should Christ's Croft be,
 “ But between Ribble and Mersey.”

The devastation made by the Danes in the North of England, was aggravated by the Normans, and this division of the kingdom was subjected to the cruel inflictions and merciless visitation of the Conqueror. In his book of judicial record,^a Salford, as has been already observed, is returned as a royal possession, but Manchester, in that survey, is neither described as a manor, the seat of a castle, nor the possession of a baron. The terms are :—

IN SALFORD HUNDRED—

To reward the devotion of his followers, William the Conqueror bestowed upon them, with a lavish hand, the landed possessions of the Saxons, and Rogerius Pictavensis, as he is usually stiled in the Domesday Survey, in addition to his other possessions, held a large portion of the land between the Mersey and the Ribble. To Nigellus, a Norman Knight, Roger granted eighteen carucates and a half of land, within Salford hundred. The defection of the baron did not shake the validity of his grants; for when the property reverted to the crown, Manchester^b was still held by the knight, and it appears probable that this part of his fee was soon after erected into a manor.

The family of GRESLET, as they are styled in the Domesday Survey, or Gresley, or Gressy, as they are designated in the Battle Roll Catalogue,^c of Hasting's Abbey, came over with the Conqueror, and held possessions in the hundred of Blackburn on the same tenure as those held by Nigellus in Salford hundred.^d The name of Albert de Gresley appears as a witness to a charter granted to our Lady Mary of Lancaster, about 1100, and he doubtless is the Alberto Greslet of the Domesday Book. The members of this family were distinguished benefactors of the church. Albert gave to the church at Manchester four bovata or oxgangs of land in free almoigne of his own demesne; and Robert, his son, was the founder of Swinehead Abbey, in Lincolnshire,^e A.D. 1134, to which religious house he gave his mills on the Irk, which are now vested in the free grammar school at Manchester.

By an alliance of marriage between Albert de Gresley, son of Robert, and Maud, co-heiress of Wm. Fitz-Nigel, Baron of Halton and Widnes, the manor of Manchester came into the family of the Gresleys, and this

* By a misconception of this passage, the term manor, (manerium) has been applied to Manchester, but Salford hundred is obviously meant, as is shown by the words “ vel hundretum ” which follow, as well as by the magnitude of its contents.

ALBERT was the First Baron of Manchester. ALBERT, his son, was the second ; and he was succeeded by ROBERT DE GRESLEY. The name of this patriotic baron ranks high in the annals of his country, and is found in the list of peers who repaired to London to demand from King John the laws of Edward the Confessor, and the rights and privileges contained in the charter of Henry I.^a After an arduous struggle the barons prevailed, and Magna Charta was signed by the king in the Field of Runnemedede. John survived this concession to his country but a single year, and was succeeded by Henry III. then in his nonage. The noble baron, to promote the interests of his good town of Manchester, besought the regency to grant an annual fair to the inhabitants, (held in Acres Field,) on the eve and feast of St. Matthew, and purchased the temporary franchise at the price of a palfrey. The document granting this privilege, in Norman Latin, is lodged in the town's chest, and is thus expressed :—

Anno Regni Regis Hen. Tertii 6to. M. 3.

Lancastria. { Robertus Greslei dat Domino Regi unum Palfredum pro habenda. una. feria. usque ad etatem Domini Regis singulis annis apud Manerium suum de Maincestre per duos dies duratura, scilicet in vigilia Sancti Mathai Apostoli et ipso die Sancti Mathai nisi feria illa &c. et mandatum est Vicecomiti Lancastrie quod capiat &c.—Teste Huberto &c. apud Leukenor XI. die Augusti.

On the king attaining his majority, the baron renewed his application ; on his petition the charter, which was before only temporary, was now made permanent, and the time for the continuance of the fair extended to three days. The charter is in these terms :^b—

Anno Regni Regis Hen. Tertii undecimo, M. 4.

Pro Roberto Greslay. { H REX &c. Salutem sciatis nos concessisse et hac presenti carta nostra confirmasse Roberto Greslay quod ipse et hæredes sui habeant in perpetuum unam feriam apud Manerium suum de Maincestra singulis annis per tres dies duraturam videlicet in vigilia et in die et in crastina Sancti Mathai Apostoli ita tamen quod prædicta feria non sit ad nocumentum vicinarum feriarum ut in aliis cartis de feriis. Quare volumus et firmiter præcipimus quod prædictus Robertus et hæredes sui habeant in perpetuum prædictam feriam bene et in pace libere quiete et honorifice cum omnibus libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus ad hujusmodi feriam pertinentibus. Datum per manum Venerabilis Patris Radulphi Cicestræ Episcopi Cancellarii nostri apud Farendon nono decimo die Augusti anno Regni nostri XI.

A little before this time Ranulph de Blundeville, Earl of Chester and Lincoln, and lord of the lands between Ribble and Mersey,^c granted to Salford a charter, making it a free borough.^d This charter is substantially the same as that granted to Manchester by its lord, Thomas de Gresley, seventy years afterwards, and seems to have formed the groundwork for the Manchester charter. In addition to the grants made to Salford and Manchester by their lords, Ranulph gave an ample charter of liberties to the barons of Cheshire ; and Henry III. erected Liverpool into a borough. Indications of rising prosperity thus began to show themselves on every hand ; Magna Charta had put an end to royal exactions ; the claims of the feudal lords became less arbitrary ; the mercantile and manufacturing classes, yet in their infancy, felt the fostering influence of freedom ; and trade began to flourish the moment that property was secure.

THOMAS DE GRESLEY, the Fourth baron of Manchester, succeeded his father in 15th Henry III. and was succeeded by his grandson, THOMAS, in 8th Edward I. whose successor, in 1281, was his son,

THOMAS DE GRESLEY, the Sixth lord. The period of this lord's authority is perhaps the most important in the early history of Manchester: The year after the death of the old lord, an inquisition was made upon an extent of the manor of Manchester, on the oaths of John de Byron (an ancestor of the late Lord Byron) and Geoffrey de Bracebrigge, Knts. Geoffrey de Chatherton, David de Hulton, Alexander de Pilkington, Thomas de Eston, Robert de Sorisworth, Ellis de Lever, Richard de Radcliffe, Robert Unton, Adam de Cunclive, and Adam, son of John de Lever, in which mention is made of the profits of the Court Baron of the manor; and it is therein stated, that the rectory of Manchester was then worth 200 marks.^a This inquisition is of considerable value as a muniment of the manor, as it proves its existence before the 18th of Edward I. since which time, by the statute de Donis, no new manor can be created. The devotion of the inhabitants of Lancashire to the cause of Edward I. in his war with Scotland, and the necessity of increasing the number of men who could bear arms, under the feudal system, inclined the King and his Barons to grant those charters, which, by diminishing the number of villeins, served to augment the levies for the army; and the Baron of Manchester, desirous also, that the rights of the people should be recognized, and his own duly defined, granted to the inhabitants, "THE GREAT CHARTER OF MANCHESTER."—This document has disappeared from the town's chest; but the Latin copy of it is to be found in Aikin's Description of Forty Miles round Manchester;^b and the following is an official translation, made in the year 1657:

A COPY OF THE CHARTER OF MANCHESTER,

SIR JOHN BYRON	} KNIGHTS.	ROGER of Pilkington
RICH. BYRON		GEOFFREY of Chaderton
HENRY of Trafford		RICHARD of Moston
RICHARD of Hillton		JOHN of Prestwich and others
ADAM of Prestwich

Dated at Manchester the fourteenth day of May in the yeare of our Lord one thousand three hundred and one and in the yeare of the raigne of king Edward (sonne of king Henry) the twenty ninth.

The Baron of Manchester was honoured with the favour of his sovereign, and in 34 Edward I. was made a Knight of the Bath, by bathing and other ceremonies. This Baron, who at that period held five fees and a half in Manchester, as ancient soccage tenure, was summoned to parliament by writ, dated the 10th of March, 1307, which honour was repeated in three successive years, when the Barons conspired against Piers Gaveston. He survived the royal favourite but one year, and died in 1313, without issue.*

JOHN DE LA WARRE, having married Joan de Gresley, daughter of the fifth, and sister of the sixth Baron of Manchester, was summoned to parliament, in the 9th Edward II. Soon after the baronial possession passed from the family of Gresley to that of de la Warre, a survey was taken, from which it appears, that the value of the church living had not undergone any change since the last inquisition, as it is still estimated at 200 marks, and that it was in the presentation of the new lord of the manor, John de la Warre; that the last presented John Dewerden, who possessed the endowment of the said church, consisting of eight burgages in Maincestre, and the villages of Newton and Kirmones-hulme,† with parks, woodes, and pastures. This survey mentions also, "the mannor conteining within the precinct two acres of land, and a place of pasture without the gate, between the waters of Irk and Irwell.‡ Also the wood of Alport, which may be inclosed, and made a parke at the will of the lord,|| and which joins to the rectory of Manchester, saving that a place called Blen Orchard or Walle-green is between them." Mention is also made of "woods and moors of Turbary, belonging to Manchester," which, says Hollingworth, were so many and so large, that they were not measured, but esteemed according to the custom. This, however, we take to be an erroneous reading of the passage from the words "customary measure" being used. The original survey is written in a species of provincial Latin, and the concluding passages of it are preserved in that language in Kuerden MS.^a to the following effect:—

"There is a mill at Manchester running by the water of the Irk, value £10, at which the burgesses and all the tenants of Manchester, with the hamlets and Ardwick, Pensham, (qr. Openshagh) Crummeshall, Moston, Notehurst, (qr. Collyhurst or Nuthurst,) Getheswyk, (qr. Beswick,) and Ancotes ought to grind, paying the 16th grain, except the lord of Moston, who (hopper-free) pays the 20th grain.—And there is here a certain common oven, near the lord's court, value 6s. 8d. at which, according to custom, every burgess must bake.—A mill, at Gorton, running by the water of Gore-broke, value 40s. at which all the tenants of Gorton ought to grind.—At Kuerdly there are a water-mill and a wind-mill, value 16s. 8d. At Barton there is a mill on the Irwell, value 40s. a-year. At Heton a water-mill, value 16s. 8d."

Fo. 280

Kuerden also preserves^a an extent of the manor of Manchester, of the date of 15th Edward II. which may be thus rendered:—

* See a luminous paper by William Robert Whatton, F.A.S. "On the Armorial bearing of the town of Manchester, and on the Descent of the Baronial Family of Gresley, read before the Literary and Philosophical Society of Manchester, on the 20th of February, 1824."

† Kirkman's-hulme, i. e. Church-man's-Holm, a place about three miles S. of Manchester, consisting of lands which still belong to the church.

‡ As the college and yard now contain about two statute acres, it is probable that the manor here mentioned comprised only the house and land actually occupied by the lord, westward of Hunt's Bank, with the wastes and lands mentioned afterwards.

|| This wood is mentioned by Leland as "a ground now inclosed," and by Camden as "a park of the Earl of Derby, called Alparce—where the Medlock falls into the Irwell."

Manor of Manchester. } This court of Manchester is held every three weeks (de A.D. 1322.
 } 3 Septimanis in 3), at which the lord of Childwall, the lord $\frac{1}{2}$ of Harewood, the lord of Wittington, the lord of Pilkington and Undesworth, the lord of Burnchill, the lord of Rumsworth and Lostock, the lord of Lenton, the lord of Ashton-under-Line, the lord $\frac{1}{2}$ of Harewood, and the lord of Worthington owe suit of court, and are called judges of the court of Manchester, by ancient custom, with tol, them, infangetheif, outfangetheif; and wherein any offence, by which the peace of the lord and the bailiffs shall be broken, may be tried, at the suit of the aforesaid lord and at the suit of the parties: of which the value, in pleas, fines, and amercements, with the hallmotes of Barton, Heton, and Hamell, of Manchester, is worth 100 shillings. And the proceedings in this court are according to custom and according to the common law of England.

There is here also a portmote of the burgh of Manchester held four times a year, at which every burgess of the aforesaid borough, or his eldest son, or his wife shall come four times a year without essoin or summons.

And if it should be necessary, a laghmote may be held between any portmote for the purpose of despatching the complaints of applicants, and in which portmote an inquisition ought to be held, after the manner of an assize of bread and ale.

And if any burgess fail to attend, or otherwise offend against the lord, he shall be fined to the amount of 12 pence (denarii) and not beyond, unless in the case of his having wounded any person between the ninth hour of the Sabbath day and Monday, in which case he shall give to the lord 20 shillings for his offence.

If any burgess shall sell his burgage departing from the town, he shall give to the lord 40 (shillings) as a fixed fine, and after his death his wife shall hold her husband's burgage so long as she may choose to live unmarried.

And the lord shall have weapons, to the use of which every burgess shall be accustomed whilst he lives, and he ought not to plead in any other place for a contract made within this lordship, nor should he be prosecuted in any other place, unless in case of felony, when he might be tried, by appealing, in the court of the aforesaid lord.

And the value of the said portmotes, with the laghmotes, in fines, &c. is 13s. 4d.

There is also a market held here every Saturday, and a fair held, (which lasts) from the eve of St. Matthew the apostle till the morrow of the said feast, through three whole days, which is worth in toll, stallage, &c. £6 13s. 4d.

In Kuerden's MS. amongst the list of rights and privileges claimed by various towns and boroughs in Lancashire, there is a document in Latin (sans date), relating to Manchester, to the following effect:—

Quarto

Manchester. } THOMAS WEST, Soldier, claims for the family of de la Warre the } town of Manchester, that it shall be a free burgh and market town; that they shall take an Assize of Bread and Beer, and shall punish the victuallers who sell their commodities contrary to the measure established at the Assize; that they shall have fees as well on every seventh day as on the market day, both in the town and its suburbs, and in the hamlets of the said Manchester, viz. the village of Ashton in Salfordshire, Withington, Heaton Norris, Barton by Eccles, Halton, Holton with Halwall, and Pilkington; with power of infangetheif, and trying cases of breach of the peace, and of weif;* also of punishing, by the executioner, thefts of merchandize, and by the pillory and whipping. They also claim a fair to be held on the eve-day, and morrow of St. Matthew; and free warren.

A claim on behalf of Salford, made by the Boroughreeve and Burgesses, follows; which may be thus translated:—

Salford. } The Boroughreeve and Burgesses of Salford claim an exemption from the-} loneo (toll), and the right of electing a Boroughreeve every year. When any burgess dies, his heir shall have or do no other relief ("rel:" relevamen, Spelman, a species of feudal service), except in this manner; arms, viz. a sword, bow, or spear—and when any burgess dies, his spouse shall remain in the house with his heir, and shall have all things necessary so long as she shall continue unmarried; and when she marries, she shall retire without dowry.

According to Hollingworth, the Manor-house of Manchester stood in or near the place where the college now stands, and was called the Baron's court, or Baron's yard; the place was also called Baron's hall, as the neighbouring bank, now called Hunt's bank, had then the name of Hunt's hall; the parsonage house was near to the field, called the parsonage field, and stood on the site on which the house, No. 296, in Deansgate now stands. A few years ago the parsonage, which is now pulled down, was occupied by a baker, and one of its principal apartments, ornamented with the royal arms and supporters of Henry VIII. was used as a depository for the fuel with which he heated his oven!

1346. JOHN DE LA WARRE, baron of Manchester, the noble occupant
 * 1 Rapin, sion of the army commanded by the Black Prince,^a and contributed,
 p. 892. with a number of his gallant countrymen of the North, to achieve the victory won by England on that memorable day.

1356. His successor, THOMAS DE LA WARRE, the eighth Baron of Manchester, still more signally distinguished himself in the battle of Poitiers, and John, the French king, surrendered himself prisoner into his hands. For this distinguished service, the augmentation of a crampette and sword to the achievement borne by the Delaware family was awarded to him, and the family motto of "Jour de ma vie" has probably reference to that act of royal confidence. Roger de la Warre, his son, was also one of the heroes of Poitiers; when of age he did homage to Edward III. and had livery of all his lands. Three years after that battle, a difference arose between the officers of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and the Baron of Manchester, and the Baron in his petition to the "Thrice noble Duke" alleged, that the bailiff of his Grace had amerced and gathered amercedments upon the inhabitants of the town and manor of Manchester; on which an inquisition was made at Preston, before Thomas de Seton, and others his Justices, who upon the oaths of certain jurors returned, that the said Roger and his ancestors, time out of mind, had held the town of Manchester, not as a borough, but as a market town, and enjoyed the privileges of infangtheif,^{*} &c. This noble baron built and endowed the Collegiate Church of Manchester. In order to secure to the family the enjoyment of the living, he procured a licence from 1422. Henry V. dated on the 22d of May, in the 9th year of that monarch's reign, under the seal of the Duchy, for the appropriation of the rectory, and the formation of the college, as it was first endowed, for which 200 marks were paid into the hanaper, or exchequer. The Baron, like some of his predecessors, was a distinguished benefactor of the church, and it is recorded of him that he bestowed the value of twelve lordships upon this and other pious foundations. He was summoned to parliament as Baron of Manchester, under the name of De la Warre.

Dying without issue, the title and the lordship of Manchester descended to his brother, SIR REGINALD WEST, KNIGHT, who was summoned to parliament as Lord de la Warre, on the 5th of July, 1427, and on the 13th of July, 1428. This noble baron made a pilgrimage to Palestine by way of Rome, to pay his vows at the holy sepulchre. At his death he left issue by Eleanor his wife, daughter of Henry Earl of Northumberland (and not Joan de Gresley, as Holingworth erroneously supposes), two sons and four daughters. Richard, his eldest son and successor, was a staunch Lancastrian in the Wars of the Roses; in 1460 he retired to the Tower, along with Lord Scales and others, and was a party to the attack made upon the citizens from that fortress, by the troops of Queen Margaret^a. His eldest son and successor, Thomas Lord De la Warre, co-operated with the Stanleys in the battle of Bosworth field, and was so great a favourite with Henry VII. that he bestowed upon him part of the possessions of John Howard, Duke of Norfolk, who was slain on that memorable day.

THOMAS WEST, LORD DE LA WARRE, his successor, took an active part in the Reformation, and was one of the barons who subscribed the declaration to Pope Clement VII. intimating that his supremacy in England would not be longer acknowledged, if he did not comply with the request of Henry VIII. for a divorce from Queen Catherine. He died on the 25th of September, having been called to divers parliaments by writ of summons^a. This baron, having no children, brought up his nephew, William West, as his heir; but William, impatient to enjoy the honours and possessions, prepared poison to despatch his benefactor. The murderous intention being discovered, parliament passed a law disabling the ingrate from succeeding his uncle or from holding any other dignity.

In the reign of Elizabeth, however, WILLIAM was called to parliament by writ of summons, and was the first lord by new creation. This William, while the title was in abeyance, claimed a right to appoint, of his own authority, the Boroughreeve of Manchester, and his steward chose John Gee. The town resisted this claim as an infringement of the charter,^b granted by Thomas de Gresley, the fourth Baron of Manchester, and the burgesses, in the exercise of their rights, chose Robert Langley to the office. The contest became warm; but in the midst of it, the baronial claimant sold the manor on the 15th of May, 1579, with all its rights and privileges, to JOHN LACYE, of London, clothworker, for 3000*l*. teen years afterwards, this opulent citizen re-sold the manor to SIR NICHOLAS MOSLEY, Knight, for 3500*l*.: and from that time to the present the manor of Manchester has been enjoyed by the Mosley family. Though a citizen of London, Sir Nicholas Mosley was a native of Manchester. In addition to the manor, he purchased several large estates in the neighbourhood, and built the Hough End (generally called the Old Hall) or Housend, near Chorlton, upon a place where a tenement, occupied by his father, had stood, and in which his son, the new Lord of Manchester, was born. This hall became the family seat for several generations, but it was finally abandoned for Rolleston, in Staffordshire, where Sir Oswald Mosley, Bart. the existing representative of the family, and the present proprietor of the manor, now resides.

^b See v. ii. p. 68.

Having sketched with a rapid, though it is hoped with an accurate hand, the succession of the lords of Manchester, from the conquest to the period when the manor became vested in the present family, we shall conclude our first chapter by observing that the Manchester Arms are—Gules, three Bendlets enhanced; Or. The Arms of the Byrons, Lords of Rochdale, are Argent three Bendlets enhanced, Gules, and the similarity has been attributed to the service of the Lords of that Manor to the superior Lords of Manchester; this, however, is a mere hypothesis, not only unsupported by facts, but contrary to the conclusive evidence of “the Book of Judicial Verdict,”^c from which it appears that Rochdale was a manor at the period of the conquest, in possession of Gamel, a Thane,^d or Saxon Lord, who held one of the twenty-one Berewicks or Manors within the hundred of Salford.

II.

IT has been remarked, that the history of Manchester from the beginning of the 15th to the middle of the 17th century is almost a blank; but this observation is wholly unfounded. The subjects for history within these two hundred and fifty years are, when duly explored, very abundant, and the topographer who is ambitious to do justice to his subject, and whose limits are circumscribed, will feel more perplexity from the redundancy, than from the deficiency, of his materials. Two local public institutions, both of them deservedly celebrated, owe their origin to this period—the Collegiate Church and the Free Grammar School; and Manchester will be found to have participated more largely in the affairs of the Reformation, than any other place in the county of Lancaster. Here the germs of trade and manufactures first took root in the north-west part of England, about the year 1330; and, though seated far from the centre of the county, Manchester was accustomed to take the lead in, and generally to give the tone to, all the great public concerns in this division of the kingdom.

founded.

The Collegiate Church, it has been already observed, was founded by Thomas West, Lord De la Warre, in the year 1422. The royal licence for the foundation is dated on the 22d of May in the 9th of Henry V. and sets forth—"That as the venerable father in Christ, Thomas, Bishop of Durham, John Henege, Nicholas Motte, incumbent of the church of Swinehead, Richard Lambard, lately incumbent of the church of Hotham, and Richard Firth, hold the manor of Manchester with its appurtenances, together with the advowson of the church of Manchester, by gift and feoffment, of Thomas de la Warre, clerk, the king, of his special favour, and in consideration of two hundred marks paid to him into the Hanaper Court, has granted, and given permission that they may erect, or cause to be erected, by him to whom it belongs, the said church of Manchester into a collegiate church, and that in and belonging to the said church they may be able to make, found, and establish a certain college, with one master, or warden, and as many fellows and other ministers, as shall seem good to the said bishop, John, Nicholas, Richard, and Richard, and to the said Thomas de la Warre." The ecclesiastical establishment fixed upon subsequently by the feoffees under this foundation was one warden, eight fellows, four clerks, and six choristers; and it was ordained that divine service shall be celebrated in the said church every day for the good health of the king, and of the bishop, and of Thomas de la Warre, and for the souls of their ancestors, and the ancestors of the said Thomas de la Warre, as also for the souls of all the faithful departed for ever; that the said master or warden and his successors shall be called for ever the master or warden of The College of the Blessed Virgin of Manchester; that the said master or warden and his successors shall be perpetually incumbents, and hold the benefices, lands, tenements, and other possessions and emoluments; that they shall have a common seal; and that the said warden may either indict or be indicted, in the name of the warden of the said college. Permission is also granted to the aforesaid John, Nicholas, Richard, and Richard, to give and assign five messuages and ten acres of land, with their appurtenances, in Manchester, Gorton, and Heton, which are parcels of the said manor, and the advowson aforesaid, which are held from the king, as from the county palatine of Lancaster, to the said master or warden and his fellows of the said college, when it shall have been erected, made, founded, and established, in aid of their maintenances, and the maintenance of other ministers of the said college for ever." "But," says Dr. Fuller, "the endowment of this collegiate and parochial church were the glebe and tithes of the parsonage, which glebe was esteemed to be about 800 acres of this county measure (about half as many more as of the statute measure*) besides a considerable part of the town commonly called Deansgate, (a corruption of Dionise-gate, to whom, and to the Virgin Mary, and St. George, the church was dedicated) built upon glebe land belonging to the church. As for the tithes of the parish, they lie in two-and-thirty hamlets, wherewith the colleges were to be maintained, which were one warden and four fellows, and the integrated and incorporate rector, unto whom the parsonage was appropriated. There were also two chaplains, singing men, queristers, and organists."†

Endowment.

* Fuller's Worthies,
p. 120.

* The customary measure of Lancashire and Cheshire is a source of considerable difficulty to strangers, and it may be proper here to observe, that, while five yards and a half square constitute a pole or perch of the statute acre, there are seven yards to the pole in the Lancashire, and eight in the Cheshire acre. The statute acre therefore contains 4840 yards; the Lancashire acre 7840 yards; and the Cheshire acre 10,240 yards: thus calculated—

Statute Measure	.. 5½ by 5½ = 30½ by 40 =	1,210 by 4 =	4,840 Yards.
Lancashire Measure	7 by 7 = 49 by 40 =	1,960 by 4 =	7,840 ———
Cheshire Measure	.. 8 by 8 = 64 by 40 =	2,560 by 4 =	10,240 ———

If the act of the 5 George IV. cap. 74, "for ascertaining and establishing uniformity of Weights and Measures," which comes into operation on the 1st of May, 1825, (since altered to the 1st of January, 1826) be adhered to, all future perplexity on this subject will be avoided, and the statute acre will be exclusively established, not only in this county, but throughout the United Kingdom.

† Other accounts say, one warden, eight fellows, four clerks, and six choristers, but, as the licence did not prescribe the number, it might probably vary.

Church.

^b See list of prices, v. i. p. 24.

The churches of St. Mary and St. Michael, mentioned in the Domesday survey, seem to have disappeared at an early period, and the only edifice used for public worship in Manchester, at the beginning of the 15th century, was a large erection of wood, which stood on or near the site of the present collegiate church, and which in its construction resembled the booths wherein the courts leet and courts baron of the lord were held in more modern times.^a The parishioners of Manchester cheerfully concurred in the munificent design of the great feudal lord to found the collegiate church, and the arms of Stanley, Radcliffe, and Byron, emblazoned on the windows of the choir, prove that those families ranked amongst the pious benefactors. When this church was first built, the wages of an artisan were 2d. a day, and the cost of the college building is estimated at £3000, equal in value to about £50,000^b of our money. The form of the original collegiate structure was that of a cross, and the church consisted of a body and two side aisles. The choir was built by the first warden, JOHN HUNTINGTON, Bachelor in degrees, and rector of Ashton. This venerable and learned divine continued to occupy his dignified station for thirty-seven years, and lies buried in the choir, with his effigy in sacerdotal vestments, and the inscription—over his remains. The rebus of this warden is to be seen on either side of the middle arch, indicated on the left side by hunting, and on the right by a tun, which hieroglyphical quiddity, borrowed from the French, makes Hunting-ton. The windows of the church were filled with painted glass, depicting a variety of scriptural subjects; and five chapels rose up within the sacred precincts, in successive generations, now called the Radcliffe, the Stanley, the Trafford, the Byron, and the Strangers' chapels. The college, now occupied by the blue coat boys, and for the purposes of the college library, formed originally the residence of the ecclesiastics belonging to this religious establishment, and was erected at the same time with the collegiate church.

^c See v. i. p. 45.

At the period of the Reformation, this foundation shared the fate of the monastic institutions^c; in the 1st year of the reign of Edward VI. the college was dissolved, when the lands of the church passed into the hands of lay impropiators, and the house of Stanley for a time enjoyed both the possessions and the patronage of the collegiate church of Manchester. The number of wardens, from the time of the first foundation of the college in 1422 to its dissolution in 1547, was seven; namely, John Huntington, the first warden; John Booth, a zealous Lancastrian, and an ancestor of the family of the Earl of Stamford and Warrington, Ralph Langley, the founder of Oldham church; James Stanley, Bishop of Ely, (brother to the Earl of Derby) who built the chapel on the north side of the choir in which his remains repose; Robert Cliffe, in whom, and in his fellows, the treasurership of the school was vested; George West, (youngest brother of Lord de la Warre) by whom the chapel at the east end of the church, belonging first to the Byrons and now to the Chethams, was erected; and George Collier, who was the last of the wardens on the original foundation.

Plague.

At an early period, this town was visited by the plague, and in the year 1352^d a commission was granted by the Bishop of Lichfield, then the diocesan of Lancashire, for the dedication of the chapel yard at Didsbury, in the parish of Manchester, to the burial of such as died by the pestilence. Whether the influx of strangers into England at this time from the continent had introduced the prevailing malady, it is difficult to determine, but it is known that the emigrations from the Low Countries were then immense.

CHAP.
II.

At this period the Woollen Manufacture was introduced from Flanders into Great Britain, and Manchester Cottons, made from the fleece of the sheep, soon became deservedly celebrated.^a "Hitherto," says Fuller, "the English were ignorant of that art, as knowing no more what to do with their wool than the sheep that wear it, as to any artificial curious drapery; their best clothes then being no better than freizes, such was their coarseness for want of skill in making. But soon after followed a great alteration." Edward III. having married the daughter of the Earl of Hainault, sent emissaries amongst the Dutch, to tempt over their workmen, whose slavish and degraded condition made them anxious to find a better country. "Early up and late in bed," says our author, "and all day hard work and harder fare—a few herrings and mouldie cheese, they were happy to come into England, and to bring with them their mystery. Those yeomen, in whose houses they harboured, soon became gentlemen, gained great estates to themselves, and arms and worship to their estates. Here they found fuller's earth, a precious treasure, whereof England hath better than all Christendom besides. And now was the English wool improved to the highest profit, passing through so many hands, every one having a fleece of the fleece, sorters, combers, carders, spinners, weavers, fullers, dyers, pressers, packers, and these manufactures have been heightened to the highest degree of perfection." Such is the vivid picture, drawn by a divine, of the infancy and progress of that trade, which, with some alteration in the fabric, was doomed to place the manufactures of Manchester as much above those of the states of Holland in the 19th century, as the Dutch cloths were above theirs, when Edward III. ascended the throne of England.

In this reign a chapel was built by Thomas del Booth upon Salford-bridge, where prayers were offered up, as usual, for the repose of the soul of the founder. In 1505, this chapel was re-edified; but, falling afterwards into decay, it was used for upwards of a century, as a kind of dungeon for Manchester and Salford, and finally taken down in 1776.

The wars between the houses of York and Lancaster^b interrupted for a time the progress of trade; and a dreadful malady, called the sweating sickness, which prevailed here in the reigns of Henry VII. and Edward VI. had a similar influence.^c Reformation.

The change in the established religion of the country produced a vast sensation in Manchester. Here the conflict of parties, when the country is much agitated, is generally violent; on this occasion all the strong feelings of the mind were called into action; the matter at issue was not confined within the narrow limits of time, but involved also the interests of eternity, and the equality of numbers served to aggravate the fury of the contest.

While the Reformation was pending, another valuable public institution was added to the charities of Manchester, by a reverend prelate, who had himself braved the thunders of the Vatican. Hugh Oldham, Bishop of Exeter, and a native of the town whose name he bore, "considering," as the statutes say, "the bringing up of children in their adolescence, and to occupy them in good learning therein, when they should CHAP. II. come to age and virility, whereby they may better know, love, honour, and dread God and his laws; and that the liberal science, or art of grammar is the ground and foundation of all other liberal arts and sciences; and for the good mind which he did bear to the County of Lancaster, where the children had pregnant wits, but had been mostly brought up rudely and idly, and not in virtue, cunning, education, literature, and in good manners," determined to establish a Free Grammar School, and built a school-house adjoining westward to the College of Manchester, to which he gave the name of "MANCHESTER SCHOOL;" and for the endowment of this foundation he purchased a lease for sixty years of the corn and fulling mills situated on the river Irk, which mills had 400 years before contributed to endow the now tottering Abbey of Swinehead. He also caused other lands in Manchester, called the Ancoats, and a burghage in Millgate, to be disposed of, and converted to the use of this school. The property thus devised was vested in Hugh^a Bexwick, clerk, and Joanna Bexwick, widow, who, by a deed and charter under their hands,^a gave and granted the mills, lands, and tenements, with other possessions, to Lewis Pollard, Knt. Anthony Fitzherbert, Knt. William Courtney, Knt. Thomas Dennis, Knt. Alexander Radcliffe, Knt. John Byron, Knt. Edmund Trafford, (the alchemist)^b Richard Asheton (son of his coadjutor), Thurstan Tyldesley, Robert Langley, Richard Holland, of Denton, and John Reddish, of Reddish, Esqrs. for the use of the said school. The school so established was directed to be taught after the manner of the school of Banbury; and the election and choice of the master and usher were vested in the president of Corpus Christi College, Oxford; or, in default of such election within one month from the time that any vacancy may arise, in the warden of the College of Manchester. The master and usher were directed to "teach freely and indifferently every child and scholar coming to the school, of whatever county or shire, without any money or other rewards taken therefor, as cock-penny, victor-penny, potation-penny, or any other whatsoever, except only his said stipend and wages." The salary of the high master to be £10 a year, and of the usher £5 a year, to be paid quarterly. The surplus fund to be expended in exhibitions at Oxford and Cambridge for boys brought up at this school; but no scholar to receive more than £1 5s. 8d. yearly.

The warden, two feoffees, and the high master for the time, are appointed by this deed to the auditorship of the accounts, for which service they are allowed "a dinner of 5s. charges amongst them" yearly, and the sum of 3s. 4d. is allowed to the master and fellows of the college yearly for their good and safe looking after the money chest, which is to stand in the vestry! These are the principal original statutes of the Grammar School; but the alteration in the value of property since that time has wrought strange changes, and, while the neighbouring Grammar Schools of Rochdale and Middleton, from their defective foundations, have sunk into penury, though with funds originally and contemporaneously as ample as those of Manchester, this institution abounds in wealth, and enjoys the means of diffusing the most extensive benefits. Instead of £10 a year, the stipend of the high master of the Grammar School of Manchester has been advanced from time to time, till at length Jeremiah Smith, D.D. the present high master, receives £420 per annum, with a good house free of rent, taxes, and repairs; and, instead of £5, the stipend of the second master, the Rev.

Masters' Salaries.

Robinson Elsdale, A.M. is £220 per annum, with a good house cost free. The high master and the second master have each a stall in the collegiate church, over one of which is inscribed Archididascalus, and over the other Hypodidascalus.

Three assistant masters have been added successively by the trustees, namely, the high master's assistant, Rev. Nicholas Germon, A.M. whose salary is £150, with the privilege of taking boarders (which privilege is also enjoyed by both the high and second master); second master's assistant, Rev. John Johnson, whose salary is £110 a year; and the master of lower school, Rev. J. Dallas, whose salary is £100 a year. The mathematical master, resident in Dr. Smith's house, is the Rev. Daniel Green, A.B. of Cambridge, without a salary from the school estate. The income of the school, in 1814, according to the property tax returns, amounted to £2154,^a and it has since increased very considerably in amount. One principal source of revenue to this school is derived from the mills on the Irk, of which there are three—two corn mills, and a mill where woollen cloth has been fulled ever since the days of Edward III. and in which snuff and pins are also manufactured. We venture to hazard the conjecture, in passing, that the fulling mill was occupied by Martin Briam, the celebrated Manchester manufacturer; and a tradition prevails, that the munificent design of erecting a free school in Manchester originated with this opulent clothier, who directed that a part of his property should be applied to that purpose.† In the time of the civil wars, in the 17th century, Thomas Prestwich, Esq. son of Sir Thomas Prestwich, one of the commissioners of array, was the lessee of the Manchester mills, but in consequence of his active exertions in the siege of Manchester, it was directed by parliament that his lease should not be renewed, and Mr. Rigby and Mr. White were appointed by the same authority to prepare an order respecting the sequestration of the rents and revenues of the Free School according to the trust reposed in the feoffees. Till the year 1759, all the inhabitants of Manchester were required, by a right of Soke existing from time immemorial, to grind their corn, of whatever nature, at the school mills; but, owing to the increase of the town, that feudal restriction was then abolished by the authority of parliament, except as to malt, which is still required to be ground at these mills.

The property of the free school is vested in twelve trustees; and the Very Rev. Thos. Jackson Calvert, D.D. as warden of the Collegiate Church and College, is the visiter. The present school-house is a plain, but spacious building, erected in the year 1777 upon the site of the original school; it is situated near the gate of the Collegiate Church, in Long Millgate, and is ornamented in front with the bird of wisdom, the crest of the founder, carved in alto relievo.‡ The number of scholars,

† It does not appear that the property so bequeathed was ever applied to the use of the School, and how it was appropriated is unknown.

‡ In the year 1690, a juvenile rebellion, memorable in the annals of the Free School, broke out here upon some cause of discontent not now remembered. At the commencement of the campaign, the young insurgents took possession of the school to the exclusion of the masters, and, being supplied with beds and victuals, as well as with fire arms and ammunition, by some of the inhabitants, they stood a siege of a fortnight, at the expiration of which time they were reduced to an unconditional surrender.

 II. This school, it has been truly observed, is rich in university advan-Exhibi- tages: there are eleven Exhibitions for scholars from it, at any Col-tions. lege in either of the Universities, of the value of 40*l.* a year each, and the young men who have been educated here have, in turn, a claim to sixteen scholarships, called the "Somerset Scholarships," in Brazen Nose College, Oxford, and to the same number in St. John's College, Cambridge, varying in value from 18*l.* to 26*l.* per annum, in virtue of the will of Sarah, Duchess of Somerset, dated 1679, who founded the exhibitions, and directed that the scholars appointed to enjoy them should be elected, by turns, for ever, "out of Manchester School, in the county of Lancaster, and the Free Schools of Hereford and Marlborough, in the county of Wilts."

Hulme's In addition to the exhibitions already mentioned, there are others
 Exhibi- of still greater value, not strictly connected with the Free Grammar
 tions. School of Manchester, but frequently bestowed upon its scholars. William Hulme, Esq. of Kearsley, in the county of Lancaster, by his will, bequeathed certain estates in Heaton Norris, Denton, Ashton-under-Line, Reddish, Harwood, and Manchester, all in this county, to maintain as exhibitioners, "four of the poorest sort of Bachelors of Arts, taking such degree in Brazen Nose College, in Oxford, as from time to time should resolve to continue and reside there by the space of four years next after such degree taken"—to be nominated and approved of by the warden of the collegiate church of Manchester, the rectors of the parish churches of Prestwich and Bury for the time being, and their successors for ever." At the time of the testator's death, which took place in 1691, these exhibitions were of the value of 16*l.* a year; but, in the 10th George III. an act was obtained, which enabled the trustees to grant building leases of the estates for ninety-nine years, and to increase the exhibitioners to ten, whose stipends should never be less than 60*l.* nor more than 80*l.* Twenty-five years afterwards, another act passed, enabling the trustees to convey in fee or grant leases for lives or years, by which they were enabled to increase the number of exhibitioners to fifteen, and to augment the maximum stipend to 120*l.* a year. By reason of the increased value of the property, the annual proceeds in 1814 amounted to the sum of 2355*l.* 14*s.* 5*d.*^b over and above the interest

A third act was obtained in 1814, enabling the trustees to support a lecturer in divinity in the said college, with an annual salary not exceeding 150*l.*—the lecture to be called "Hulme's Divinity Lecture," and the trustees were also empowered to provide rooms and lodgings in Oxford for the exhibitioners, or to purchase or build a convenient house for their accommodation and residence there, the sum expended not to exceed 5000*l.* but no house has been built nor has any separate residence been provided. The remains of Mr. Hulme lie buried in a small chapel on the south side of the collegiate church, with an unostentatious inscription, appropriate to his character; and every year a prize, value 10*l.* in books, is given for the best oration delivered at Brazen Nose College, by one of the exhibitioners, in memory of so munificent a benefactor.

Privilege of Sanctuary.

The collegiate church at Manchester procured for this place the privileges of Asylum, in common with twenty-seven other places principally collegiate.^d The act, granting to Manchester this immunity, passed in the 32d Henry VIII. and constituted this “a place of privilege and tuition for term of lyfe to all offenders and malefactors, of whatsoever quality, kind, or nature their offences might be, for the which saide offences and crimes the peines and punishment of death should ensue by the statute laws and customes of the realme,” other than murder, rape, burglary, highway robbery, or wilfully burning any house or barn. One year’s trial was sufficient to prove that, instead of a benefit, the privilege of sanctuary was totally unfit for the meridian of Manchester, and the law of 33 Henry VIII.^a entitled “An acte touchinge the translation of sanctuary from Manchester to Westchester,” (Chester) is a curious and interesting document, illustrative not only of the consequences of sanctuary, but also of the nature of the trade and police of Manchester, at the period of the Reformation. After reciting the leading provisions of the act passed in the former year, constituting Manchester a place of sanctuary, the new act proceeds to state—“That the town of Manchester is, and hath been for a long time, a town well inhabited, and the king’s subjects well set a work in the making of cloths, as well of linen as of woollen: that the said inhabitants have obtained and come into riches and wealthy livings. That by reason of the great occupation and good character of the manufacturers, many strangers, as well of Irish as of other places within this realm, have resorted to the said town with linen yarn, wools, and other necessary wares, for making cloths, to be sold there; that they used to give credit, and trust the poor manufacturers, which were not able, and had not ready money to pay in hand for the said yarns, wools, and wares, until the cloth was made and sold; and for as much as of necessity the said linen yarn must lie without, as well in the night as in the day, continually, for the space of half a year, to whiten, before it can be made into cloth, and the woollen cloths there made must hang upon the tenters to be dried before it can be dressed; and whereas a great number of persons have been accustomed to resort to this town with cottons (woollens) to be sold; and for as much as divers light and evil disposed persons, since the making of the sanctuary statute, have of late resorted to and made their abode within the said town of Manchester, and lived in idleness, and tempted others to practise unlawful games, and have committed and done divers thefts and felonies, such as breaking into mills, and stealing of yarn from the crofts, and cloth from the tenters, as well by night as by day, to the great impoverishment of the owners, and to the destruction of the confidence formerly reposed in them by their creditors, which, if not prevented, will lead to the decay and desolation of the said town; and also for as much as the said town of Manchester is not walled, whereby the said sanctuary men can safely be kept in the night season, but that they may and do continually escape and commit sundry great robberies and felonies; and also for as much as there is neither mayor, sheriff, nor bailiff, nor other head officer or officers, within the said town, other than a steward liege officer under the chief lord of the said town, nor yet any prison house, or gaol, safely to keep offenders in after their said offences and evil doings: It is therefore ordained, that the said former act, concerning the privilege of sanctuary and tuition for the said offenders only, within the said town of Manchester, shall be repealed, annulled, and made frustrate; and the said town of Manchester shall be discharged of the said sanctuary and privilege, the same as before the making of the said former act. And it is ordained and CHAP. II. enacted that the city of Westchester, in the county of Chester, which is well inhabited, having no such trade of merchandize, and having a strong gaol within the said city for punishing of malefactors, and also within the said city a mayor, bailiffs, and other head officers, amongst other towns and places from henceforth may be admitted, allowed, and taken to be sanctuary, and a place of privilege and tuition. And it is further enacted, that the constables of Manchester, taking with them twenty of the inhabitants of the said town, shall take, lead, and safely bring from Manchester to Westchester, the said sanctuary men, there to be delivered to the mayor and sheriffs of the said city, and there to remain."

Though the law of sanctuary had existed in this country since the time of the Saxons, and though it is an institution which may be traced up to the period of the Jewish theocracy, the system was found incompatible with the state of society in England, after the introduction of trade, manufactures, and commerce on a large scale, and an act accordingly passed, in the 1st James I. by which it was totally abolished in the British dominions.

Ancient
ments.

Under the feudal system, which, after existing for ten centuries, was now approaching to its dissolution, the modes of punishment in Manchester were the gallows, the pillory, and the tumbrel. The gallows was constructed in the usual manner, but where it stood in Manchester is not known. That for the hundred was fixed at a little distance from the town of Salford, in a field, still called the Gallows Field, on the banks of the Irwell, leading from Boat-house lane towards the lock, and opposite to the great Hulme Meadow. The pillory, or neck-stocks, stood in the Market-place, in Manchester, till the year 1812, when it was removed, along with the common stocks which stood beneath it. The tumbrel was the same instrument of correction as the cuck-stool. In Saxon times it was used for the ordeal of plunging, or for putting convicts to death by drowning. The Manchester stool, says Whitaker, remained within these few years (1775) an open-bottomed chair of wood, placed upon the end of a long pole (balanced upon a pivot), and suspended over the large collection of water called Pool-house and Pool-fold;* it was afterwards suspended over the water of Daubholes (the Infirmary pond), and was used to punish common scolds and common prostitutes. It has now disappeared, more, it is to be feared, from the laxity than from the improvement of public morals.

Leland, the antiquary, in virtue of a commission from his royal master, Henry VIII. visited Lancashire, about the year 1538, and the following is his description of Manchester, and of the approach to it on his way from the residence of his relation and friend, Mr. Leland, of Morley Hall, in the parish of Leigh:—

Though the college of Manchester had survived the shock of the dissolution of the lesser and the larger monasteries in the time of Henry VIII. the regency of Edward VI. dissolved the collegiate institution, and the king, having taken the lands into his own hands, demised them to Edward Earl of Derby, subject to the following pensions in charge to the clergy:— College dissolved.

George Collier was re-instated in his office of Warden. During this reign, the seven chantries in the collegiate church of Manchester, which had been abolished by Edward VI. were re-established, along with numerous other chantries in the various parish churches of Lancashire.^a On the death of the Rev. Geo. Collier, Lawrence Vaux, B. D. was appointed warden. This divine was the only fellow nominated on the foundation of Philip and Mary;

he was a zealous and learned Catholic, and retired, or was expelled, in the reign of Elizabeth. William Birch, a younger brother of Birch of Birch Hall, had a presentation to the wardenship, but it does not appear that this divine was ever installed. He has the reputation of having shown a reluctance to comply with some measure proposed by the court to the prejudice of the college, (perhaps to grant to the court favourites indulgent leases of the college lands) a proposal to which he refused to lend himself, and was for his upright conduct rejected. In the list of the Popish recusants, late dignitaries in the church, preserved by Strype, is the name of Lawrence Vaux, late warden of Manchester, from which it appears that, in 1561, he was confined in the county of Worcester, and doomed to keep within the limits of that county. Not relishing this restraint, he fled into Ireland, but afterwards returned into Lancashire, and died in the family of Standish, of Standish. Thomas Herle, one of the chaplains of Queen Elizabeth was the next warden; under his wardenship the town was agitated with religious animosities, and the revenues of the church impaired even to penury. In consequence of a dispute, arising out of some regulation adopted by the ecclesiastical commissioners, the clergy belonging to the Collegiate Church were repeatedly beaten by the populace, and one of the preachers, a bachelor in divinity, on his way to perform divine service in mid-lent, 1574, was assailed by one William Smith, of Manchester, who drew out a dagger, and inflicted upon him no fewer than three separate wounds. Certain lands, called obyt lands, belonging to the church, were also seized by Thomas Stawnton, an attorney of the Duchy; and the malcontents took away the documentary evidence of the church, including the letters patent. Not content with these depredations, the same offenders carried off ornaments and plate from the collegiate institution, of the value of 500 marks, belonging to the Queen.^a Both the clergy and the court in their turn, became depredators upon the revenues of the college; and the warden, no doubt for a valuable consideration, granted long leases of the principal lands and tithes of this foundation to Killegrew, a gentleman of her Majesty's privy chamber, and others, upon such small and inadequate rents as to threaten the entire ruin of the college.^b In the year 1576, Dean Nowell, whose solicitude for the interests of the charities of Lancashire was unceasing, made a representation of this grievance to the Lord Treasurer, and to the Secretary Walsingham, entreating that a full examination might take place into the administration of the revenue and property of the college, and that, in the mean time, Herle, the warden, and the author of the ruin, as he was called, might receive no rents, till the report of persons appointed to conduct the investigation was made. In this way that unworthy warden was suspended from his office, and the advice given by Secretary Walsingham to Dr. Chaderton concerning him was, that he should continue to enjoy his pension, because, says the secretary, "he is utterly unable to instruct either here or elsewhere."^c

Two years afterwards Queen Elizabeth, on the humble petition of the gentlemen and other inhabitants* of Manchester, granted a renewed charter of foundation,^d comprehending one warden priest, B. D., four fellows priests, B. A., two chaplains or vicars, four laymen, and four children skilled in music. At this period the name of the Collegiate institution was changed from The College of the Blessed Virgin, by which it was originally called, to Christ's College: it was also ordained that the lands belonging to the foundation should be restored, and the tithes appertaining to the Church in the various townships of the parish, duly paid to the warden and fellows, who were constituted a corporation.* The new charter named John Wolton, B. D. the first warden, who, being two years afterwards elevated to the see of Exeter, was succeeded, in 1580, by William Chaderton, D. D. the fifth Bishop of Chester, a native of Chadderton, in the chapelry of Oldham.^a Dr. Chaderton held the wardenship of Manchester College till 1595, when he was succeeded by John Dee, A. M. the friend of Camden, and a celebrated mathematician. This divine was addicted to the occult sciences. He was succeeded by Richard Murray, an ostentatious high priest, who claimed his seat in the warden's stall from the Bishop of Chester, in the face of the congregation, and who, having preached a flimsy sermon before the King, James I. from the words—"I am not ashamed of the Gospel," was told by that Monarch that, though he was not ashamed of the Gospel, the Gospel had much reason to be ashamed of him.

The dilapidation of the church, and the malversations in the management of its revenues, during the period of this warden's usurpation, (for, not having taken the initiatory oath, he was not legally invested with the office) induced the gentry and inhabitants,† "of Manchester, alias Mancaster,"^b to repeat their petition to the throne for a renewed foundation of the College; and his Majesty Charles I. in compliance with the prayer of the petitioners, granted a new charter, drawn by Archbishop Laud:—By this charter it is ordained, that the officers of the college shall consist of one warden, at least of the rank of bachelor of divinity, or of canonical or civil laws; and four fellows, at the least masters of arts, or bachelors of laws; who shall be a body corporate and politic of themselves for ever, by the name of "The Warden and Fellows of Christ's College, in Manchester:" that the appointment of the warden shall be in the Crown, by letters sealed with the great seal of England; and the appointment of the fellows, in the warden and fellows, or the majority of them, by letter sealed with the common seal of the college. The charter further directs, that there shall be two chaplains, or vicars, continually in the college, at least bachelors of arts, and two clerks to visit the sick, celebrate the sacraments, and other necessary and divine services in the said college and parish of Manchester; one of whom, by a recent regulation, is to be in holy orders; and that there shall be four singing men, whether clerks or laymen, and four boys skilled in music, who may perform prayers and other divine services in the said Collegiate Church, the chaplains and singing men and boys to be from time to time elected by the warden and fellows.§

* "We do limit and appoint," says the charter, "unto the warden every day that he shall be present and resident, 4s.—To every fellow, every day that he shall be present, 1s. 4d.—To every chaplain, six-pence halfpenny farthing.—To every chorister, four-pence halfpenny;—and to every singing boy, two-pence halfpenny farthing per day," subject to an abatement of one half their stipends for those days that they are absent.

† In this petition the number of inhabitants in Manchester is stated at 20,000 or upwards, from which it appears, if this statement be correct, of which we think there is much reason to doubt, that the population had doubled itself in 57 years.

§ King Charles's Charter directs that "the wages," as they are called, of the warden shall be £70 a year; each fellow £35; each chaplain £17 10s. exclusive of the dues; each clerk or layman, £10; and every boy skilled in music, £5 yearly, subject to an increase upon the increased revenues of the college.

CHAP. II. It is also ordained that there shall be in the said college continually a sub-warden, a treasurer, a collector, a registrar, a master of the choristry, an instructor, an organist, and a bailiff, all to be chosen by the warden and fellows; and that the sub-warden, treasurer, and collector shall be of the number of the fellows, and the other aforesaid officers to be chosen for ever by the rest of the Collegiates.

The first warden on King Charles's foundation was Richard Heyrick, B.D. under whose administration the dilapidated collegiate church was re-edified. No sooner was this great work effected, than the wars between prerogative and privilege commenced, and the warden, adhering to the side of the Commonwealth, was placed at the head of the first presbyterical classis for the province of Lancaster, along with the Rev. Richard Hollingworth, author of "The MANUNIENSIS." According to this writer, an excellent authority upon such a subject, the Independents set up a meeting in the college, in 1649; and on the 5th of Nov. in the same year, the chapter-house and the college chest were broken open, when the deeds belonging to the foundation were seized upon by some of the soldiers, and sent to London, where they were destroyed by the great fire in 1666.* From the same authority we learn, that this fanatical soldiery, under the influence of a zeal which was not according to knowledge, pulled down a newly painted picture of Bishop Oldham, which stood at the head of his Grammar-school, and consigned it to destruction. The college was again dissolved by the ordinance of Parliament for the sale of dean and chapter lands, and Mr. Heyrick, the late warden, officiated, with a salary of £100 a year, during the interregnum; but, on the restoration in 1660, this institution was revived, subject to the statutes of Charles I. and Mr. Heyrick reinstated in his office of warden, which he held till his death in 1667. Nicholas Stratford, B.D. then became warden, and held the office till the year 1684. Richard Wroe, B.D. an eloquent preacher and a pious divine, who obtained the name of "The silver-tongued Wroe," was his successor; on the death of this warden, in 1717, he was succeeded by Samuel Peploe, B.D. vicar of Preston. This appointment, though made by the Crown, Dr. Gastrell, the bishop of Chester, refused to recognize, on the ground that the degree of the new warden had been obtained at Lambeth from the archbishop, instead of at Oxford from the University. The point at issue was brought before the Court of King's Bench, and decided by that tribunal against the bishop. On the death of Dr. Gastrell, in 1725, his opponent was preferred to the see of Chester, and resigned the wardenship of Manchester in 1738, in favour of his son, Samuel Peploe, LL.B. whose successor, in 1781, was Rich. Assheton, D.D. rector of Middleton, of the ancient family of Ashton. This divine, dying in 1798, was succeeded by Thomas Blackburne, D.D. vicar of Waverham, who, having held the wardenship 24 years, was succeeded on his death, in 1823, by Thomas Jackson Calvert, D.D. the present warden.

The following are the names of the wardens of Manchester College, with the year when each of them was installed, from the erection of the college to the present time, arranged under the respective foundations:

To return to the general history of Manchester at the period of the reformation. John Bradford, a divine of the Protestant persuasion, born in Manchester, and educated at the Grammar-school, then recently founded by Bishop Oldham, held a public disputation in this place with George Collier, the Catholic warden, and Doctor Pendleton, in the reign of Queen Mary, and became so obnoxious to the infuriated bigots by whose counsel that unhappy Queen was governed, that he was consigned to the flames in Smithfield.* Mr. Bradford had distinguished himself as a zealous preacher of the Protestant doctrines in the reign of Edward VI. and had spread the light of the gospel at Eccles, Prestwich, Middleton, Radcliffe, Ashton-under-line, Stockport, Bolton, Bury, Wigan, Liverpool, and other places. While preaching in the Collegiate Church of Manchester, "he told the people," says Mr. Hollingworth, "as it were by a prophetic spirit, that because they did not readily embrace the word of God, the mass should be said again in that church, and the play of Robin Hood acted there, which," adds our author, "accordingly came to pass in Queen Mary's reign." That the mass was celebrated here in the reign of the Queen is perfectly true; but as to the dramatic performance, this is no doubt one of those pious fictions, which, in the excess of their zeal, both Protestants and Catholics were then so prone to invent to the prejudice of each other.

In these times part of the College was used as a prison, and a number of Protestants, apprehended in the neighbourhood of Manchester, were confined there on charges of heresy, till, on the death of Queen Mary, and the accession of her royal sister, they were liberated.

Prison.

In the latter part of Mary's reign, a native of Manchester, of the name of Ellys, calling himself Elias, pretended to the gift of prophecy, and practised with some success upon the credulity of the people of this town; but, aspiring to a wider field of action, he repaired to London in 1562, when the authorities of that city, regardless of his mission, cast him into Bridewell as an impostor, where he died three years afterwards.^b Prophet.

The zeal of the Ministers of Queen Elizabeth in favour of the reformed religion, exhibited itself with much energy in the County of Lancaster, and in no place so strongly as in the town of Manchester. No sooner had the queen ascended the throne, than an ecclesiastical commission was established, to make inquisition into the state of the churches in the several dioceses of the kingdom, to abolish all foreign power, as repugnant to the laws and constitution of the country, and to introduce into the services of the church, on an appointed day, the Book of Common Prayer.^a The commissioners for the north were—Francis, Earl of Shrewsbury, president of the council; Edward, Earl of Derby; Thomas, Earl of Northumberland; Edwin Sandys, Archbishop of York; Cuthbert Scott,* the third Bishop of Chester, and several others.

The County of Lancaster continued to be greatly agitated. The efforts of the Catholics for the re-establishment of their religion were active and persevering. Plots both foreign and domestic either really existed, or were supposed to be forming, against the state, and the ecclesiastical courts and their commissioners, by their arbitrary and inquisitorial proceedings,^a aggravated those evils which it was their duty to remove. On the other hand, Jesuit emissaries were sent over from Rome, to propagate the Roman Catholic tenets, and Fathers Campion† and Parsons, two of the most eminent of their number, selected the north of England as the principal scene of their mission. Campion, soon after his arrival, was apprehended and committed to the tower, where he was submitted to the rack,^b and, while writhing under the torture, he confessed that during his labours in Lancashire, in the summer of 1580, he was entertained in the houses of Lawrence Vaux, late warden of Manchester college; — Talbot, Esq. Thomas Southworth, gent. Bartholomew Hesketh, gent. Mrs. Allen, widow, Rich. Hoghton, of the Park, and several others. The rack having failed to produce conversion, the dignitaries of the Church of England held several public disputations with this disciple of the society of Jesus, in the tower. On one of which occasions, Dr. Nowell, dean of St. Paul's, and on another, Dr. Day, dean of Windsor, entered the lists against him. In this, as in most disputations of a similar nature, both parties claimed the victory; the unfortunate Jesuit was, however, made to feel that he had the weaker side, for he was soon after brought to trial on a charge of conspiring with others beyond the seas, to depose and murder her Majesty the Queen of England, and, being pronounced guilty, was executed at Tyburn, on the 1st of December, 1581.

The success of the popish emissaries, combined with other causes, induced the Queen to institute a new ecclesiastical commission for the diocese of Chester,^c consisting of Henry Hastings, Earl of Huntingdon; Edwin Sandys, Archbishop of York; the Earl of Derby; and Doctor Chaderton, Bishop of Chester, who then resided in Manchester.‡ The commissioners were sent down into Lancashire, charged with the duty of reclaiming the persons who had fallen away to popery, or of punishing those whom they could not reclaim.^d The sittings of the commissioners were held generally in Manchester, and in the course of this and the following year, a number of recusants were apprehended by their orders, and committed to Chester Castle. It has been already seen that, at the period of the removal of the sanctuary from Manchester to Chester, there was no gaol in Manchester, but the agitation of the times gave rise to the erection of a prison, which stood on the banks of the Irk, on the site of the present Castle Inn, and was called the New Fleet. In the month of Dec. 1581, a resolution was taken to remove the recusants from Chester gaol

Recusants

* Dr. Scott had been imprisoned in the New Fleet in Manchester, in Queen Mary's reign, for his adherence to the reformed faith.

† Edmund Campion was an Englishman by birth, but emigrated to Rome, where he became a Jesuit, and had officiated for seven years as a priest at Prague, in Bohemia.

‡ Hollingworth says that, up to this period, the Bishop's palace was here; but that frequent quarrels between his servants and some of the inhabitants of Manchester, caused him, some time afterwards, to take up his residence at Chester.

to the New Fleet at Manchester, and to send those in future apprehended to this gaol^a. The number of recusants, prisoners at this time, amounted to 16, amongst whom there were Sir John Southworth, (of the Samlesbury family)* and six priests. The person appointed to the office of gaoler was Robert Worsley, Esq. a man ardently devoted to the interests of the Queen; and the prison establishment was to be supported partly by the fines imposed upon the more opulent part of the prisoners, and partly by the proceeds of a parochial assessment, amounting to eight-pence a week, on each parish throughout the diocese of Chester.^b Amongst the persons confined in the New Fleet, the names occur of James Layborne, "a noble layman," James Bell, a priest, John Towneley, Esq. of the family of Towneley, and the lady of Bartholomew Hesketh, stigmatised as a busy recusant. In this reign, the term Recusant was applied chiefly to persons of the Roman Catholic persuasion, who, holding that the Pope is the head of the church, refused to acknowledge the Queen's supremacy; and so numerous were the prosecutions, that there were no fewer than 800 recusants under indictment at one time, in the county of Lancaster alone.^c

The disposition of the parishioners, in the several parts of the diocese, does not appear to have been in unison with the severe measures of the government. The complaints against the new impost of eight-pence a week upon each parish were extremely loud, on the ground that it was an unequal and oppressive, and withal an unconstitutional, mode of raising money upon the subject. The court lawyers combated these objections, and the court itself censured the apathy of the people; but their remonstrances were not to be overcome, and at length an order was issued by Ministers, to the effect that the weekly collection should be stayed. Mr. Worsley, the gaoler, was, however, greatly in love with the new tax, and he availed himself of his communications with the Queen's commissioners, to make the proposal, that if they would allow him the proceeds of this tax for one year, he would, at his own cost, build a county workhouse, to set at work all such rogues, vagabonds, and idle persons as might be found in the shire.^d Pauperism, like taxation, must at that period have been in its infancy, and the mention of a workhouse for the whole county of Lancaster, is calculated to produce as much surprise in the present generation, as is excited by the complaints against the pressure of a tax of eight-pence per week upon a whole parish. Similar feelings will be produced by the fact, that the bridge over the Irwell, then called Crossfery Bridge, was rebuilt in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, at the expense of the county, for £200, to which the inhabitants of Manchester, of their benevolence, added £40.^e† The ecclesiastical commissioners, though principally employed in propagating the reformed religion, and in restraining those of the better sort of people who adhered to the Catholic faith, were not unmindful of public morals; and in the year 1579, being assembled at Manchester, they issued a mandate throughout the county of Lancaster "against pipers and minstrels playing, making, and frequenting bear-baiting and bull-baiting on the Martyrs.

The imprisonment of the recusants terminated in a species of martyrdom: James Bell, a native of Warrington, and John Finch, born at Eccleston, were removed from the New Fleet, in Manchester, to Lancaster Castle, where they were tried at the Lent Assizes, in 1584, for affirming that the Pope had power or jurisdiction in the kingdom of England, and that he was the lawful head of the Catholic church; of this offence, which they did not deny, they were found guilty, and executed at Lancaster, in 1584, from whence their heads were brought to Manchester, and placed upon the steeple of the collegiate church.^b The year before these executions, James Layborne, Esq. was taken from Manchester to Lancaster, where he was brought to trial, and executed, for declaring, which he did to the last, "that the queen was not his lawful sovereign,"* and "that she was unlawfully begotten, and lawfully deposed from her pretended right by Pope Pius Quintus."^c

 1505.

The agitated state of the public mind displayed itself in the number of libels circulated in Manchester, and other parts of the county; and a letter was addressed by the queen's council to Ferdinando Stanley, Lord Strange; to William Chaderton, Lord Bishop of Chester; and to all other justices of Lancashire and Cheshire, signifying that a most vile book ("Leicester's Commonwealth") against the Earl of Leicester and the queen, had been circulated, which it was their duty forthwith to have suppressed. An itinerant printing press of some celebrity, under the direction of Penry, a Brownist, was some time after traced from different parts of the kingdom into Newton lane, then described as near Man- chester; at this press a certain obnoxious pamphlet was printed, entitled,
 "Ha ye any more work for the Cooper?" by Martin Marprelate, and other satirical papers.^d The author had sufficient dexterity to elude the search of his pursuers for a time; but being at length taken, he was brought to trial, not for disseminating these publications, which were out of date, but for the contents of some papers found in his pocket, as if he had scattered sedition, and for this offence he was condemned and executed!

Dearth.

In 1586, a great dearth prevailed in Lancashire, insomuch, says Hollingworth, that a penny white loaf weighed but six or eight ounces, one penny boulded bread ten or eleven ounces, and brown bread fourteen ounces. The Bishop of Chester, and others, pitying the poor, ordered that a penny white loaf should weigh nine ounces of troy weight, boulded bread ten ounces, brown fifteen, jannock thirteen, and oat cake fifteen ounces. What effect was produced by this maximum is not mentioned, but it was, no doubt, pernicious, unless, indeed, the bishop of his liberality paid the difference to the baker. Famine was succeeded by pestilence, and in the month of April nearly seventy of the parishioners died. In 1588, a panic fear came upon the lord bishop, then warden, and others, which caused the flesh market to be removed to Salford bridge, and the people betook themselves to arms, upon some flying report that a potent army was within a few miles of Swinton Moor.^a The reason of this panic is not assigned, but the country was, at that moment, in a state of extreme excitation and alarm. The "invincible armada" of Spain, consisting of one hundred and thirty ships, of 57,868 tons, carrying 2630 pieces of cannon, manned by 8450 mariners, and provided with an army of 19,295 soldiers and 2088 slaves, was at sea. To resist this mighty power, all England was called upon for contributions, and the quota demanded from Manchester was two hundred men, of whom one hundred and forty-four were bill and pike men, thirty-eight harquebussiers, and thirty-eight archers.

Manchester rose superior to all its difficulties, and still maintained its ascendancy in the county. Camden, the eminent antiquary and itinerant, writing from actual observation, speaks thus of it, at the period now under consideration—"At the confluence of the Irwell and the Irk," says he, "on the left bank, which is of reddish stone, scarce three miles from the Mersey, stands that ancient town, called by Antoninus, according to the various readings, Mancunium and Manucium, and by us at present, with some traces of the old name, Manchester. It surpasses the neighbouring towns in elegance and populousness; there is a woollen manufacture, market, church, and college, founded by Thos. Lord de la Warre, who took orders, and was the last male heir of his family in the time of Henry V. He was descended from the Gresleys, who are said to have been the ancient lords of the town. In the last age it was much more famous for its manufacture of stuffs, called Manchester cottons, and the privilege of sanctuary, which the parliament, under Henry VIII. transferred to Chester."

The cotton manufacture, in the modern acceptation of the term, was wholly unknown in England in the time of Elizabeth; the Manchester Cottons here spoken of, were a species of woollen goods usually dried upon the tenters, and for the true making of which acts were passed in the time of Edward VI. Philip and Mary, and Queen Elizabeth, which remained in force till the year 1821, when they were all repealed.

In 1605, Manchester was again visited with a dreadful epidemic, so fatal in its consequences as to obtain the name of the plague. In 1604, the number of deaths returned in the bills of mortality for this parish was 188; in 1605, the number was swelled to 1078; and the year following reduced to 153. Monuments of this malady still exist on the way to Stratford, and other places in the neighbourhood of Manchester, in the "plague-stones," where the towns-people deposited the money for their purchases, and the country-people their provisions, without coming in contact with each other. This year, Rowland Mosley, Esq. the lord of the manor, appropriated six acres of land in Collyhurst, as a burial place for those who died of the plague, and for the further purpose of erecting lazar houses, whenever any infection of the plague may appear in Manchester. Twelve years afterwards, the Irwell was swelled to a height never before known, so that the water actually ran upon the bridge which separates Manchester and Salford.^a In the year 1617, a gallery was for the first time added to the collegiate church, principally at the cost of Mr. Humphrey Booth, a prosperous merchant, in Salford; and, some years afterwards, Trinity Chapel, in Salford, was founded and endowed by the same pious benefactor. Title. Manchester had now risen to sufficient importance to afford a title, without any existing local connexion, to one of the most rising families in the state; and, in the year 1625, Sir Henry Montague, grandson of Sir Edward Montague, Lord Chief Justice in the reign of Henry VIII. received from Charles I. the title of Earl of Manchester, in the county of Lancaster. Edward, the eldest son, and successor of the first Earl, was the Commander-in-chief on the side of Parliament in the early part of the civil wars, and was grandfather of Charles, the fourth Earl, and the first Duke of Manchester, who was elevated to the latter dignity on the 30th of April, 1719, from whom descended his Grace, the present Duke, William Montague, Duke and Earl of Manchester, Viscount Mandeville, Baron Montague, of Kimbolton, Lord-Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the county of Huntingdon.

See
 v. ii. p. 68. The Charter of Manchester^a granted by Thomas de Gresley, the sixth baron, in the year 1301, was enrolled and exemplified by King James I. on the 16th of Sept. 1623, but the official copies have not been preserved either in the Records of the Tower, or in the Rolls Chapel.

Conversion of
 Sir C. Trafford. From the period of the reformation till the reign of Charles I. the Trafford family, so closely connected with the town of Manchester, had been staunch supporters of the Protestant religion, and Sir Edmund Trafford. Catholics;^a but in the year 1632, Sir Cecil Trafford abjured the reformed faith, and became a Catholic. A note in Hollingworth's MS. written by another hand, says, that Sir Cecil was converted to the Catholic creed by the arguments he met with while studying the case, in order to bring Mr. Downes back to the Protestant faith, from which he had revolted. The political aspect of the times had probably some influence in effecting this change. Sir Cecil was, it appears, warmly attached to the prerogatives of the crown, and he viewed with apprehension, the misunderstanding which existed between Charles I. and his parliament, arising, as he conceived, out of the puritanical doctrines now so prevalent, and for which he was himself at one time supposed to have a strong predilection.

Approach
 Civil
 Wars. To strengthen the King's cause, Sir Cecil supplied the inhabitants of Manchester and the neighbouring towns with arms, and his Majesty's Deputy-lieutenants trained the people to the use of them. The disposition of the county was, however, in favour of peace, and, as one step towards the preservation of that blessing, a petition from the freeholders of the county of Lancaster, was sent to Charles I. who had quitted London and repaired to York, intimating to his Majesty the wish entertained by his loyal subjects to see the dissensions between him and his parliament reconciled. The presentation of this memorable petition was confided to a deputation, consisting of the warden of Manchester, and a number of other freeholders, amongst whom we find the name of John Bradshaw, who, though history is silent on the subject, was probably the identical person, that six years afterwards, pronounced sentence of death upon the King, in his capacity of President of the High Court of Justice. The breach was found too wide to be healed; the sword was ready to start from the scabbard; and Lord Strange soon after came from York to Manchester, invested with the celebrated Commission of Array,^b

IN the early history of this country, Manchester had frequently witnessed the conflicts of contending armies, and it is probable that the Romans, the Saxons, the Danes, and the Normans, each in succession, made the ancient Mancunium a scene of their contests for power and dominion; but nearly six hundred years had now passed over without the tranquillity of the inhabitants having ever once been disturbed by the presence of conflicting armies. The time, however, was approaching when the sound of war was again to be heard in the streets—and that of war the most unnatural; when Britons were to meet in mortal conflict with Britons; and when men, allied in blood, and united by local association and a common interest, were to decide, by an appeal to arms, whether the monarchical or the democratical estate of the realm should possess the ascendancy. The causes of the differences between Charles I. and his parliament having been already stated,^a it is unnecessary here to repeat them. Both parties professed a wish to govern according to the laws and constitution of England, but the king, before the breaking out of the civil wars, had certainly betrayed a wish to govern without a parliament, and the parliament, in the progress of the contest, assumed the right to cashier their sovereign, and to rule by their own authority.

All hopes of reconciliation between Charles I. and his parliament having vanished, his majesty issued his commission of array at York to Lord Strange, the lord-lieutenant of the county of Lancaster, directing his lordship, with the aid of the other commissioners named in that document, to assemble and array such of his subjects in the counties of Lancaster and Chester as were favourable to the royal cause. This memorable commission, so highly obnoxious to parliament,^b was issued in the month of June, 1642; and, about the middle of that month, Sir John Girlington, Knight, high-sheriff of Lancashire, took such measures as he conceived necessary to secure, for the use of the royal troops,

"the powder and match," which were deposited in the different towns of the county. Ralph Assheton, Esq. of Middleton, one of the county members, in the interest of the parliament, on hearing of these measures, repaired to Manchester, where he secured ten barrels of powder and a few bundles of match, which were found lodged in the collegiate buildings, belonging to Lord Strange, and thus anticipated Sir Alex. Radcliffe and Thomas Prestwick, Esq. two of the commissioners of array, and Mr. Nicholas Mosley, who were preparing to obtain this ammunition for the use of the king. These unequivocal symptoms of approaching war induced the inhabitants of Manchester to take up arms, and many from the adjacent country came voluntarily to their assistance. Lord Strange had in the meantime assembled a considerable force, and, having advanced into Lancashire from York, where he had been in attendance upon the king, he demanded from the inhabitants of Manchester that they should surrender to him their magazine. To this demand they replied—That their arms and ammunition formed their principal safeguard, and that they would defend them with their lives.* Irritated by this refusal, his lordship advanced to the town on the morning of the 4th of July, and attempted to enter at the head of his forces; but the inhabitants, says the parliamentary record, "with most puissant courage," resisted the attempt, and slew two of his lordship's men. An engagement now ensued; Lord Strange renewed the attack, and the inhabitants drew out ten small companies to resist his entrance. The engagement was continued with great spirit during the remainder of the day, and Lord Strange having lost about twenty-seven of his men withdrew from before the town. The loss on the side of the inhabitants was eleven men killed and Captain Band wounded. This was the first military operation between Charles I. and his parliament, and it was announced by the house of commons as "The beginning of the Civil Warres in England; or, Terrible News from the North."

The 15th of the same month Lord Strange was invited to a public entertainment,^a by the royalist party of the town; but, while they were in the banquetting room, Captain Holcroft and Captain Birch, "firm parliamentarians," suspecting some hostile design, entered the town with their forces and beat to arms. His lordship quitted the repast to muster the 400 troops by which he was attended, and a skirmish ensued, in which Richard Percivall, a linen weaver, of the neighbouring village of Kirkmanshulme, was killed by the royalists, and the death of this man formed a prominent feature in the impeachment against his lordship subsequently voted by parliament.^b

While the impeachment was pending in parliament, Lord Strange was making preparations for an attack upon Manchester—the rallying point and strong hold of the parliamentary party in the county of Lancaster. Up to the period of the Civil Wars this town was perfectly open and without defence, but in the summer of the present year a species of fortification was formed under the direction of Lieutenant-Colonel John Rosworm, a German engineer, consisting of posts and chains, to which was added a mud-formed barricado at the end of each of the streets.† The inhabitants were much divided in opinion, some of them espousing the cause of the king, and others that of the parliament. The partisans of the latter were strengthened by hastily trained levies from the country, collected by the neighbouring gentry, and a body of militia, which marched into the town by order of Lord Wharton, the parliamentary lord-lieutenant of the county and commander of the Lancashire militia, decided the preponderance.

The storm was now gathering round Manchester; the king, having raised the royal standard at Nottingham, proceeded through Derby, by way of Shrewsbury, to Chester, in which city he arrived on the 23d of September. Here the attack upon Manchester was finally resolved upon, and Lord Strange was ordered to proceed to this place, and to carry the town by force, if his entrance was resisted. This event had been foreseen by the parliamentary party, and the command of the forces in Manchester was given by the deputy lieutenants* to Captain Bradshaw and Captain Radcliff, aided by Lieut. Col. Rosworm, the German engineer.

On the night of the 24th of September, certain intelligence arrived that a large force was advancing to besiege the town from Warrington, headed by Lord Strange, and about mid-day on Sunday, the troops were seen defiling on both banks of the Irwell. The besieging force consisted of 4000 foot, seven pieces of cannon, 200 dragoons, and 100 light horse, and the main body took up a position on the south side of the river, in the grounds of Sir Edward Mosley, the lodge in Aldport park affording head quarters to Lord Strange. The other division took possession of Salford, the inhabitants of that place being favourably disposed to the royal party. His lordship lost no time in summoning the town to surrender in the king's name; but the garrison refused to obey the mandate. On Monday another summons was sent with no better success, "whereupon," says the Genuine Narrative in Fairfax's Memoirs, "the Earl of Derby began to play with his cannon about twelve o'clock upon Deansgate and Salford Bridge; and this afternoon the battle was hot on both sides; most of the towns'-men constantly charged and discharged most resolutely, to the great admiration and terror of the enemy. While the battle raged, a number of soldiers were dispatched by Lord Strange, to set fire to two barns which stood near the end of Deansgate, (then extending only to the end of Back King's-street,) and the flames burst forth with so much fury, that, had not the wind changed at that critical moment, it is probable that the town would have been reduced to ashes. A shout of 'The town is ours! the town is ours!' was now set up by the assailants, but, by the valour and energy of Captain Bradshaw and his band of militia, they were beaten back and many of them slain in the assault." Simultaneously with this operation, the forces that were in Salford endeavoured to carry the bridge, but they were resisted by Lieut. Col. Rosworm, who maintained his post against repeated attacks made upon him, though his whole force consisted but of 30 musketeers, and his only breast-work was a chain which passed across the bridge.

Siege.

On Tuesday the attacks upon the town were renewed, and directed principally against the head of Market-street-lane, then extending only to Spring-gardens; and against the bridge, where so gallant a resistance

CHAP. had already been made, with a strength so inconsiderable. "The enemy
 III. plaid upon us," says Rosworm, "with his great pieces, which making a strange noise and producing a great terror to my raw troops, sixteen of them took to their heels, and the rest, some from fear of my drawn sword, and others out of gallantry, resolving rather to die than to forsake me, stood to their posts and secured the safety of the town." The attack on the head of Market-street-lane was equally unsuccessful, and the besieged, obtaining confidence from the failure of the enemy's attacks, made a desperate sally, and brought in several prisoners. That evening Lord Strange sounded a parley, and a written message was sent into the town, repeating the summons to surrender, accompanied by an assurance to the inhabitants that no man's person or property should be injured, if they would give up their arms, to be disposed of according to his majesty's command.

On Wednesday, at ten o'clock, an answer was returned, to the effect, that the inhabitants saw no reason why they should give up their arms; that they were bound and resolved to maintain their rights, as well as to defend their persons and property, and that as their arms, were necessary for that purpose, they should not surrender them. The intrepidity of this reply lowered the demands of the besiegers, and Sir John Mounson was sent to say that Lord Strange would be content with a part of their arms. This second offer the gentlemen in the town referred to the soldiers, who replied—That they would not surrender even a yard of match, but would maintain their cause and their arms to the last drop of their blood. Negotiation having thus failed, the cannonading was renewed, but with so little effect as to kill only a boy who stood upon a stile, gazing upon the hostile scenes by which he was surrounded.

On Thursday, Captain Standish, one of the officers under the command of Lord Strange, was killed by a bullet from the town, while he was urging his reluctant troops to renew the attack on the bridge. The loss of their captain panic-struck the troops, and they fled by hundreds from the royal standard.

On Friday, the attack was renewed on the side of Deansgate and on the bridge, but in a manner too feeble to afford any hopes of success. This day, as on every other day of the siege, the soldiers of the garrison had prayers and psalm-singing at the ends of the streets; and their holy zeal seemed so much to inflame their military ardour, that they went as merrily to meet the enemy in the hottest skirmishes as to a feast.

The death of the Earl of Derby at this juncture, and a summons from the King addressed to Lord Strange, (now elevated to the Earldom) to join him with all his force at Shrewsbury, determined his lordship to raise the siege of Manchester. The same night the cannon were removed from before the town; and on the following day (Saturday) an exchange of prisoners took place. According to the "Genuine Account," the garrison of Manchester lost only four men during the siege; while the royalists, in addition to the loss of military reputation from the failure of their enterprise, lost 200 men, amongst whom were several officers, whose remains were interred in the church yard at Didsbury.

To prevent future surprise, it was determined to enlarge and to complete the fortifications of the town, which were now made to assume a formidable appearance, and parliament directed that the committee for the defence of the kingdom should expedite the levies of dragoons to serve in Manchester and its neighbourhood. In order to indemnify the inhabitants of Manchester, and other places in the county of Lancaster, for the excessive charges to which they had been exposed in resisting the Commissioners of Array and other "malignants," and to supply them with money for future services, it was further ordained by parliament, that a loan should be made in their favour, and that the money and plate advanced for their use should bear an interest of eight pounds per cent. per annum, payable by government; but, as these arrangements could not be immediately effected, it was ordained that the engineers and officers of the several companies lying in garrison at Manchester, should in the meantime have their pay, according to their places of command, paid them out of the estates of the delinquents.^a

The head-quarters of the parliamentary army in Lancashire now became permanently established at Manchester, and on the 12th of Jan. 1643, Sir Thomas Fairfax marched from Yorkshire into this town. From hence he dispatched an expedition under the command of Sir John Seaton, a major-general of the parliamentary forces, against Preston and Lancaster, both of which places were surrendered into his hands, and Warrington and Wigan were afterwards added to the number of the conquests.

Manchester was now threatened with an army from the east, much more formidable than any by which it had been hitherto assailed. Bradford having surrendered to the Earl of Newcastle, at the head of an army of 10 or 12,000 men, the earl dispatched a messenger to Manchester with a summons and declaration, in which he made the town "an offer of his majesty's grace and mercy, if they would submit themselves and lay down their arms, so unjustly taken up, in contempt of the laws of this kingdom," by immediately returning to their allegiance; warning them, at the same time, that the blood which might be shed in the further prosecution of the contest would fall upon their own heads; and assuring them that, if they refused to surrender, they might expect to find at his hands such treatment as was due to those who condemn his majesty's grace and favour.

The Earl's
Sum.
July 5,
1643.

To this lofty summons the garrison replied—That it had been and was their care to preserve the Protestant religion, as by law established, to maintain also the honour of the king in all his rights and prerogatives, the privileges of parliament, and the true and native liberties and privileges of the subject; that they were nothing dismayed by the earl's force; and that they hoped God, who had been their protector hitherto, would so direct their just army, that they should be able to return the violence intended into their bosoms who should venture to attack them.

Answer,
July 7.

This resolute answer indisposed the Earl of Newcastle to advance into Lancashire, and, taking the route to Hull in pursuit of General Sir Thomas Fairfax, his operations were confined during the summer of that year to the county of York.

The war was prosecuted with great vigour in Lancashire during the following year; but, although Prince Rupert spent nearly a month in the siege of Liverpool, and although that officer was in the vicinity of Manchester, on his march from Stockport to Bolton, he made no attempt to attack this place. During the whole of the civil wars, this town remained faithfully attached to the parliament, and the devotion of its inhabitants tended materially to promote the success of that cause in Lancashire. After the year 1643, no military operation of any great

 III. prosperity of the people of Manchester suffered very little further interruption from this cause.

The Plague.

The next year the town was again visited with the scourge of pestilence, and the number of burials in Manchester increased from about two hundred, which was at that time the general average, to upwards of twelve hundred.* This visitation was so ruinous, that parliament, on the 9th of July, directed that 1000*l.* should be appropriated to the relief of Manchester; and on the 9th of December, the house of commons issued an ordinance, directing a collection to be made in all the churches and chapels of the metropolis for the town of Manchester, which is described to have been for a long time "so sore visited by the pestilence, that none were for many months permitted either to come in or go out of the said town."^b Before the end of the year the malady was stayed, and in the following year the burials were reduced from twelve hundred to one hundred and forty-four.

 Classes.

It has already been seen that the form of church government throughout the country was now changed, and that Lancashire was divided into nine Presbyterian Classes. The warden of Manchester, Richard Heyrick, A.M. represented this county in the Assembly of Divines, which met in Westminster,* and the same minister stood at the head of the classes which met for the first time at Preston, in November, 1646. The sittings were afterwards transferred to Manchester, and were continued periodically during the existence of the commonwealth.

The same year the Committee of Sequestration for the county of Lancaster assembled in Manchester, when a number of the gentry of the county, supporters of the royal cause, compounded for their forfeited estates by the payment of a specific sum into the treasury, amongst whom were the families of Sir Edward Mosley, of the Houghend, Manchester; Sir Thomas Prestwich, of Hulme; Ferdinando Stanley, of Broughton; Edward Byrom, of Salford; and a great number of others.* The Earl of Derby having as little disposition to compound as the sequestrators had to make terms with his lordship, his estates were seized to supply the exigences of the state; and Manchester College, which had been in possession of the Stanley family ever since its dissolution in the first year of the reign of Edward VI. was seized, and used, partly as a magazine for the ammunition of the parliamentary forces, and partly as a prison for the confinement of "delinquents." The ancient chapel on Salford-bridge, built by Thomas de Booth, was now also used as a prison, and continued to be appropriated to that purpose till it was taken down^d under the improvement act of 1776, and the gaol on Hunt's-bank built to supply its place.

The civil wars now approached to that termination, by which the unfortunate Charles, King of England, was brought to the block; and a few years afterwards, the Earl of Derby, the most devoted of his subjects, shared the same fate in the neighbouring town of Bolton.* But in the midst of these changes, so important in the annals of the kingdom and of the county, the merchants and manufacturers of Manchester kept on their steady course, and trade seems not to have received any permanent interruption, though war and pestilence combined to arrest its progress. On the eve of the breaking out of the civil wars, an intimation is given, for the first time, of the existence of the cotton manufacture, properly so called, in England. A writer on commerce already quoted, says—At this time, namely, in 1641, the town of Manchester buys linen (yarn) in great quantities from the Irish, and, weaving it, returns the same in cloth into Ireland. “Neither,” adds he, “does her industry rest here; for they buy cotton wool in London, that comes from Cyprus and Smyrna, and work the same into fustians, vermillions, and dimities, which they return to London, where they are sold, and from thence, not seldom, are sent into foreign parts, where the first material may be more easily had for that manufacture.” In 1650, Manchester is described as one of the most flourishing places in the kingdom, (if that state could be called a kingdom which was without a king.) The manufactures consisted chiefly of woollen frizes, fustians, sack-cloth, mingled stuffs, and small wares;^a and, according to an account published in that year, there were all kinds of foreign merchandise bought and returned by the merchants, to the amount of many thousand pounds a week.

One of these merchant manufacturers, of an ancient family in the county, was Humphrey Chetham,* of Clayton-hall, near Manchester, and of Turton-Tower, near Bolton, a distinguished benefactor of the town of Manchester, whose memory is embalmed in the grateful recollections of the people, and who has erected here an imperishable monument. This excellent man, who died in December, 1653, was the founder of the Hospital and Library bearing his name. He bequeathed by will, dated December 16, 1651, to his nephews, George and Edward Chetham, being himself a bachelor, the sum of 7000*l.* to be expended in the purchase of two estates, of the clear yearly value of 420*l.* both of them to be conveyed to four and twenty feoffees, named, in trust, to the intent that the whole property and revenues should be employed in founding and endowing an hospital for maintaining, clothing, educating, bringing up, and apprenticing, or obtaining other preferment for forty healthy boys, born in wedlock, the sons of honest and industrious parents. The habits of the founder's life were, it appears, benevolent, and he had been accustomed to maintain and educate 22 boys, 14 of them of the town of Manchester, 6 of Salford, and 2 of Droylesden, who were to form part of the 40. The boys were to be chosen in the following proportion:— age of thirteen years; they are then bound apprentice, or otherwise provided for, and, casting off their antiquated robes, they are furnished with two good suits made after the fashion of our own times.* Mr. Chetham by his will also directed that the boys should live together in one house, or two houses, as might be found most convenient, along with their governor, officers, and servants, and he devised the sum of £500 to purchase such house or houses. At the same time, he expressed his wish that the premises called "THE COLLEGE" might be purchased, if they could be obtained on suitable terms, for the purpose of this institution, and he was himself in treaty for them soon after the establishment of the commonwealth; but the contract was not made till after the restoration, when the Dowager Countess of Derby, Charlotte Tremouille, the celebrated heroine of Lathom House, conveyed them to the feoffees, and they have ever since been used as the Blue Coat Hospital and Library. The founder by his will further expressed his wish, that his hospital might be incorporated and made a body politic, and his Majesty Charles II. accordingly granted a charter of incorporation, dated the 10th of November, 1665, in which the founder is styled "our trusty and well beloved Humphrey Chetham" and designated as "a person of eminent loyalty to his sovereign, and of exemplary piety to God, and charity towards the poor, and of good affection to learning."

The dress of the boys resembles that of the scholars in Christ's Hospital, London; it consists of an upper long robe, of coarse blue cloth, with a yellow woollen stuff petticoat underneath, and blue worsted stockings; the boys wear also a blue cap, resembling the highland bonnet, and a pair of linen bands completes the grotesque costume.

Mr. George Crossley is the present Governor; and the Rev. Wilbraham Bootle Guest is the schoolmaster. The foundations of the college to the north are washed by the Irk, near its confluence with the Irwell, and the site is that on which stood the Prætorium of the Romans, and the baronial mansion of the Gresleys. The library, which occupies the best room in the building, extends through a long gallery, divided into compartments, and has a reading-room attached, in which there are original portraits of Humphry Chetham, the founder; Dean Nowell, formerly a fellow of the college, and himself a Lancashire benefactor; William Whitaker, president of St. John's College, Cambridge; Robert Bolton, an eminent Greek scholar; and John Bradford, the martyr. The feoffees dine in this room at their general meetings at Easter, in July, and in October; and at the last of these meetings in each year a sermon is preached in the collegiate church, by the librarian, in commemoration of the founder. The present librarian is the Rev. Peter Hordern, A. B. and Mr. William Mullis is his deputy.

It has been the singular good fortune of the funds of this charity to be well administered through a period of nearly two centuries, and the present feoffees, who rank amongst the leading persons in this county, and the neighbouring county of Cheshire, emulate the example of their worthy predecessors: They are—

When the number of feoffees is reduced by death or resignation to twelve, the survivors, in virtue of the provisions of the will, are required to fill up the trust by a new election.

To complete the beneficent acts of this ornament to the parish of Manchester and to the county of Lancaster, Mr. Chetham gave £200, to be laid out in books to be fixed in the parish churches of Manchester and Bolton, and in the chapels of Turton, Walmesley, and Gorton; and the sum of £1000, to be expended in books for a public library (of which there was then none in Manchester,) to be deposited in the college, "for the use of scholars, and all others well affected to resort thereto;" and £100, to fit up the library, with the residue of his personal estate for the yearly augmentation of the said library. The right of ordering and disposing the books is vested in the feoffees; it is also ordered that none of the books shall be taken out of the library, and for their better preservation they were ordered to be chained—a precaution which has been found altogether unnecessary. The sum originally applied to the purchase of books, and the salary of the librarian, was £116 a year, but, from the increased value of property, this income has since been quadrupled. Such was the germ of the present College Library, now swelled to 19,000 volumes, and forming a collection worthy of one of the first towns in the kingdom. This is a spring of knowledge most wholesome and refreshing, but unfortunately, like many other springs, it is too seldom tasted, and a very cursory survey of this vast collection of literary lore is sufficient to show, that too many of the gems remain in the casket undisturbed and unenjoyed. The arms of the hospital and library, as registered in the college of arms, and sanctioned by the charter, are those of Humphry Chetham, with this motto—QUOD TUUM TENE, and the seal is circumscribed SIGILLUM HOSPIT. TII HUMFRIDI CHETHAM ARMIGERI.

In theological works the college library holds a deservedly high rank, and its ample stores in this department comprehend a complete set of the fathers: there are also many of the best editions of the Greek and Latin classics; as well as a variety of valuable works in natural history. The manuscripts consist of Kuerden's Essay towards a History of Lancashire—a crude and undigested mass of almost illegible notes—the result of much labour, but requiring much more to render it of any public utility: * The Mancuniensis of Hollingworth,† consisting of a brief history of Manchester from the earliest times to the period of the Commonwealth—compiled with industry, and containing a considerable share of local information: the Lancashire visitation of Flower in 1580, and of Smith in 1599; a number of manuscript pedigrees and other papers, by the late indefatigable Mr. Thomas Barritt; Wickliffe's New Testament, an ancient Psalter, from the monastery of Godstow, and a very curious Pentateuch, &c. The library contains also a number of antiquities and natural curiosities, which are hourly expounded by the blue coat boys, to the edification of admiring visitors. In 1791, a Catalogue of this Library was compiled by the Rev. J. Radcliffe, A. M. the Librarian, entitled "Bibliotheca Chethamensis: sive Bibliothecæ publicæ Mancuniensis ab Humfredo Chetham Armigero Fundatæ Catalogus," with a portrait of the founder.

One of the last facts mentioned in Hollingworth's Mancuniensis is sufficiently indicative of the return of the country to a state of settled peace and confidence: in the year 1652, says he,^a "The towne (of Manchester) was dismantled; the walls throwne down; the gates solud or carried away." This act seems to have been entirely voluntary on the part of the inhabitants and the authorities of the town, after their frail military works had existed for ten years.

Elective
chise.

Although the barons of Manchester held a seat by writ of summons in the upper house of parliament, by successive calls from the twelfth to the sixteenth century, this town was never represented in the commons till the year 1654, when the Lord Protector, desirous to strengthen his government, and willing to stamp a dignity upon a town to which the Commonwealth was so much indebted, issued a writ to the high sheriff of the county of Lancaster, requiring the burgesses of Manchester to return a member to parliament.‡ This mandate the inhabitants duly obeyed, and the following indenture, preserved in the archives of the newly enfranchised borough, and never before published, serves to record the return, and to show the principal parties by whom it was promoted.

Charles Worsley, the member for Manchester returned in this indenture, is known only in the family documents; he made no figure in parliament, and his name occurs but once in the Journals of the Commons during the short session in which he sat. It does not appear from the indenture just quoted, nor from that referred to below, in whom the right of electing the member of parliament for Manchester was vested, nor whether the election was close or popular.

The following year another election for the borough of Manchester took place, on which occasion, it appears from the indenture dated the 12th of August, 1656, that Richard Radcliffe, of Manchester, Esq. was returned, in the writ, which is attested by John Starkey, the high sheriff of the county.

The new member for Manchester was probably of the Radcliffe family, whose mansion was the Lodge, in Poolfold.^a Captain Radcliffe, one of the commanders of the parliamentary troops in the defence of Manchester at the siege, was no doubt of the same family, and possibly the same person. The Radcliffes, of Ordsall, were loyalists, and one of them distinguished himself in the defence of Lathom House.

^a Taken down in 1811.

The career of the Roundheads now drew to a close, and the morning star of the Cavaliers was about once more to shine forth in Manchester with more than its usual effulgence. If a coronation in our own times had not exhibited the evidence of a sudden and radical political conversion, the mind would scarcely have been brought to believe that the coronation pageant at the restoration of the Stuarts was one of the most splendid ceremonies that Manchester, up to that moment, had ever witnessed. The day fixed for this celebration was Tuesday the 23d of April, 1661, and Major John Byron, Nicholas Mosley, Esq. Sir Ralph Assheton, Bart. and the principal authorities of the town, headed and promoted the loyal spectacle. The Rev. Richard Heyricke, warden of the Collegiate Church, who had taken the covenant at the breaking out of the civil wars, but who appears to have had little of the Scotch covenant in his character, preached a sermon, before such of the inhabitants as could find a place in that ample structure, in a strain of high eulogium on the restored monarch; largesses were given to the people to animate their loyalty, and claret ran down the conduit in three separate streams.

Restoration.

In 1672, the Nonconformists were first collected into a body in Manchester, under the ministry of the Rev. Henry Newcome, for whom the original Presbyterian Chapel in Acres Field was built.

About this time Dr. Richard Kuerden began to collect materials for his projected History of Lancashire; in his M.S. he describes Manchester as having been an ancient Roman garrison, and since the Norman conquest a barony of the Gresleys, and afterwards of the De la Warres. "Manchester," he adds, "is a fayre and spacious town, adorned with many streets and a spacious market-place. It is wattered and almost surrounded with specious rivers, as with that of the Irk upon the north, and partly on the east with the Irwell, and upon the west with Medloe, and upon the south, and three miles from it, with the Mersey, the concurs of them all, (is) the boundary both of the parish of Manchester, and likewise of the county of Lancashire. The town is pleasantly situated, and, as Mr. Cambden sayth, excelleth all the towns about it, and it is the fayrest and most populous in all the county, hath many streets, and a spacious market-place; a church collegiate, with a Mr. Warden —* and fellows, two chaplains, organ, singing men and quorister boys, a colledg in it, with a sumpts library, and endo(wed) with a 100lb. per ann. for ever by Mr. —* to replenish it with books, in hope a preparative to become in time a future university, a hospital for —* poore children in blew coats, with a mr. to instruct them, and other necessarys provided for them, and fitt them better for the service of the nation by mathematical learning. Manchester is a fayre built town, more citty like than any other town or borow in the county of Lancaster, being of great antiquity amongst the Brigantes in the British time, and by them called Caer Manguid, as the learned and famous Archbishop Usher, of Armagh, conjectures, and of the most antient coppys of Ninius, his catalogue of cities remaining in Brittain. So termed from the Brittysh word main or man, signifying a rocky ground; and the Romans, after they had subjected this island under their government, did usually, in their proper idiome, either prefix or suffix some part of the antient Brittish name in use, derived from the nature of the situation of the place, soil: (scilicet,) namely maine, upon a rocky ground, and there-upon called Man-cunium, sometime Manucsum, otherwhiltt Manucio, ever retaining part of its antient Brittish name." Some other observations are added in the same style, but those already given will suffice as a specimen of Dr. Kuerden's "Lancashire," and as a description of the town of Manchester one hundred and fifty years ago.

child.

An infant Elias appeared about this time in Manchester, in the person of Charles Bennet, a child three years old, who, according to the oracles of the day, "did speak Latine, Greek, and Hebrew, though never taught those languages, and answered all questions relating to the bible in a wonderful manner; and who, at his own earnest request, was taken from Manchester to London to be presented to the king." What reception he met with at court, or what afterwards became of this "wonderful child," does not appear, but the publications of which he was the subject warrant the supposition, that a little education, infused into a precocious mind, in an age not remarkable for early instruction, produced the prodigy, without the gift either of prophecy or witchcraft.

The revolution of 1688 does not appear to have occasioned any popular sensation at Manchester; nor did king William, when he visited Liverpool on his way to Ireland, take this place in his route.*

Dr. Aikin, in his description of the state of manners and domestic economy at the beginning of the 18th century, says, that at this time it was usual for the manufacturers of the first rank to repair to their warehouses before six o'clock in the morning, accompanied by their apprentices, and such of their children as had left school; at seven they returned to breakfast, where they made a hearty meal out of one large dish of water pottage, placed in the middle of the table, which they cooled and liquified by dipping each spoonful into a bowl of milk. When persons of this description went to London, the prevailing luxuries in which they indulged were Brunswick mum, strong beer, and Virginia tobacco. Such of their daughters as were taught music, thrummed an instrument called a spinet, which cost about £5; and the wives of persons in genteel life entered upon their afternoon visiting parties at two o'clock, that they might be enabled to return home at an hour sufficiently early to attend the evening prayers at the old church, which commenced at four o'clock. Soon after this time tea began to be drank in company by persons of respectability, instead of home-made wine; a pastry school was opened in the town for the instruction of young ladies in the art of confectionary; a boarding-school was also opened for the first time in Manchester; and a dancing school followed, as the natural appendage, for the initiation of persons of both sexes in that polite accomplishment.

Up to this period the collegiate church had been sufficient to accommodate the inhabitants; but in the year 1708, an act passed for erecting St. Anne's Church, which was placed in a corn field, called the Acres Field, and in front of which the square of the same name rose up in a few years, along with the lower part of King's-street, Hulme's-street, and Ridge-field. Lady Anne Bland, the heiress of the Mosley family, and the patroness of St. Anne's Church, was at this period a distinguished supporter of all that was elegant in manners and enterprising in improvements, and from Sir John's residence at Hulme Hall, fashion took its tone, and liberality its spirit. The Roman altar dedicated to Fortune, was placed in the gardens belonging to this house, and it could not perhaps have found a more appropriate station.

St.
Anne's.

The rebellion of 1715, the object of which was to place upon the British throne the Chevalier de St. George, son of James II. excited considerable sensation in Manchester. A strong attachment to the exiled family began thus early to display itself, under the influence of which a riotous mob, headed by one Thomas Syddall, a peruke maker, rose and pulled down the presbyterian chapel in Acres Field, which was then the only dissenting chapel in Manchester. The firm attachment of the dissenters to the house of Brunswick brought upon them this outrage, but their chapel was speedily rebuilt at the public cost, and Syddall, with a number of his followers, committed to Lancaster castle for the offence. This ill-fated man was liberated from the castle just in time to enable him to join the rebels at Preston, where he was taken prisoner, and, being removed to Manchester, he was executed in this place on the 11th of February, 1716, along with William Harris, Stephen Sagar, Joseph Porter, and John Finch, for taking part in that rebellion. At this time public intelligence travelled very deliberately. There was not a single newspaper in the county; and before the news of the arrival of the rebels in Preston could be well received, Generals Wills and Carpenter had made their whole army prisoners.

THE REGULATIONS OF THE MANCHESTER POST-OFFICE, six years afterwards, serve to show how much more patient our ancestors were than their posterity, both as regarded their political and their commercial communications: The posts, both to London and the North, left and returned to Manchester only three times a week, and the public were officially informed, "That it would be best to bring the letters the night before the going out of the post, because the accounts and bags were usually made up over-night." Eight days were then required to effect the interchange of a post letter with London, which is now completed in 60 hours.

 prietors, residing partly in Liverpool and partly in Manchester, obtained an act "for making the rivers Mersey and Irwell navigable from Liverpool to Manchester." The advantage to both these places has proved incalculable, and every day's experience bears testimony to the soundness of that sagacity which suggested the undertaking.† The history of the inland navigation of the county is already composed and inserted in the first volume of this work,* from which it will be seen that the Mersey and Irwell navigation took the lead in the race of public enterprise.

First newspaper.

The prosperity and increase of the town now called for a medium of public intelligence, and in the year 1737, a newspaper was established here by a person of the name of R. Whitworth, called "The Manchester Magazine," which, with the stamp, was sold at the very moderate price of three-halfpence.

A second attempt of the house of Stuart to regain the crown of England, made with much more energy, and with fairer prospects of success than that by which it was preceded, threw the whole kingdom into a state of agitation, and in no place was the effect more powerful than in Manchester. The history of this rebellion will be found in a preceding page.^a After marching from Scotland, through Cumberland and Westmoreland, at the head of an army of about 6,000 men, Prince Charles Edward, the pretender's son, and the reputed heir apparent to the throne, entered Lancashire on the 24th of November, 1745; when, taking the route of Lancaster and Preston, he proceeded to Manchester. The expectation that the inhabitants in every place through which they passed would hail them as deliverers, and flock to their standard of

had been deplorably disappointed. Their movements, they began to conceive, had been too rapid for the public disposition in their favour to manifest itself; here, therefore, they determined to make a halt, and to recruit their numbers by beat of drum. The avant courier was a serjeant, accompanied by a drummer, with a sprightly girl in their train. This trio entered Manchester on the 23th of November, and such was the public panic, or the general disaffection, that they in reality surprised and carried the town. In less than an hour after their arrival they began to beat up for volunteers, and, in the course of the afternoon of the same day, they obtained thirty recruits, to each of whom a white cockade was given, and a bounty of five guineas promised. About nine o'clock at night, the vanguard arrived, consisting of about one hundred horsemen, who gave out that quarters would be wanted for 10,000 troops.

On the 29th, the main army reached Manchester, from Wigan and Leigh, where they had halted for the night. About two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, Prince Charles Edward,* wearing a light plaid belted with a blue sash, and mounting a blue bonnet, with a white rose in front, marched into Manchester, surrounded by a chosen band of Highlanders, and took up his quarters in Market-street Lane, at the residence of Mr. Dickenson, from that circumstance called "The Palace."^a In the course of the day the public crier was sent round the town, to require that all persons who had any duties to pay, or any public money in their hands, should pay the amount into the hands of Secretary Murray, at the Palace, taking the receipt of this officer as their discharge. As evening approached, the bellman was again dispatched, to announce that there would that night be an illumination, in honour of the arrival of the prince.^b The illuminations accordingly took place; bonfires were made; and the bells rung joyfully; but the treasury was not much replenished till a peremptory demand was made upon the inhabitants. Many of the communications at the head quarters were made with the intervention of a green silk curtain, which was suspended in the room of audience, and through which, it is said, even the master of the house, from prudential motives, communicated with his guest without seeing him. The boroughreeve, Jas. Waller, of Ridgefield, Esq. was made the reluctant organ for communicating the proclamations of the rebel army to the people; but the Rev. Mr. Clayton celebrated, in strains of eloquence, the arrival of the prince, in the collegiate church, for which act of disaffection to the reigning sovereign he was afterwards degraded. A young clergyman, of the name of Coppock, lately from the university, received the appointment of chaplain to the prince, and subsequently was preferred by him to the see of Carlisle.

* It is estimated that 1000 tons of merchandise now pass daily between Manchester and Liverpool; so that 40,000 pack-horses would be required to perform the present carrying trade between those two places, which would, when in marching order, form a continuous line, in close array, of upwards of 80 miles.

On the 30th, the whole of the rebel army, with the artillery and baggage, consisting of sixteen pieces of cannon, a number of covered waggons, and about one hundred laden horses, were assembled in the town and neighbourhood of Manchester. The recruiting service went on briskly; and from two to three hundred young men, chiefly of the lower class, were dignified with the name of the "Manchester regiment," of which Francis Townley, Esq. was appointed commander. Thomas Theodorus Deacon, Charles Deacon, and Robert Deacon, the sons of a nonjuring minister, catching the contagion of disloyalty, became officers in this corps, and George Fletcher, a linen draper in Salford; James Dawson, of St. John's college, Cambridge, son of Dr. Dawson, of Manchester; and John Beswick, a linen draper, in Manchester, all fired with the ambition of military renown, and not very scrupulous about the cause in which it was won, were placed in the rank of captains. Thomas Chadwick, bred a tallow chandler, in Manchester, was appointed lieutenant; and Thomas Syddall, the son of the peruke maker who was executed at Manchester, in 1716, for taking part in the rebellion of 1715, was appointed adjutant. Both officers and men wore white cockades, and the authority of the colonel was indicated by the addition of a plaid sash. The other officers had each a broad sword by his side, and a brace of pistols in his girdle. Before the Manchester regiment entered upon their campaign, they had the honour to be reviewed by their prince, the young chevalier; and Colonel Townley, as if foreseeing their destiny, selected the church-yard for the field of review.

* This Prince had visited Manchester the year before the rebellion, and was entertained for several weeks at Ancoats Hall, the hospitable mansion of Sir Edward Mosley, Bart.

CHAP. III. The contributions levied upon the town amounted to three thousand pounds, and many of the horses within reach were put into requisition, either to mount the cavalry, or to convey the baggage. The conduct of the highlanders was in some instances rapacious, wasteful, and offensive, but in general the troops conducted themselves with moderation, and the behaviour of their officers was conciliatory and even courteous.

Advance. On the 1st of December, the rebel army quitted Manchester, marching in two columns to the south; several of the bridges had been broken down to impede their progress, and they were obliged to construct rafts and temporary bridges, by cutting down trees. The artillery and horses were taken over the Mersey at Cheadle; and Prince Charles Edward himself waded on foot, at the head of his regiments, across that river, at Stockport, immersed to the middle in water.

Retreat. The two columns having united at Macclesfield, marched to Derby, where they arrived on the 4th; here a council of war was called, at which it was determined to retreat to the north, to avoid the danger with which they were menaced, of being hemmed in between the armies of Marshal Wade and the Duke of Cumberland. On the arrival of the prince and his retreating army at Manchester, on the 8th December, their reception was much more cool than that which they had experienced in advance, and some show of resistance was made to their entering the town. Pressed in the rear by the approach of the duke's advanced guard, which was then at Macclesfield, their operations admitted of no delay; their stop in Manchester was therefore only for a single day; but during that time they imposed a contribution of five thousand pounds upon the inhabitants, and actually levied one moiety of the sum under a threat of sacking the town if the money was not produced by mid-day on the 10th.* Continuing their route northward, they reached Carlisle on the 19th, with the Duke of Cumberland's horse pressing upon their rear. Here the main body of the pretender's army remained only one day, but, on his departure, the prince left about four hundred men in the garrison of Carlisle, consisting principally of Scotch forces, and of the Manchester regiment, assuring them that he would speedily send reinforcements to that city, to relieve the garrison. Two days afterwards, the duke arrived before Carlisle, and commenced the siege. The garrison, aware of the fate which awaited them if they were taken prisoners, made a gallant but unavailing defence. The Liverpool Blues, and other regiments, arrived to swell the number of the besiegers, but the promised reinforcements from Prince Charles Edward were looked for by the garrison in vain. On the 30th of December, a white flag, suspended from the citadel by order of the governor, John Hamilton, intimated the wish of the garrison to capitulate on terms. To this intimation his royal highness the Duke of Cumberland replied—That the only conditions he could grant to rebels was, that they should not be put to the sword, but reserved for the king's pleasure. Hard as were these conditions, the garrison was obliged to accept them, and in the course of the day Carlisle was surrendered to the king's troops. The Rev. Thomas Coppock, the reputed Bishop of Carlisle, was taken prisoner, along with the Manchester regiment, then reduced to one hundred and fourteen men, and with so little ceremony was this dignitary treated, that he was brought to trial at Carlisle, robed in his gown and cassock, and, being found guilty of high treason, he was drawn, hanged, and quartered in that city, on the 18th of October following. The officers of the Manchester regiment were sent to London for trial, and their fate has already been recorded;^a but it may not be improper here to repeat, that Colonel Francis Townley, Captains Thomas Theodorus Deacon, James Dawson, John Beswick, George Fletcher, and Andrew Blood; and Lieutenant Thomas Chadwick, and Adjutant Thomas Syddall, were executed on Kennington Common, on the 30th of July, 1746, with all the cruel inflictions to which persons guilty of high treason were subject. After the execution, the heads of Captain Deacon and Adjutant Syddall were brought down to Manchester, and stuck upon the exchange in this place, where they remained for about a week—execrated by many as a disgrace to their town and county, and revered by others as martyrs. It is recorded of the father of Captain Deacon, that he never afterwards passed the exchange, where his son's head had been exhibited, without making a profound obeisance, and some others of the more ardent of the pretender's friends imitated his example.

In the whole of this romantic history, no incident is more striking than that commemorated by the pen of Shenstone, the poet: Captain James Dawson was, it appears, betrothed to a young lady, who, impelled by phrenzy and despair, determined to accompany him to the scaffold. Summoning all her fortitude, she witnessed his fate with a calm and steady eye, but the effort was more than human nature could sustain—

“ The dismal scene was o’er and past,
 “ The lover’s mournful hearse retir’d;
 “ The maid drew back her languid head,
 “ And, sighing forth his name, expired.”

James Bradshaw, a captain in the Manchester regiment, did not remain at Carlisle, but accompanied the prince's forces on their retreat into Scotland, and fought in the decisive battle of Culloden; the same fate, however, awaited him which befel so many of his brother officers; being taken prisoner by the Duke of Cumberland, he was sent to London, where he was tried for high treason, and, being found guilty, was executed on Kennington Common, on the 28th of November, 1746.

The conservators of the king's peace in Manchester did not escape censure for their conduct during the rebellion; and in the year 1747, the constables, Messrs. Bowker and Ogden, were arraigned at Lancaster, on a charge of high treason. This charge, which was feebly supported, they had the good fortune to repel, by showing that any act performed by them in favour of the pretender was compulsory, and the jury, without hesitation, pronounced an honourable acquittal.

The animosities produced by the insurrection of 1745 long outlived the rebellion itself, and the term Jacobite, applied to the advocates of the divine right of kings, was only superseded in the party nomenclature of Manchester, by the term Jacobin, introduced at the breaking out of the French revolution, and applied to the supporters of the Majesty of the people. Happily both these opprobrious terms are now obsolete, and at no period in its history has this town been more free from the feuds of party than at the present moment.

Whatever distractions might prevail in Manchester on the subject of politics, there has at all times been a considerable degree of unanimity in the pursuits of trade, and the town has come out of two civil wars without having experienced any permanent interruption to its commercial prosperity. At the end of the wars of the commonwealth, we find Manchester improved in wealth and population, and in the wars between the rival houses of Brunswick and Stuart, the march of a successful industry was not less obvious. The number of gentlemen's carriages kept in Manchester, by the commercial classes, when his late Majesty George III. ascended the throne, in 1760, did not exceed three, and those of very recent standing, but at the end of the same monarch's reign, in 1820, they had increased to twenty times that number. The luxury and convenience of hackney coaches was, at the former of these periods, scarcely felt; the opposite extremities of the town were within a few minutes' walk of each other, and the first attempt to establish these vehicles, made in the year 1750, failed,* sedan-chairs being then considered preferable vehicles. Twenty years afterwards, stage-coach travelling was much more deliberate than at present; and persons are now living, who well remember travelling to Liverpool by the Diligence, which left Manchester at six o'clock in the morning, breakfasted at Irlam, dined at Warrington, drank tea at Prescott, and dropped comfortably into Liverpool just at night-fall! But this was not a luxury to be enjoyed every day, and hence we find, in an advertisement, issued on the 24th of May, 1773, "that the Manchester, Warrington, and Liverpool stage-coach set out from the Spread Eagle, in Salford, on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday in every week, and returned thither on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday," and that "travellers would meet with friendly usage, and good accommodation at the inns on the road."

In 1752, that invaluable institution, the General Infirmary, was opened, of which more in another place.

In the year following, an act of parliament was obtained for the erection of St. Mary's church, on the inclosure called the Parsonage Green.—On the 22d of June, at midnight, in the same year, the shock of an earthquake was felt in Manchester; the tremulous motion of the earth continued for the space of a minute, and was accompanied by a noise resembling the rushing of air into a vacuum. This earthquake was felt at Radcliffe and Oldham, and extended both into Yorkshire and Cheshire.—In the month of September, an act of enormous atrocity was committed: a man of the name of Grindret, residing in Salford, a woolcomber by trade, administered poison, mixed in treacle and brimstone, to his wife and two children, with such fatal success as to occasion the death of all of them. For this offence he was brought to trial at Lancaster, and being found guilty, he was executed; after which his body was brought to Manchester, and hung in chains on a gibbet, at the end of Cross-lane, near Windsor bridge, where many persons now living remember to have seen the revolting spectacle.

Till the year 1753, a claim was made, by the warden and fellows of Manchester college, upon the weavers of that town, of four pence per loom at Easter, in every year, in lieu of the tithes on the clear yearly gains and profits arising from their art in weaving. This demand was now resisted, and the court of assize at Lancaster, before which the cause was tried, decided in favour of the weavers. The origin of this claim is not well ascertained, but it is alleged that in early times, when the town was surrounded by forests, the privilege of cutting wood for fuel, and for the construction and repair of their looms, was granted by the clergy to the weavers, and that this payment was an annual acknowledgment for that privilege, which had, however, ceased long before the loom-tithe was abolished.

For four years in succession the price of the necessities of life had been unusually high, and in the year 1757 the scarcity of provisions, both before and after the harvest, was so extreme, as to produce riots and insubordination amongst the labouring classes. One of the most serious of these riots took place in Shude Hill Market, on Tuesday, the 6th of June, on which occasion the provisions brought by the farmers and dealers were seized by the populace, and a considerable quantity of them destroyed. The near approach of harvest rendered the people in some degree patient under their privations, but when that anxiously looked for period had arrived and passed, without producing any material reduction in the price of corn, their patience became exhausted, and the corn dealers and millers were charged, (such was the folly of the day,) with occasioning the high price of the necessities of life. The rich as well as the poor joined in the popular cry against these traduced classes; sermons were preached, expatiating upon their cruelty and injustice; the periodical press sought favour from its readers by giving into the general delusion; and the following epigram, from the pen of Mr. Byrom, first published in 1737, and directed against the tenants of "The School Corn Mills," who, from their spare habits, were nicknamed Skin and Bone, was now revived:—

"BONE and SKIN, two Millers thin,

"Would starve the town, or near it;

"But be it known to SKIN and BONE,

"That FLESH and BLOOD can't bear it."

The natural effect of all this inflammation and distress was another riot, of a much more serious character than that by which it was preceded: On Saturday, the 15th of November, a large body of men from Saddleworth, Oldham, Ashton-under-Line, and other places, armed with implements of husbandry, and other rustic weapons, met on Newton Heath, and, having destroyed a corn mill belonging to Mr. Hawthorn, at Clayton, about three miles from Manchester, they proceeded to the market-place, upon Shude Hill, where they were met and resisted by the high sheriff, James Bayley, Esq. attended by a number of the principal inhabitants on horseback, supported by a party of soldiers. Rendered in some degree desperate by their necessities, and deceived into the belief that the soldiers felt too much for their situation to fire upon them, the rioters proceeded to acts of outrage; some of them seized the provisions in the market, while others pelted the soldiers with stones, with such violence, that one soldier was killed on the spot, and nine others wounded. Remonstrance and admonition having failed, the soldiers were ordered to fire, and a species of engagement ensued, popularly called Shude Hill Fight, in which four of the rioters were killed, (amongst whom was a boy, who was shot in a tree,) and fifteen wounded. This fatal example dispersed the mob, and restored the public tranquillity, which was afterwards preserved by the firm, but conciliatory conduct of the authorities of the town, and by the charitable contributions of the benevolent, for the relief of the distressed inhabitants.

The necessity under which the inhabitants of Manchester were placed by ancient custom,^a to grind their corn, of all kinds, at the School Mills, paying for such service one twenty-fourth part of the grain by way of toll or mulcture, had long been a source of popular discontent, as well as of much litigation; and in times of scarcity, the grievance was felt with peculiar pressure. The mills, indeed, were incompetent to the duty of grinding corn for so large a population; and the toll taken frequently exceeded the quantity prescribed. The government, sympathizing with the sufferers, and willing to abolish so unpopular an impost, introduced a bill into parliament, entitled, "An act for discharging the inhabitants of the town of Manchester from the custom of grinding their corn and grain, except malt, at certain water corn mills in the said town, called the School Mills; and for making a proper recompense to the feoffees of such mills." This bill, which passed into a law, provided that, from and after the 29th of September, 1759, the inhabitants of Manchester should be freed and discharged forever from the custom and obligation of grinding their corn at the School Mills, malt only excepted, which they are still required to grind at these mills, and for which they pay, according to the provisions of that act, at the rate of 1s. a load, of six Winchester bushels, including the charge for fetching and returning. The recompense made to the feoffees for the diminution of the right of soke, was a power to sell or to exchange part of the estate for the benefit of the trust, to which was added, an exemption from certain rates and taxes upon the trust property. The sum now paid for grinding to the feoffees, who retain the School Mills in their own hands, it must be allowed, is very moderate, and the privilege of the mills is said to be a signal benefit to the inhabitants of Manchester; the compulsory provision is, however, not much relished, even in its present modified form; and the common brewers, the great consumers of malt, are so little anxious to enjoy the privilege, that they have nearly all, as if by compact, established themselves in Salford, Cheetham, Ardwick, Chorlton Row, and Hulme, all which townships, though in the immediate vicinity of Manchester, are without the limits of the malt soke. When the common oven, mentioned in the Inquisition of John de la Warre,^b at which all the inhabitants of Manchester were required to bake their bread, was abolished, does not appear, but an oven capable of effecting this service at present would require to be of very extraordinary capacity.

In the last year of the reign of George II. those stupendous works, already described,^c which have associated the name of the Duke of Bridgewater with the town of Manchester, were commenced, but their completion was reserved for that great epoch of improvements which was now about to display itself in the county of Lancaster generally, but more especially in the towns of Manchester and Liverpool.

THE modern history of Manchester abounds with events of local and general interest, amongst the most prominent of which may be mentioned the progress of commerce, manufactures, and population. On these subjects we have already treated in the general history of the county,^a but the information there communicated will require to be somewhat amplified, and all the public institutions of recent establishment remain yet to be described or enumerated.

The coronations of James II. William and Mary, Queen Anne, and the first two sovereigns of the Brunswick line, passed over without any public processions in Manchester, but the coronation of George III. under whose rule the town was destined to attain to a degree of wealth and prosperity hitherto unexampled, was celebrated here with as much display of loyal attachment as was exhibited on the restoration of Charles II. Processions, consisting of tradesmen, manufacturers, and artisans, headed by the authorities of the town, paraded the principal streets, in the manner of the Preston Guild processions; at night the town was brilliantly illuminated, and a ball was given at the Exchange Assembly Rooms to upwards of seven hundred ladies and gentlemen.

tion.

A scheme existed soon after his Majesty ascended the throne, to erect Manchester into a borough, under the sanction of an act of parliament, or of a royal charter. The government of the town under the new regime was to be confided to a certain number of the principal inhabitants, consisting of one-third high churchmen, another third moderates, and the remainder protestant dissenters; and the management of its parochial concerns was to be placed in the hands of this neutral triumvirate. The prospect of perpetual amity rendered the design extremely popular with all parties, and a building was erected, somewhat prematurely, as a species of workhouse, in which the industrious poor were to be employed, and the idle and dissolute corrected. These golden dreams were of short duration; an apprehension that the low party, by a coalition with the moderates, would monopolize all the authority of the embryo borough, dissolved the pleasing illusion; and for a number of years the triumph of that sagacity which foresaw and averted the im-

 ings intended for the workhouse stood on the left hand of the descent into Miller's street, and as no person would either pay for their erection, or claim the property, they were appropriated by a number of poor families to their own use, but they are now taken down. Directly opposite to this range, Mr. Arkwright, (afterwards Sir Richard) first set to work his machines for carding and spinning cotton, in Manchester,

It does not appear that Manchester in any period of its history has had the honour to entertain a British monarch; but CHRISTIAN VII. King of Denmark, on his tour through England, visited the recently formed works of the Duke of Bridgewater, and lodged with his suite at the Bull's Head Inn.* Five years afterwards the Russian princess, Czartoriski, the duchess of Oldenburgh of her day, came from Birmingham to inspect the excavations and aqueducts at Worsley; during her stay in Manchester, she was shown through several of the principal works, and expressed much satisfaction with the various operations of the manufacture, as well as with the fabrics when they were completed. In the year 1804, the Duke of Gloucester, and his son, Prince William, visited Manchester, to review the volunteer corps. The Archdukes John and Lewis, of Austria, also visited this place, on the return of a general peace, accompanied by a number of scientific men; and it is probable that their tour, extending as it did over the principal commercial and manufacturing districts of England, enlarged their own minds, but there is no reason to suppose, that what was seen, either by the archdukes or their attendants, improved in any material degree the manufactures of their country. The grand-duke Nicholas, brother of the Emperor Alexander, honoured Manchester with a visit on the 3d of January, 1817, and expressed, as he no doubt felt, much surprise at the extent and perfection of the manufactures.

By a singular coincidence the years of the princely visits in 1768, 1804, and 1815, are memorable in the history of Manchester, for three of the highest floods ever remembered at this place. The waters of the Irwell acting through a succession of ages upon the sandstone rock at Hunt's Bank, at the descent of the Roman road, have so undermined the foundations of some of the houses, that their situation has become perilous, and fatal accidents have already happened at this place. Early in the morning of the 29th of July, in the year 1814, the houses inhabited by Thomas Robinson and William Hill, and part of the soapery of Messrs. Fogg & Co. slid from their foundations, and fell into the river. The consequences were fatal; Robinson and his eldest daughter both perished, and Mr. Hall, the foreman in the soapery, shared the same fate. Three others of Robinson's children were precipitated into the river, but were taken out alive, though so much bruised, as to be sent to the Infirmary.

During the reign of the late king, as well as in that of his royal predecessor, the tranquillity of the town of Manchester was several times disturbed by riotous assemblages of the populace, collected on account of the high price of the necessaries of life, under the delusive hope that the vengeance they denounced against the growers and the dealers would reduce the price of provisions. In the second year of the king's reign, the colliers of Oldham and Saddleworth repaired to Manchester in great numbers, and, after demolishing the warehouses of two or three of the corn dealers, they obliged others to sell their stocks at a price which they thought reasonable. The return of a season of scarcity collected fresh mobs, and the terror produced by their presence was so great as to deter the farmers from coming to market, and thereby to threaten the town with an actual famine, till the civil authorities re-inspired public confidence, by assuring those who produced, as well as those who dealt in provisions, that they should be protected against violence. Four years afterwards the dearth again returned, when a proclamation was issued by the police offering premiums to such persons as brought, each market day, the largest quantity of wheaten flour and oatmeal to the Manchester market. In 1812, the town was greatly agitated; the provision riots were renewed, and a number of the rioters, charged with entering the premises of the dealers and seizing and conveying away their property, were sent to Lancaster castle, where four of them, including an aged woman, were executed for the offence.

As this return will be again adverted to in the proper place, it may be sufficient here to observe, that Salford alone contains a larger population at the present moment, than was contained in both Manchester and Salford fifty years ago, and that the primary cause of this increase of inhabitants is to be found in the vast improvements of machinery, which at this time began to be pretty generally introduced into the manufacture of cottons.

The inhabitants, having ascertained their own numbers, became animated by a spirit of public improvement, which has had its alternate seasons of activity and torpor, but which has of late attained an energy unexampled in the annals of Manchester. Under the influence of this disposition, St. Mary's-gate, Cateaton-street, Old Millgate, and Exchange-street, were all widened and improved in 1766-7. A native of Manchester, who wrote in 1783, and who was himself of course perfectly familiar with the town before the alteration, gives the following description:—

Public
ments.

“ Before the present avenue was opened between St. Anne's-square and the Exchange,” says he, “ the communication went under the old coffee-house fronting the Exchange, in a line with the corner shop, towards Market-street-lane—that for carriages through a narrow gateway, which was further disgraced by a cobbler's stall, and over this, by narrow stairs, in the true garret-stile, there was one way to the old coffee-house rooms above, those below being let for shops. There was just room for foot-passengers to avoid carriages on that side where the stairs stood, by keeping in a line with them, and bolting through the gateway when there was an opportunity. The other communication from the Market-place (to the square) for the people on foot, was through an entry which led to the great stairs of the old coffee-house,

CHAP. and across a small court where a pump stood, at the head of the only
 IV. passage this way; which was so gloomy and dismal, even at noon day, that it deservedly acquired the name of 'The Dark-entry.'"

Before these improvements were made, Old Millgate, Cateaton-street, and St. Mary's-gate were so narrow, that they would scarcely admit the passage of a modern sized carriage, without endangering the safety of the people on the foot-path; compared with them, Market-street lane was thought a spacious street, and it was at that time pronounced to be much too commodious to stand in need of alteration. Several meetings of the inhabitants were held, before the project for widening the streets communicating with the Market-place was finally resolved upon. The improvement, it was agreed on all hands, was absolutely necessary, but a difference of opinion arose as to the mode of defraying the expense; on the one hand, it was held that toll-gates should be placed at all the principal entrances to the town, to raise the requisite funds, but it was ultimately much more wisely determined that the money should be raised by subscription, and the sum of £10,771 3s. 6d. was subscribed by public-spirited individuals for the purpose.

The 72d. A subscription for an object more popular was entered into in 1777, namely, to raise a regiment of volunteers "to be employed against the rebels in America." This fine body of men was called the 72d or Manchester Regiment, and their gallant conduct on the rock of Gibraltar, when it was attacked by the Spaniards and defended by General Elliott, obtained for them lasting renown. On their return to England, they were received in Manchester with enthusiasm, and their colours were deposited with much ceremony in the Collegiate-church, from whence they were removed to the college, where they still remain as trophies of the gallantry of the regiment and of the patriotic ardour of the town.

On Sunday, the 14th of September, in the same year that the 72d regiment was embodied, this town and all the surrounding country to an extent of thirty miles was visited by an earthquake, during the time of divine service. The shocks succeeded each other with so much rapidity and violence, that the congregations in the churches were thrown into a state of extreme alarm, and a loud report, which accompanied the last convulsive throe, wrought so powerfully upon the fears of some of the congregations, that they rushed to the church doors, apprehensive that the buildings in which they were inclosed would fall and bury them in the ruins; "nor is it to be wondered at that they were so terrified, as the pillars and walls evidently tottered, and the motion was so great as to toll the bells in the Collegiate and St. Mary's churches."^a

When the increase of wealth and population lead to the establishment of societies for the improvement of the mind and the extension of science, they produce their legitimate influence; of this nature is the Manchester LITERARY and PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY, established in the year 1781, which in every stage of its existence has shed a lustre upon the town. In this society the establishment of Mechanics' Institutes, now become so general, was first suggested by the late Rev. Dr. Barnes in the year 1785, by whom it was recommended "to provide a public repository for chemical and mechanical knowledge, as a Mechanics School, for the education of young tradesmen and manufacturers."^b

Though Gloucester had the honour to originate, Manchester was amongst the first places in the kingdom to adopt, the SUNDAY SCHOOL system; and, as early as the year 1786, the number of children attached to these establishments in the town amounted to 2,836. In the same year an academic institution, called "THE MANCHESTER ACADEMY," for the education of young men intended for the ministry amongst the Presbyterian Dissenters, was established in this place, which, after remaining here for seventeen years, was removed to York, and is now continued under the superintendence of the Rev. Charles Wellbeloved, the Rev. Wm. Turner, jun. M. A. and the Rev. John Kenrick, M. A.

In the year 1784, an act was passed by parliament, on the suggestion of Mr. Pitt, the recently appointed Chancellor of the Exchequer, imposing a duty, usually called the Fustian Tax, of one penny per yard "upon all bleached cotton manufactures." By the operation of this act, the excise laws were introduced into the cotton trade, and the immediate consequence, as felt in Manchester and throughout the whole of the manufacturing districts of Lancashire, was injurious in the extreme. To obtain the removal of this fatal impediment to trade, two of the principal merchants of Manchester, Mr. Thomas Walker and Mr. Thomas Richardson, were deputed at the opening of the next parliament to wait upon the minister, and their representations, backed as they were by petitions from all the manufacturing towns, and supported by the powerful interest of the Duke of Bridgewater, proved so effectual, that the obnoxious tax was repealed on the motion of Mr. Pitt himself, seconded by Mr. Fox. The joy excited by this triumph of sound policy was manifested in a splendid public procession in honour of the delegates, on their return from London, to each of whom was presented a superb cup and stand, bearing an inscription expressive of the feelings of gratitude entertained towards them by their fellow-citizens.

For many ages the house of correction at Hunt's Bank, now occupied partly as the Castle Inn, had served for a common gaol, as well for the town of Manchester, as for the whole hundred of Salford; but, in the year 1782, an act of parliament was obtained for the erection of the New Bailey prison, on the right bank of the Irwell; and on the 22d of May, 1787, the foundations of this gaol were laid by Thomas Butterworth Bayley, Esq. the Chairman of the quarter sessions. In three years the building was completed; and in April 1790, it was opened for the reception of prisoners. The New Bailey prison is conducted on the penitentiary system, recommended by the immortal Howard, to whom, by the inscription affixed to the foundation stone, it is dedicated. The prisoners are classed according to their sex, age, and delinquencies; and, instead of being allowed to congregate in idle groups during the day, recounting their criminal exploits, and hardening each other in vice, they are employed under task-masters, according to their several abilities, in the mechanical arts, as shoemakers, tailors, &c. or in the different branches of the cotton business. Their labour is made so productive, that during the last year their earnings amounted to £3477. 2s. 9d., while the whole cost of their provisions came but to £2894. 19s. 11d. leaving a balance of £587. 2s. 10d. The total number of prisoners during the year averaged 603^a per day. From the 22d of January, 1794, to the 8th of January, 1825, no fewer than 39,377 persons were committed to this gaol, of which number 1208 males and 128 females have been transported. A tread mill, of eight wheels, upon each of which fifteen persons are employed, is in operation here for the rasping of dyewoods; and there are also 272 weaving shops, in different parts of the premises.

Political Feuds.

The centenary of the revolution of 1688 was celebrated in Manchester with great pomp. In the evening of the 4th of November, a ball and supper were given at the assembly rooms, on which occasion the ladies displayed orange-coloured ribands; and on the following day the landing of King William "of glorious and immortal memory," was commemorated by the ringing of bells, the firing of the military in St. Anne's square, and a sumptuous public entertainment, at which one hundred and thirty of the principal gentlemen of the town sat down to dinner under the presidency of Thomas Walker, Esq. the borough-reeve. In the following year, the recovery of his Majesty from a state of mental alienation produced general rejoicings throughout the country, and Manchester was splendidly illuminated on that occasion.

The politics of Manchester do not belong to a work purely topographical; but it may not be improper to observe, that in the period between the breaking out of the French revolution, and the commencement of the war with France, and for some time after, this town was much agitated by political animosities.* The populace, then strongly attached to the policy of the governing party, entered into these unhappy feuds with great violence, and in the evening of the 10th of December, 1792, the house of Mr. Thomas Walker, (late one of the delegates for obtaining the removal of the fustian tax) was assailed by a riotous mob, and his premises were saved from destruction only by the resolute conduct which Mr. Walker and his friends displayed in their defence. A political society, of which Mr. Walker was a prominent member, had been established in this town in October, 1790, professedly "to effect a reform in the representation of the people in Parliament;" but it was imputed to the members of this institution, that they sought the overthrow of the English government in church and state, and to substitute in its stead the French system of democracy. This opinion, erroneous as it unquestionably was, led to an attack by the mob on the premises of Messrs. Faulkner and Birch, the printers of the Manchester Herald, which advocated, with a warmth that belonged to those times, a reform in parliament, and deprecated a war with France. For some time the rioters contented themselves with collecting in a menacing manner in front of the printing-office, exclaiming "God save the King!" but, at length they proceeded to acts of outrage; the property of the unfortunate printers was destroyed, and they were obliged to seek refuge in a foreign country. Mr. Walker, whose ardour in favour of his principles had induced him to assemble the political societies in his warehouse at nightly meetings, was suspected of designs against the government; and at the spring assizes in 1794 this gentleman was indicted and tried at Lancaster, on a charge of having conspired with Mr. Joseph Collier, and others, "to overturn the constitution and government of this country by force of arms, and to aid and assist the French in case they should invade this kingdom;" but the evidence called in support of this charge failed so entirely, that the leading counsel for the crown, the late Lord Ellenborough (then Mr.

* Party spirit already ran very high in this place; the claims of the Dissenters to an equality of civil rights with their fellow-subjects had been urged with great force in the House of Commons by Mr. Beaufoy, in 1787, and again in 1788, and the Protestant Dissenters of Manchester seconded the efforts of their friends in Parliament by petitions, praying for a repeal of the test and corporation acts. These petitions gave rise to a long and angry paper war, which terminated only with the final rejection of the motion on that subject, made by Mr. Fox, in 1790.

Law), declared that it was improper that he should proceed in the trial, and the principal witness, Thomas Dunn, was committed to the Castle, at the instance of Mr. Erskine and Mr. Vaughan, counsel for Mr. Walker, for perjury. At the next assizes, Dunn was brought to trial, and, having been found guilty, he was sentenced to stand once in the pillory, and to be imprisoned two years in Lancaster Castle.

CHAP.
IV.

In the midst of the conflicts regarding the general government of the country, Manchester was not unmindful of its own internal government, and an act was obtained in 1791, for regulating the police of the town, which has, with a few modifications, remained in force till the present time.

Police Act.

In the year preceding the passing of the police act, James M'Namara was brought to trial at Lancaster, and convicted of a burglary committed by himself and four other men in the house of Mr. Cheetam, the sign of the Dog and Partridge, on the Stretford road, in the night of the 17th of January, 1790. This robbery was not distinguished by any extraordinary personal violence offered to the family; but the public mind was in a state of alarm, and it was thought that the example of a public execution in the neighbourhood of the town, might strike terror into the minds of the midnight marauders, and afford security to the persons and property of the inhabitants. Having been conveyed from Lancaster Castle to the New Bailey prison, he was taken from thence on Saturday the 11th of September, attended by the chaplain and a large posse of peace officers, to Kersal Moor, where a gallows had been erected upon one of the eminences. The number of spectators attracted by the novel but awful scene was immense, and, from the situation of the gallows, the inhabitants of all the surrounding country had an opportunity of seeing the apparatus of death, and the victim swinging from the beam. Eight years afterwards, another malefactor, of the name of George Russel, was executed on Newton Heath in this parish, for robbing the bleaching croft of Mr. Shorrocks, near Scotland Bridge; but from that time to the present there have not been any public executions in this town or neighbourhood.

The year 1793 proved one of the most trying periods for trade and commerce ever experienced in this country. The number of bankruptcies in England was increased from an average of 816, for the three preceding years, to 1956, and Manchester felt its full share of the public distress. The recruiting service, as was natural, flourished in proportion to the depression of trade, and the annals of this town do not furnish another year wherein so many persons changed the shuttle for the firelock.

Manchester is not remarkable for drought; for the 13 years preceding the summer of 1800, the average quantity of rain that fell here in the months of June, July, and August, was 12 inches and a quarter; but, in the year 1800, the phenomenon occurred of only one inch and a quarter of rain in this town during the whole of those three months. This dry summer was, however, by no means propitious; and the fact will serve to reconcile the inhabitants to what they may sometimes be inclined to consider a little more than their equitable proportion of rain: the corn crops of 1799 had failed to an alarming extent, and the crops of 1800 were equally deficient; wheat, which in July, 1799, sold for 64s. per quarter, had advanced in the July following to 134s. and in the July of 1801, it still sold at 129s. per quarter: 1802 was a year of peace and plenty. The treaty of Amiens, which was celebrated in Manchester by illuminations^a, and other demonstrations of joy, gave Europe time to breathe; and the average price of wheat, in July of that year, had fallen to 67s. per quarter. On the subject of the seasons, and their influence upon the public health, Dr. Percival says, that the bills of mortality at Manchester seem to confirm the observation, that wet seasons are generally more free from epidemic diseases than dry ones, and the doctor institutes a comparison of the six years preceding that in which he wrote, from which it appears that the year 1766, which had the least rain, had the largest number of deaths, in the proportion, on an average, as three is to two.

Fires.

1801.

This town, which is at all times very liable to accidental conflagrations from the inflammable nature of its manufactures, was peculiarly unfortunate in the winter of 1800-1. On the 10th of December, about midnight, an alarm was spread that the lofty warehouses in Hodson's Square were on fire, and that the whole pile of buildings seemed consigned to inevitable destruction. These forebodings were but too completely realized. The ten warehouses, of which that square consisted, were destroyed; and, although property of the value of £100,000 was snatched from the flames, the actual loss sustained amounted to £50,000, exclusive of the buildings. About six weeks afterwards, early in the evening, while all the work-people were busily employed in their respective departments, the spinning factory of Messrs. Littlewood and Kirby, on the banks of the Medlock, took fire in one of the lower rooms, and burnt with such fatal rapidity as to cut off the communication between the main stair-case and the fourth and fifth stories before the people employed in them were aware of their danger. A scene of the most heart-rending kind now took place; men, women, and children were seen traversing the rooms without any hope of escape, expecting every moment to sink into the fiery gulph that raged beneath them, till, thirteen of them, impelled by despair, precipitated themselves out of the windows, to the depth of 30 or 40 feet. Of this number only one survived the fall, and 28 other persons, who had remained in the factory till it was consumed, were found buried in the ruins, but so scorched and mutilated as not to be identified. Another terrible accident, though less fatal than that just described, occurred on Wednesday the 16th of October, 1824, in the spinning manufactory of Mr. Nathan Gough, called Islington Mill, in Salford. About nine o'clock in the morning, while the people were all at work, the iron beam on which one compartment of the fire-proof floor of the top story rested, broke suddenly, and the ponderous materials in their descent burst through the corresponding compartment in each floor, from the top to the bottom of the mill, which was six stories high, by which fatal disaster 19 persons were killed, and about the same number wounded.

The short-lived peace of Amiens terminated in a renewal of the war in May, 1803, and in a threat of invasion on the part of the government of France. The natural effect of this arrogant menace was to unite and to arm the people of England. The volunteer system, which was partially resorted to in other stages of the war, now became general throughout the country, and in no part of the kingdom did the patriotic flame glow with more ardour than in Lancashire. On Thursday the 12th of April, 1804, one of the grandest, and certainly one of the most gratifying military spectacles ever witnessed was displayed on Sale Moor. On this occasion all the volunteer corps in Manchester, Salford, and their vicinity, were reviewed by his Royal Highness Prince William of Glou-chester, the Commander of the North Western District,* who, on his arrival on the ground, was received with a salute of 21 guns from the Earl of Wilton's corps of artillery. The military details do not belong to this work, but the names of the corps constituting this gallant band claim a more permanent record than the fleeting chronicles of the day: They amounted to an aggregate force of 5816 men, and consisted of

On Saturday the 24th of March, in this year, the hay market was removed, by the authority of the Lord of the Manor, from Market-street-lane to Bridgewater-street, Deansgate; and the potatoe market was on the same day removed from Shude-Hill to St. John's Market, but it has since been established in Smithfield Market, Shudehill, where Acre's fair is also held.

Markets.

In the year 1808, Manchester was much agitated by a contest between the weavers and their employers, regarding the rate of wages, and the interference of parliament was sought by the former, to protect their interests. In the meantime, the weavers assembled on Tuesday the 24th of May, and again on the day following, in St. George's Fields, in large bodies, and in a manner which awakened the apprehensions of the authorities of the town. At the latter of these meetings the riot act was read, and the military were afterwards called out by the magistrates to disperse the assembly; in the discharge of which service one of the weavers was killed, and several of them wounded. But the circumstance which peculiarly distinguished the events of this day was, the appearance upon the field, of Lieutenant-Colonel Joseph Hanson, of Strangeways Hall, mounted upon his charger. On his arrival, Mr. Hanson addressed the meeting in a speech, which afterwards became the subject of judicial inquiry at the assizes at Lancaster†, and Mr. Hanson, having been found guilty of "aiding and abetting the rioters," was sentenced, by the Court of King's Bench, to pay a fine of £100, and to be imprisoned six months in the custody of the Marshal of the Marshalsea Court.

* A grand dinner was given to the prince in the Assembly-rooms on the preceding day, Edmund Hobson, Esq. boroughreeve, in the chair.

† It was imputed to Lieutenant-Colonel Hanson, and sworn to by the witnesses on the trial, that, in his address to the weavers, he said—"Your cause is good; stick to your cause, and I will support you as far as three thousand pounds; and if that will not do, I will go further; stick to your cause, and you will certainly gain your ends. Neither Nadin (the deputy-constable) nor any of his faction shall put you off the field this day; stick together, gentlemen, you cannot live by your labour; there is room for six shillings in the cut; and if you cannot obtain that I will advance you six shillings in the pound."

CHAP. continued to rise in Manchester, and the occasion of a public meeting, to vote an address to the Prince Regent on his investment with the royal authority, produced a very extraordinary ebullition of this feeling. The boroughreeve and constables, on the requisition of about 150 gentlemen, having convened a meeting of the inhabitants of the towns of Manchester and Salford and the neighbourhood, to be held in the Exchange Buildings, on Wednesday, the 8th of April, 1812, to prepare a loyal address to the Prince Regent, considerable difference of opinion displayed itself in the town as to the nature of the address that it might be advisable to adopt. Both parties were diligent in mustering their strength, and the number of persons collected was so large, that danger was alleged to be apprehended for the safety of the building in which they were to assemble; on this ground, a notice appeared, on the morning of the day appointed, from the boroughreeve and constables, postponing the meeting sine die. Before the hour of meeting arrived, the populace rushed into the Exchange News Room in torrents, and one party of them took and kept possession of the room, while another division repaired to St. Anne's-square, in the area of which they held a meeting, and voted an address to the Prince Regent censuring the measures of government, and praying for a reform in the representation of the people. After the meeting was over, the mob, with a licentiousness wholly unpardonable, broke to pieces all the furniture in the Exchange, shivered the windows and chandeliers to atoms, and wantonly injured a fine full-length picture of Colonel Stanley, one of the county members, which hung against the wall. The arrival of the military at this critical moment put an end to these excesses, and dispersed the rioters. One of the consequences of this outrage, and of the perturbed state of the neighbourhood, was to fill the town with soldiers. The Scots Greys, the flying artillery corps, and several Militia regiments, were all drawn to this point, and the recently passed act for strengthening the hands of the civil power was also brought into operation, by the establishment of the watch and ward. For the accommodation of the military a camp was established on Kersal-moor, and the display of martial strength, exhibited in a grand review which took place here on the 12th of August, was supposed to have had a very tranquillizing influence.

Peace.

The return of peace happily united all parties, and a spirit of urbanity and good neighbourhood began once more to display itself. The rejoicings on this occasion were universal. A splendid and numerous procession of the authorities and inhabitants of both Manchester and Salford passed through the public streets amidst the acclamations of the populace, and the three days of rejoicing were respectively closed by illuminations, a public dinner, and a general assembly.

Long
Frost.

The winter of 1813-14 is memorable for one of the most severe and long-continued frosts ever remembered in Lancashire. The Russian winter of 1812, which contributed so essentially to give peace to Europe, could scarcely have been more severe. All the canals and rivers were frozen up, and many branches of trade were at a stand owing to the failure of the currents and the interruption of the inland navigation. During this period, a circumstance occurred, which excited very deep interest in the town and neighbourhood of Manchester, and in every part of the kingdom. A young lady, of the name of Lavinia Robinson, on the eve of marriage with Mr. Holroyd, a surgeon, disappeared in the night of the 16th of December, after receiving a visit from her lover, and was sought for in vain in this and the neighbouring counties, till the breaking up of the ice on the 7th of February following, when her body was found in the Irwell, about three miles below Manchester. The events of the fatal night of her disappearance are involved in mystery; but it is conjectured that some suspicions of her chastity, expressed by her lover, had driven her to desperation, and that from the agony of her feelings she sought refuge in the grave.*

An incident which happened in the year 1815 at the Whit-Monday anniversary of the Sunday-schools spread a general panic throughout the town, which happily far exceeded the magnitude of the cause by which it was excited. The Trafford vault happened to be at that time constructing, and the galleries of the Collegiate church were undergoing some alterations, owing to which a temporary platform had been erected for the reception of a portion of the children, 7,976 in number, during the time of divine service. The tilting of one of the forms at the commencement of the singing spread an alarm that the floor was giving way, and that the juvenile part of the congregation were sinking prematurely into the mansions of the dead. A mighty rush in consequence took place, by which seven of the children were much bruised, and one was unfortunately killed. All the efforts made to tranquillize the congregation were vain, the terrors of the children within, and the apprehensions of their parents without, could not be overcome, and the warden was obliged to conclude the service abruptly. Since that time, only a select number of the children have been taken to church at the annual festival, but they all still assemble in St. Anne's-square and make a highly interesting display.

We approach a very stormy period in the history of Manchester. Peace, for a time at least, diminished instead of increasing the national prosperity; all Europe being left by the vast efforts of a few of the last years of the war in a state of exhaustion. Both the foreign and the home markets became languid; trade was at a low ebb; prices and wages were reduced, and "the manufacturing classes in this extensive population were involved in deep distress."† These evils were imputed by a numerous body of politicians to a defective state of the national representation, and a radical reform in the constitution of the Commons House of Parliament was demanded, by the labouring classes, in all the principal manufacturing districts of the kingdom. Political Associations, called Union Societies, were very generally formed in furtherance of this object; and in Lancashire the call for annual parliaments and universal suffrage was extremely loud and importunate. The first meeting assembled in Manchester under the influence of these doctrines was held on St. Peter's Field, in October 1816, at which, after voting resolutions favourable to a radical reform, the multitudes separated in good order.

On the 10th of March following another very numerous meeting was held in the same area, at which about 1000 persons appeared, furnished with blankets slung round their shoulders, with the intention of marching to London to lay their grievances before the Prince Regent. This meeting was dispersed by the military, and a number of the leaders

* The morning after Miss Robinson quitted her home, a note, expressed in these terms, was found upon her table:—"With my dying breath I attest my innocence of the crime laid to my charge. Adieu! God bless you all! I cannot outlive his suspicions."

CHAP. IV. were conveyed to the New Bailey Prison, but some hundreds of the Blanketeers, as they were called, marched off the field, taking the direction of London. Several of these misguided people reached Macclesfield, but none of them advanced as far as Prince Charles and his followers, in an enterprise somewhat more hopeful, had penetrated in the year 1745.

1818. The political fermentation was increased in 1818 by a turn-out of the spinners, the colliers, and the weavers for an advance of wages, and by almost daily processions of the workmen who refused to continue their labour at the prevailing rate of wages.* With the hope of amending their condition, a resolution was taken by the labouring classes to petition the house of commons "for the immediate repeal of the Corn Bill," and Mr. Henry Hunt, of London, was invited to preside at the meeting, which was appointed to take place on the 18th of January, 1819. Mr. Hunt was not slow to obey the summons, and the meeting, which was very numerous, passed the resolutions unanimously.

The popular talent of Mr. Hunt won upon his auditors; and in the summer of this year he was invited to attend another meeting, at which it was proposed, in imitation of the example set at Birmingham, to elect a "Legislatorial Attorney and Representative" for the town of Manchester. The day fixed for this meeting, was Monday, the 9th of August, but, in the mean time, the magistrates issued a notice declaring the object of the meeting to be illegal, and requiring the people to abstain from attending at their peril. The radical reformers, after some hesitation, withdrew their notice, and obtained a requisition, signed by 700 householders, to the boroughreeve and constables of Manchester, "requesting them to call a public meeting to consider the propriety of adopting the most legal and effectual means of obtaining a reform in the Commons House of Parliament." With this requisition the boroughreeve and constables having declined to comply, the requisitors themselves called a meeting "for the above purpose, to be held in the area near to St. Peter's church, on the 16th of August, Henry Hunt, Esq. in the chair."

The magistrates of Lancashire and Cheshire had now become seriously alarmed for the public tranquillity. Some time before the meeting, several bodies of men in the neighbourhood assembled in groups, late at night and early in the morning, to practise so much of the military exercise as consists in marching. This was by many considered as a preparation for open rebellion; but those who took part in the drilling declared that their sole object was to accustom themselves to march in order, as they wished to go in procession to the Manchester meeting.

16th of August, 1819. On the morning of the 16th of August, the societies of radical reformers, in Rochdale, Middleton, Royton, Oldham, Ashton, Stockport, and Saddleworth, were in motion, and contributed to swell the numerical strength of the Manchester meeting, as well as to add to its gaiety and effect. About eleven o'clock in the forenoon, the parties began to arrive in Manchester, and, after marching through the streets, preceded by their banners and music, each took up their station upon the field as near to the hustings as they could approach. At the same hour the magistrates, ten in number, repaired to the house of Mr. Buxton, in Mount-street, in view of the field, that they might witness the proceedings of the day, and be prepared to act as circumstances might require. Under their direction, a body of about 200 special constables took their stand, extending in a line from the house where the magistrates were assembled to the hustings. The military consisting of the Manchester and the Cheshire Yeomanry Cavalry, the 15th Hussars, a detachment of the 88th regiment of foot, and some pieces of royal artillery, were all in readiness, but they were not then seen by the persons forming the meeting. From eleven to one o'clock the various divisions continued to arrive; on reaching the ground, each company was greeted with acclamations; and all the flags, and caps of liberty were ranged round the hustings, which consisted of two carts covered over with planks. The inscriptions on the flags were such as generally prevailed at the radical meetings, except that one, painted on a black ground, had inscribed upon it "Equal Representation or Death." This was the standard of the Saddleworth, Lees, and Mosley Union; on the Middleton flag was written, "Let us die like men, and not be sold like slaves." There was no appearance of arms or pikes, but a number of the men had sticks, such as are generally seen in the hands of countrymen at fairs and races.

About one o'clock Mr. Hunt arrived in a barouche, accompanied by Messrs. Johnson, Knight, and Moorhouse, zealous reformers, and on the box was a woman dressed in white, with an emblem, which the magistrates supposed to be a cap of liberty.* The measure of the meeting was now full, and the number assembled amounted to from sixty to eighty thousand. "Long before this," says Mr. Hay in his letter to the Secretary of State for the home department, "the Magistrates had felt " a decided conviction, that the whole bore the appearance of insurrection; " that the array was such as to terrify all the king's subjects, and was " such as no legitimate purpose could justify. In addition to their own " sense of the meeting, they had very numerous depositions from the inhabitants, as to their fears for the public safety; and at length a man " deposed as to the parties who were approaching attended by the heaviest " column," and a warrant was issued to apprehend them. On Mr. Hunt's arrival he was called to the chair, and began to speak to an audience all attention to catch the sound of his voice. At this moment the Manchester Yeomanry Cavalry were seen advancing at a rapid pace on to the field from Pickford's yard, to assist Nadin, the constable, in executing the warrant, and they drew up in front of the house where the Magistrates were assembled. The Chairman of the meeting, observing the approach of the military, advised his auditory to receive them with three cheers, and to stand firm. The cavalry, after halting for a minute or two, drew their swords, and forming in sixes, they dashed into the midst of the crowd in the direction of the hustings. The affrighted multitude, unconscious till that moment of their danger, gave way on all sides with as much rapidity as their condensed situation would allow, but numbers of them were thrown down, and trampled upon by the hoofs of the horses, and others wounded by the sabres of the yeomanry; in the space of a minute a passage was cleared round the hustings, and Messrs. Hunt, Johnson, and others, with all the banners and emblems, were captured. The panic-struck reformers fled in all directions, while some of those at a distance threw stones and brick-bats at the Yeomanry, who galloped over the field in triumph, chasing the fugitives. The Cheshire Yeomanry, and the 15th Hussars, who had now reached the ground, followed by two pieces of flying artillery, assisted to clear the field; and thousands so lately congregated in one dense mass, were soon spread over the whole town of Manchester. "The parties apprehended were "brought to the house where the Magistrates were. In the mean time

Mr. Hay's "the riot act was read, and the mob was completely dispersed."* It Letter. now became the duty of the peace officers to remove the killed and wounded. Three or four persons were found dead upon the field, one of whom was a special constable, named Ashworth. Twenty-two men, and eight women were conveyed to the Infirmary, of whom five were slightly wounded, eight had fractures, principally of the ribs, nine bruises or contusions, two were wounded with sabres, and five were shot, one of whom died, and another was returned as dead, without the nature of his wound being specified. Numbers who were wounded, but not disabled, made the best of their way home; and it appears, from an investigation subsequently made, that in the whole eight persons lost their lives, and from four to five hundred were bruised or wounded.* One of the yeomanry, named Hulme, was knocked from his horse by a missile, and dangerously hurt by the fall, but he afterwards recovered. The Chairman of the meeting who had received a slight sabre wound on the head, and several blows from the truncheons of the constables, was conveyed to the New Bailey, under the protection of the Magistrates, and in the course of the day ninety other persons were apprehended, and placed in confinement.

Mr. Hunt and several of his friends were detained in prison for upwards of a week, on a charge of high treason, but this charge was afterwards abandoned, and ten of them were indicted for a misdemeanor, in convening and attending an illegal and seditious meeting. Five bills of indictment were preferred at Lancaster by Mr. Hunt against the members of the Yeomanry for malicious cutting, but they were all thrown out by the grand jury. Attempts were also made to prosecute the Magistrates, but no Justice of the Peace could be found in the county who would receive an information against them. Hopes were, however, still entertained by those who condemned the conduct of the Magistrates and the Yeomanry, that means would be presented, by the verdicts of the coroner's inquests on the bodies of the persons killed on Peter's Field, for bringing them before a court of justice, but these hopes were disappointed, from verdicts of "accidental death" having been returned; and an inquest at Oldham, which sat by adjournments for several weeks in the case of John Lees, a cotton spinner, was terminated without any decision, owing to the coroner not having taken a view of the body along with the jury before they were sworn.

Mr. Hunt, and nine of the leaders at the meeting of the 16th of August, were indicted at Lancaster for sedition, as already stated, but the trial was removed to York, on the ground of the strong feeling against them in the county of Lancaster. After a trial of 10 days, in which Mr. Hunt conducted his own defence with considerable ability and temper, he was found guilty, and sentenced to be imprisoned two years and a half in Ilchester gaol. Messrs. Joseph Johnson, Joseph Healey, Samuel Bamford, and John Knight were also found guilty, and the three former were sentenced to one year's imprisonment each in Lincoln gaol, but Mr. Knight was not brought up for judgment. The other defendants, Messrs. James Moorhouse, John Thacker Saxton, Robert Jones, George Swift, and Robert Wilde, were all acquitted.

The legal proceedings arising out of the melancholy transactions of the 16th of August, were terminated by an action for an assault and wounding, brought by Thomas Redford, a journeyman hatter, at Audenshaw, near Ashton-under-Line, against Hugh Hornby Birley, Major in the Manchester Yeomanry Cavalry; Richard Withington, a Captain in the same corps; Alexander Oliver, one of the Yeomanry; and Edward Meagher, the trumpeter. The trial took place before a Special Jury, at the spring assizes, at Lancaster, in 1822, and continued for five days, when the Jury, after a short consultation, returned a verdict for the defendants.

Such is a brief history of the prominent events of the memorable 16th of August, divested of all party colouring, and in the fidelity of which, it is presumed, all parties will concur. The most profound sensation was produced by these events both in parliament and in the country. For a time a portentous gloom took possession of the public mind, and the spirit of party animosity reigned triumphant; but the revival of trade, and the consequent improvement in the condition of the manufacturing population, abated the ardour of political feeling, which, in the course of the ensuing year, was moderated down to the usual standard.

Manchester and Salford were alarmed in the year 1817, by the murder of Margaret Marsden, aged 75 years, and Hannah Partington, a young woman, the servants of Mr. Thomas Littlewood, in his dwelling-house, at Pendleton. After the murders, which took place about mid-day, in the absence of Mr. Littlewood's family, the house was robbed of cash, plate, and wearing apparel to a considerable amount. The persons implicated in this atrocity, besides an unknown accomplice, hitherto undiscovered, were James Ashcroft, the elder, James Ashcroft, his son, David Ashcroft, his brother, and William Holden, son-in-law of the elder Ashcroft. For the perpetration of this crime, the family of guilty confederates was brought to trial on Friday, the 5th of April, 1817, and, being all convicted, on clear, though circumstantial evidence, they were executed at Lancaster, on the Monday following, persisting to the last in their declarations of innocence.

In the year 1821, the Parliamentary decennial return of Population was again made, when the increase of numbers in the parish of Manchester exhibited itself very strikingly. From 1801 to 1811, the increase in the whole parish amounted to 33,966; but in the period between 1811 and 1821, the augmentation of numbers was 50,771. This increase was not partial, but spread generally throughout the thirty townships of the parish, over the sixty square miles forming its area, as will be seen from the following return, which, in addition to the number of inhabitants, exhibits also the estimated annual value of all the lands, messuages, and other buildings in each separate township, according to the returns made for the property tax, in 1814, by which the assessment for the county rates is regulated:

Of the 38,414 families in this parish, 34,977 are employed in trade, manufactures, or handicraft businesses, and 1141 chiefly in agriculture; the remaining 2296 are either engaged in professional pursuits, or unemployed. The town of Salford, it will be observed, is increasing in a ratio quite equal to that of Manchester; and the increase in the township of Chorlton Row from 675, the number in 1801, to 8,209, the number in 1821, is a rate of augmentation unexampled perhaps in any township in the kingdom.

THE NUMBER OF INHABITANTS IN MANCHESTER,

According to the Charter granted by Queen Elizabeth to the College was, in 1588..... 10,000

According to the Charter of Charles I. in 1635 20,000

[These estimates probably comprehended the whole parish.]

According to an account quoted by Dr. Percival, in his Essay on Population, the number of inhabitants in Manchester, in 1717, was 8,000

[But this is manifestly erroneous.]

In 1757, the Dr. says the numbers in Manchester and Salford were 19,839

In 1774, the whole parish contained 41,039

In 1788, according to Dr. Aikin, Manchester and Salford contained... 50,000

In 1801 } according to the parliamentary census, they contained... { 84,020
In 1811 }
 } { 123,788

When the last census was taken, the ages of the inhabitants of the parish were returned thus :—

The plague prevailed here in the years 1605 and 1645, in the former of which the deaths amounted to 1078, and in the latter to 1212.

Several observations suggest themselves on the subject of these highly interesting returns, but the limits of the present work frequently restrict us to the accumulation of facts, and oblige the reader to be his own commentator.

The coronation of his majesty George IV. celebrated in Manchester on Thursday, the 19th of July, 1821, was one of the most splendid and imposing ceremonies ever witnessed out of the metropolis. A similar celebration, on the coronation of his royal father, just sixty years before, is remembered by aged people with feelings of admiration, but, compared with the display and magnitude of the present ceremonial, it was as Manchester of 1761 is to Manchester of 1821. All party feelings seemed this day to have merged in loyalty the most profound, and a stranger who had visited Manchester in August, 1819, and in July, 1821, would have found it difficult to persuade himself that he was in the same place. At half-past seven o'clock the children of all the principal schools in the town, to the number of 25,697, with their teachers at their head, were assembled in St. Anne's square, and, attended by the authorities of Manchester and Salford, the clergy, military, music, and flags, marched in procession through the principal streets of the town, to Ardwick Green, whence they returned into Piccadilly, where they sang the national anthem in full chorus, and, having given nine hearty cheers, they separated to their respective schools, to partake of the refreshments which had been prepared for them, each of them having been previously presented with a large coronation medal. The grand procession succeeded, and consisted of the lord of the manor, the magistrates and public officers, the deputy-lieutenants, clergy, and gentry, with all the principal trades of the town, consisting of the workmen in each, headed by their employers, all dressed in their best attire, and each of them wearing a rosette of mazarine, crimson and white, provided for the occasion. At half-past ten o'clock, the procession began to move from St. Anne's Square, preceded by a guard of Lancers, a full military band of music, a brigade of the Royal Artillery, with two pieces of cannon, a detachment of Infantry, and the Manchester and Salford Yeomanry Cavalry. Taking the route down Bridge-street, they proceeded to Pendleton, and returned over Blackfriar's-bridge, through the principal streets of the town, to Ardwick-green; here the military fired a feu-de-joie, which was repeated during the march, in returning to St. Anne's square, where the procession was dissolved about four o'clock in the afternoon. The magnitude of this cavalcade may be inferred from the procession extending five miles, including the streets to the right and left. At five o'clock in the afternoon, a discharge of artillery announced the commencement of the distribution of refreshment in different parts of the town, and in the course of the evening, twenty-seven oxen, sixty sheep, and four hundred barrels of strong beer, were distributed to the populace.

All the symptoms of returning prosperity now began to display themselves; the great body of the people became contented with their condition; plans for improving the town were formed; the foundations of new edifices, secular and religious, were laid; and institutions for the cultivation of the public taste amongst the upper, and for the extension of useful knowledge amongst the lower classes, were established. Market-street, the principal thoroughfare of the town, had long been inadequate to the convenient carrying on of the vast traffic with which it was continually crowded. To remedy this increasing evil, an act was obtained in 1821, with the general concurrence of the town, to improve and widen Market-street to the extent of twenty-one yards, and certain avenues, namely, the bottom of King-street, Hunter's-lane, Nicholcroft, Toad-lane, and Toll-lane, to the width of sixteen yards. The Commissioners lost no time in commencing their operations; a fine spacious street, with handsome shops and dwellings on each side, descending by a regularly inclined plane from Piccadilly to the Exchange, is now forming, and the work has been prosecuted with so much vigour and success, that the labours of the Commissioners are expected to terminate in this quarter, in the year 1826. The avenues from King-street to Deansgate, and from Cannon-street to Hanging-ditch by Hunter's-lane, have already received the requisite expansion, and the Commissioners will continue in the active exercise of their functions till all the duties with which they are charged have been executed.

IT is remarkable that precisely the same portion of the kingdom, which formed the principal possession of the barons of Lancaster, under the Norman dynasty, defined in the Domesday survey as "Inter Ripe et Merham"—between the Ribble and the Mersey, with the Roman Mancunium at its head, should, seven centuries afterwards, have become the seat of the largest manufacture in the world. The history of this trade is interwoven with the general history of the county of Lancaster, and will be found from the 112th to the 120th page of the first volume of the present work. From the conquest to the reign of Edward III. we have no evidence to prove that the parish of Manchester was a manufacturing district, but, about the middle of the reign of that monarch, the seeds of the early trade of England began to strike their roots in this soil, and their growth has been progressive, till at length they have attained a degree of stability and stature hitherto unknown in the history of nations. The cotton trade, however, the present distinguishing characteristic of the county, is comparatively of modern date. Its existence in England cannot be traced higher than the middle of the 17th century; and, according to Dr. Percival, a writer on the population of Manchester in the last age, the whole amount of the cotton manufacture of the kingdom did not, in the year, 1750, exceed the annual value of £200,000.* In 1781, two years before Arkwright's machinery for carding and spinning cotton by steam was introduced into Manchester, the quantity of cotton wool imported amounted only to 5,198,778 lbs.; "but the successive inventions of Higgs, Hargrave, Arkwright, Crompton, and Watt, so astonishingly facilitated the manufacture, that its extent has been increased more than thirty fold. The diminished cost of cotton goods occasioned an immense demand for them both at home and abroad;” and the increase in the manufacture may be inferred from the returns of the quantity of cotton wool imported into Great Britain during the last 44 years, with the quantity exported in the raw state during the same period, as derived from the Inspector General’s office :—

For many ages the woollen manufacture was the great staple of this kingdom, and the Manchester trade was for three centuries confined almost entirely to woollens; but ever since the introduction of spinning machinery, about the middle of the last century, the cotton trade has so much increased, that it has at length taken the precedence, and the following official returns, derived from the office of the Inspector General, proves that the exports of cotton exceed those of the rival fabric in the proportion of about three to one :—

* History of the Reign of Geo. III. by Edward Baines, vol. iv. p. 159.

† The declared value of British manufactures on exportation is pretty nearly the real value of the goods exported; but the official value is formed on a standard of bulk and prices adjusted in the year 1696, before machinery had reduced the cost of the cotton manufactures. This head of returns serves therefore now rather to show how much the exports of any given year would have been worth at the end of the seventeenth than at the beginning of the nineteenth century.

‡ In the year ending the 10th of Oct. 1824, the quantity of cotton manufactures exported according to the official value was £30,019,184, including £3,138,347 for twist and yarn.

It is impossible to ascertain with precision the actual amount of any of the great manufactures of the kingdom ; but of cotton it may be safely asserted, that the value is from thirty to forty millions of pounds sterling per annum. The average annual amount of cotton wool imported during the last seven years was 145,000,000lbs. from which deducting 15 millions for exports and 10 millions for cotton wool used at home in an unmanufactured state, 120 millions remain. Taking the price of this wool at 1s. per pound, and the increase of value by manufacture at five times the cost of the raw material, the amount will stand thus.—

120,000,000lbs. of cotton at 1s. per pound,.....	£6,000,000
Increased value by manufacture,	30,000,000
Gross amount,	£36,000,000

This result is not very dissimilar to the statement made by the President of the Board of Trade in the house of commons on the 8th of March, 1824, when the cheers of the house so cordially hailed the announcement that the annual value of cotton goods manufactured* had risen to the incredible amount of £33,337,000.

Till the year 1788, the supply of cotton for the manufactures of Manchester was derived principally from the West Indies, (and Lancaster was the principal English port through which it passed to the consumer) but soon after that time the states of North America, and our own settlements in the East, began to export cotton to this country. Since 1782, the prices of this article have experienced very considerable fluctuation, as will appear from the following table :—

The cotton manufacture is making considerable progress in Ireland, as will be seen from the following official returns of the exports of cotton goods from Great Britain to that country; and of the imports of cotton goods from Ireland to Great Britain during the last five years, each year ending on the 5th of January:—

Every part of the cotton trade, from the importation of the raw material to its completion by the weaver, the bleacher, the dyer, and the calico printer, is carried on in this town and parish, but the branch for which Manchester is particularly distinguished is the spinning. In this department of the trade there are at present (Aug. 1825) 104 spinning factories in the townships of Manchester, Chorlton-Row, Ardwick, Salford, Pendleton, and Hulme, worked by 110 steam engines, of the aggregate power of 3,598 horses.* In the year 1787, the number of spinning factories in the county of Lancaster amounted only to 42, and those were in general of a magnitude very inferior to the mills which at present exist in this place.

From a calculation made in 1817 by Mr. John Kennedy, one of the most considerable cotton spinners in Manchester, it appears that the number of persons then employed in the spinning of cotton in this country was 110,763, that the aid they derived from steam was equal to the power of 20,768 horses; and that the number of spindles in motion was 6,645,833. By this immense process 3,987,500,000 hanks of cotton yarn were produced yearly, taking the average at 40 hanks to the pound; and the quantity of coal consumed in their production is stated at 5000 tons.

MR. KENNEDY'S STATEMENT FOR THE YEAR 1817:—

Raw cotton converted into yarn in the United Kingdom,	110,000,000lbs.
Loss in spinning estimated at 14oz. per pound,	10,312,500
Quantity of yarn produced,	99,687,500lbs.
Number of hanks, taking the average at 40 per pound,	3,987,500,000lbs.
Number of spindles employed, each spindle being supposed to produce two hanks per day, at 300 working days in the year,	6,645,833
Number of persons employed in spinning, supposing each to produce 120 hanks per day,	110,763
Horse power employed, equal in number to	20,768
Four ounces and a half of coal estimated to produce one hank of No. 40; and 180lbs. of coal per day, equal to one horse power.

The increase of manufactures since 1817 has been considerable, certainly not less than twenty per cent. as will appear from the increased average annual quantity of cotton wool imported.

About four-fifths of the whole amount of the cotton trade of the kingdom centres in the county of Lancaster; and it is calculated that the capital employed in Lancashire in this trade alone, in buildings and machinery, amounts to £8,000,000. Steam, it has been already observed, is now applied to a considerable extent in the weaving as well as in the spinning, and we have ascertained, that there are at present (July, 1825) in the parish of Manchester alone, upwards of 20,000 steam looms in motion. In the first volume of this work,^a quoting from Mr. Guest's Book on "The Cotton Manufactures," the number of steam or power looms in Great Britain were estimated at 10,000; that estimate was doubtless even then too low, and the probability is that there are now, in England and Scotland, not fewer than 40,000 power looms employed in the weaving of cotton alone, 8,000 of which are in Scotland.

The rate of manufacturers' wages, as well as the price of provisions, has been subject to considerable fluctuations during the last fifteen years; in some cases they have fluctuated as much as 50 per cent. but the elevations and depressions in the prices of food do not appear in any degree to have influenced the wages of labour, which are principally regulated by the demand for the manufactured article.

We have said that the spinning of cotton is the principal branch of manufacture carried on in Manchester, but a large proportion of the goods made in the other districts of the county are sold in this market, both for home and for foreign consumption; and to such an extent has the commerce of this place attained, that foreigners have established agents, and sometimes have resident principals in this town, to conduct their commercial transactions. Many silk mills have recently been established here, and their numbers are rapidly increasing. A large woollen factory has been set to work in Water-street with all the recent improvements in that branch of manufacture; and cambrics of exquisite texture are made in one of the mills in Great Ancoats-street. But it is not to the local manufactures of the town or county that the trade of this place is confined; woollens, linens, and stuffs are brought here, as to a general depository, and a foreign merchant or an English dealer may in this place replenish his stock with all the products of the great manufacturing districts of the kingdom.

The MANCHESTER EXCHANGE constitutes a place of public resort for the merchants, manufacturers, and principal traders of the town and neighbourhood. This is a spacious edifice, without any high claims to architectural beauty, built by subscription, in 400 shares, and opened January 2d, 1809; it is situated at the point where the Market-place, Exchange-street, St. Mary's-gate, and Market street form their junction, and the average number of subscribers is about 1500.

The CLOTH-HALLS in York Buildings and Chapel-street, Salford, are public marts principally for the sale of Yorkshire cloths; and the CORN EXCHANGE, in Hanging Ditch, affords accommodation to 150 corn brokers and dealers.

THE MANCHESTER FIRE AND LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY properly ranks amongst the commercial establishments of the town. This institution was formed on the 24th of March, 1824, with a capital of £2,000,000, arising out of 20,000 shares of £100 each. On the 14th of February, 1825, the fire office had granted 3500 policies, embracing property to the amount of about six millions and a half sterling, and the business not only in Manchester, but in other places to which it extends, is progressively increasing. The life department is likewise flourishing to a considerable extent; and much surprise is now expressed that the establishment of an office of this nature was so long delayed. The business is transacted at the company's house, in King-street.

The MANCHESTER GROCERS' COMPANY, established in 1811, is a company of carriers by water, upon a large scale, arising out of the

CHAP. ^v dissatisfaction felt by the principal grocers of Manchester at an advance of carriage made by the proprietors of the Mersey and Irwell navigation, and by the trustees of the Duke of Bridgewater's canals in the preceding year. This competition is described as very advantageous, from having reduced the charges of water carriage to the public, and from having given increased facilities and despatch to that important branch of intercourse.

The NEW QUAY COMPANY, originally established in 1822, by Mr. John Brettargh and two others, is now a water-carriage joint-stock company, with a capital of 30,000*l*. This company has an establishment of seventeen vessels plying on the Irwell and the Mersey, between Manchester and Liverpool, and the shareholders, who are merchants and traders, afford a large portion of carriage to their own concern.

The MANCHESTER CHAMBER OF COMMERCE was established in the year 1820, and has for its object "the promotion of measures calculated to benefit and protect the trading interests of its members, and the general trade of the town and neighbourhood of Manchester." The affairs of the chamber are managed by a board of twenty-five directors, who are chosen annually at a general meeting of the subscribers, held the second Monday in February in every year. This institution is judiciously conducted, and has so far ensured the purpose of its formation as to entitle it to general support.

In their commercial transactions, this town and county have been laudably jealous of the stability of their circulating medium. Hence, when the Directors of the Bank of England, owing to the number of forgeries, determined to withdraw their small notes from circulation, in 1821, and when one of the expedients recommended to supply their place was the issue of provincial bank notes, of a small denomination, the inhabitants of Manchester declared it to be their intention "not to receive any local notes in payment except in cases of extreme necessity." The consequence of which decision has been that a currency is maintained corresponding in character with that of the metropolis. When the trade of Manchester was much more circumscribed than at present, these scruples were not felt; guinea notes were issued by the only bank in the town in 1772, and they were then received with avidity.

Chapels.

The public edifices in Manchester for the purposes of trade and commerce are by no means numerous, but the same observation does not apply to those for the celebration of divine worship. There are here sixteen churches and three chapels belonging to the establishment; and not fewer than forty places of worship used by dissenters of various religious denominations. Of the Collegiate Church, originally called "The College of the Blessed Virgin, of Manchester," but since the charter of Elizabeth, called "CHRIST'S CHURCH," we have already treated somewhat at length.^a With the growth of the town, its religious sanctuaries have multiplied, and the following brief record exhibits them in chronological order:—

v.ii. p.74.

1422. The COLLEGIATE CHURCH takes its date from the early part of the 15th century; it superseded the churches of St. Mary and St. Michael, mentioned in the Domesday Survey, and the Ecclesia de Maincestr' of the Valor Beneficiorum of 1291. At the period of the Reformation, this collegiate institution passed from the church of Rome to the church of England, and for two centuries, first under the Romish, and afterwards under the Protestant establishment, it served to afford ample accommodation to all the inhabitants of both Manchester and Salford. In 1635 TRINITY CHURCH, or Chapel, in Salford, was built according to the Gothic order of architecture, and endowed by the munificence of Humphrey Booth, Esq. but, having fallen into decay, it became necessary to rebuild it in 1752. ST. ANNE'S CHURCH, forming the south side of St. Anne's-square, founded in 1709, under the patronage of Lady Anne Bland and several other benefactors, is a handsome Corinthian edifice, and was consecrated on the 17th of July, 1712.* ST. MARY'S CHURCH, situated in the Church lands, Deansgate, a Doric edifice, built by the warden and fellows of the Collegiate church, under the authority of an act of parliament, was opened for public worship on the 29th of September, 1756. The act for building this church invested the collegiate body with a power of selling the pews, and with the privilege of granting leases for ninety-nine years of the parsonage field on which the church is erected, and the whole of the land was very soon disposed of advantageously, for building purposes.* ST. PAUL'S, a brick building, at the east end of Turner-street, succeeded St. Mary's, and was consecrated on the 28th of July, 1765. ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, in Byrom-street, built by Edward Byrom, Esq. son of the stenographer, under the authority of an act of parliament, was begun on the 28th of April, 1768, and consecrated the 7th of July, 1769; this church is deservedly admired for its paintings, and for the general neatness and elegance of its interior. ST. JAMES'S CHURCH, a brick building, in Charlotte-street, was erected by the Rev. Cornelius Bayley, D. D. and consecrated on the 18th of August, 1788. ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH, a brick building, in Angel-street, built by the Rev. Humphrey Owen, was consecrated on the 23d of July, 1789. ST. MARK'S CHURCH, Cheetham-hill, was founded by the late Rev. E. Ethelston, and finished by his son, the Rev. Charles Wickstead Ethelston, A. M. one of the Fellows of the Collegiate church, in the year 1794. ST. PETER'S CHURCH, built by Wyatt, in the Doric order of architecture, situated at the bottom of Mosley-street, at the south-east angle of St. Peter's-field, was founded on the 11th of December, 1788, "by the Rev. Samuel Hall, the intended minister, and a considerable number of the principal ministers and inhabitants of this town," and consecrated on the 6th of September, 1794. The altar piece in this edifice is adorned with 'The Descent from the cross,' from the pencil of Annibal Carracci. ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH, a brick and stone building, in the street to which it gives name, in Salford, was built by the Rev. N. M. Cheek, and consecrated on the 23d of July, 1794. The last church built in Manchester, in the 18th century, was ST. GEORGE'S, a brick building, in St. George's road, opened for divine service on the first of April, 1798, but not consecrated till 1818, when it was purchased by subscription, and the patronage vested in the bishop of the diocese.

* Originally this church had, on the summit of its spire, a gilt ball and cross, of copper, hollow within, the cross weighing upwards of a hundred-weight, and measuring six feet four inches in length, which was precisely the circumference of the ball. For nearly seventy years these brazen ornaments kept their station, but in the month of December, 1822, the rod inserted in the ball which supported the cross was so much bent by a violent gale of wind that it lost its erect position, and the cross became suspended horizontally from the spire. In this state it remained till the month of May following, to the imminent danger of the roof of the church, and to the terror of beholders, but on the 10th of that month Mr. Philip Wotton, an ingenious and enterprising artizan, elevated himself to the top of the spire, in view of thousands of half-petrified spectators, by means of a chain of ascending ladders, and succeeded in lowering the ball and cross in safety to the ground.

After the completion of St. George's, two and twenty years elapsed without the erection of a single church in the parish of Manchester, although during that period upwards of 80,000 souls had been added to the numerical aggregate of the parish population.^a ALL SAINTS' CHURCH in the centre of Grosvenor-square, of which the cemetery forms the area, is a large and elegant stone structure, in the Grecian style of architecture, founded by the Rev. Charles Burton, LL.B. and consecrated on the 12th of April, 1820. ST. MATTHEW'S CHURCH, Castlefield, is built in the Gothic style, by the Commissioners for the erection of Churches, at a cost of £14,000, and will accommodate a congregation of 2,000 persons. The foundation stone of this church was laid on St. Matthew's day, in the year 1822: ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH, Whitecross-bank, Salford, was also built by the Commissioners, at a cost of £14,000. The first stone of this almost unique Corinthian structure, was laid in November, and they were both completed in 1825. Two other new Churches are assigned to Manchester under the million and half million Acts, but their sites are not yet definitively fixed.

Two Episcopal Chapels were erected in the immediate vicinity of Manchester about the middle of the last century: ST. THOMAS'S CHAPEL, at Ardwick, consecrated on the 10th of November, 1741, and enlarged in 1777; and ST. THOMAS'S CHAPEL, at Pendleton, built at the cost of Samuel Brierley, Esq. and consecrated the 26th of July, 1776.

In St. Clement's Church, Lever-street, opened for public worship on Christmas day, 1793, and in St. Luke's Chapel, Bedford-street, Chorlton-row, built in 1804, the service according to the liturgy of the Church of England is used, but these Churches have neither of them the rite of confirmation. To all the principal churches there are burial grounds attached; in addition to which there is a cemetery at Strange-ways, where a clergyman from the Collegiate Church officiates.

The Church patronage of Manchester, with the exception of the Collegiate Church, which is partly in the crown, but principally in the chapter,^b is by no means splendid. At present the presentations to the livings are pretty widely diffused, but ultimately a large share of the patronage will devolve upon the Warden and Fellows of the Collegiate Church. Trinity Chapel, Salford, is a perpetual curacy, in the presentation of Sir Robert Gore Booth, Bart. of Lassadell-house, Sligo. St. Anne's is a rectory, in the gift of the Bishop of Chester; St. Mary's is also a rectory, in the gift of the Warden and Fellows; St. Paul's, a perpetual curacy, is also in their gift; St. John's, now in the presentation of the Byrom family, will pass after one vacation into the patronage of the Warden and Fellows; to whom will appertain, after a lapse of sixty years from the respective dates of their consecration, the patronage of St. James's, St. Michael's, St. Mark's, St. Peter's, St. Stephen's, and All Saints, the presentation to each of those livings being till the expiration of that period in the founders or their families. The presentation to the government churches of St. Matthew and St. Philip is in the Warden and Fellows of the Collegiate Church. St. Thomas's Chapel, at Ardwick, is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of the Warden and Fellows; and the Vicar of Eccles presents to St. Thomas's, Pendleton, in whose parish that Chapel is situated.

The Roman Catholics in Manchester form a numerous community, and the vast influx of inhabitants from the sister kingdom, both resident and temporary, serves to increase their amount. In the early part of the last century the Catholics had a chapel in Smithy-door, in a building now the Grey Horse public-house, behind which there is still a large unoccupied piece of ground, then used as a burial-ground. In 1774, the Catholic Chapel in Rook-street was erected. Twenty years afterwards Mulberry-street chapel was built; and on Wednesday, the 27th of September, 1820, St. Augustin's chapel, in Granby-row, was opened. This spacious and elegant edifice was built at a cost of £10,000, under the direction of Mr. John Palmer, the architect of Pleasington Priory, in this county; and soon after its completion, the remains of the Rev. Rowland Broomhead, for forty-two years the revered Catholic minister of Manchester, were consigned to its vaulted depository.

The Protestant Dissenters of Manchester date their origin from the establishment of the Presbyterical classes of Lancashire, in 1646, or, at least, from the passing of the Act of Uniformity, in 1662. That act having prohibited Nonconformist ministers from residing in any city or corporate town, many of the ejected clergy retired to Manchester, amongst whom we find the names of Goodwin, Tildsley, Finch, Eaton, Bayes, Bann, Sill, Constantine, and Scoales.^a Three ministers were ejected and silenced in Manchester, namely, Messrs. Newcome, Richardson, and Wigan, and Mr. Holbrook, of Salford, was treated with similar severity. In 1672, when the indulgences, as they were called, were granted, the Rev. Henry Newcome, A.M. above mentioned, collected the Nonconformists in this place into a society, and the chapel, in Acres field, now Cross-street, was built for him in 1692. This was the first dissenting meeting-house in Manchester. In 1714, the original chapel was pulled down by a Jacobite mob, headed by the peruke-maker, who afterwards expiated his treasons against the reigning family on the gallows.^b The sum of 1500*l.* voted from the public treasury, restored the building, which was enlarged in 1737, and again in 1788. The congregation worshipping here became Unitarians about the year 1775. The protestant dissenters of this religious persuasion have a chapel in Mosley-street, erected in 1789, and a third in Dawson's croft, Gorton-street, Salford, opened on Christmas day, in the year 1824.

There is in Manchester only one congregation of PRESBYTERIANS strictly so called, and they are in connexion with the United Secession Church of Scotland. Their chapel is a commodious place of worship, built in 1799, situated in Lloyd-street.

The INDEPENDENTS, though existing as a body in this kingdom ever since the time of the Commonwealth, had not any chapel in Manchester of an earlier date than 1761-2, when Cannon-street Chapel was erected. Mosley-street Chapel was built in 1788, and considerably enlarged in 1819, by the addition of a spacious gallery, in which 260 Sunday school children attached to this congregation are accommodated. On the chapel in Cannon-street becoming too small for the congregation, Grosvenor-street Chapel, Piccadilly, was built for its present worthy minister, with two ample vestries, in which 380 Sunday school children receive instruction. There are three other Independent chapels, the largest of them in Chapel-street, Salford, built in July 1819; and two small chapels, one in Jackson's-lane, Hulme; and the other in George's-street, Windsor, built in 1801, and re-built in 1817. Another chapel for this religious denomination is now building in Brook-street, Rush-mulme-road.

The METHODISTS are a very numerous body in Manchester, and CHAP. V.  their capacious Chapel in Oldham-street, built in 1780, may be considered coeval with the establishment of that religious community. When the conference is held in Manchester it assembles in this chapel. The Methodists have also a chapel in Gravel-lane, Salford, opened in 1790; another in Great Bridgewater-street, in 1800; a fourth in Swan-street, in 1808; a fifth in Chancery-lane, Ardwick, in 1817; and a sixth in Grosvenor-street, Chorlton-row, in 1820. In addition to these places of worship, they have a chapel in Brunswick-terrace, Pendleton, opened on the 28th August, 1814; and in the month of July, 1825, the foundation-stones of two new Methodist chapels were laid, one in Rusholme-road, and the other in Oxford-street.

The NEW METHODIST CONNEXION, a body of seceders from the Wesleyan Methodists, have two chapels, one in Oldham-street, built in 1807, and the other called Bethesda, in Broad-street, Pendleton, built in 1806. There is also a place of worship in Canal-street, Great Ancoats-street, opened on Christmas Day, 1821, and belonging to the Tent Methodists.

The INDEPENDENT METHODISTS have a chapel situated in Shaw-street, Salford, opened for public worship in 1807; and the PRIMITIVE METHODISTS have a chapel in Jersey-street, opened April 11, 1824.

The BAPTISTS have three chapels; the oldest of which is on Thornely-brow, Withy-grove, in the Coldhouse district, and hence called "Coldhouse Chapel," built in the middle of the last century; the second, built in 1789, is situated in St. George's-road; and the third, built in 1807, is in York-street.

The GENERAL BAPTISTS are not a numerous community, and two small chapels, one in Great Mount-street, opened on the 29th of August, 1824; and the other in Green-street, Oak-street, opened in January, 1825, serve to accommodate their congregations.

Though George Fox began his public ministry in Manchester, his followers have never been a very numerous body in this place. In the early part of the last century, the QUAKERS had a Meeting-house in Jackson's-row, Deansgate, which has disappeared, but the "Grave-yard" still remains in that situation, and is used for its original purpose. Their present chapel, built in 1795, is in Dickinson-street, and has a burial ground attached to it.

The FOLLOWERS OF EMANUEL SWEDENBORG have long been well established in this town. The New Jerusalem Church in Peter-street, opened for public worship on the 11th of August, 1793, by this community, is a spacious and handsome building. The New Jerusalem Temple, in Bolton-street, Salford, opened on the 19th of Sept. 1813, is also appropriated to public worship in conformity to the doctrines of Emanuel Swedenborg. St. George's Chapel, near St. George's Church, was used by the Swedenborgians, for some years, but it is now appropriated solely to the reading of the funeral service over those who are interred in the cemetery.

The WELSH CALVINISTIC INDEPENDENTS occupied an old chapel in Jackson's-square, Salford, used by the Unitarians, till they quitted it for their new chapel in Dawson's-croft: The Welsh Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel in Cooper-street, built in 1824; and the Welsh Methodists worship at St. David's Chapel, in Parliament-street, built in 1817.

It remains only in conclusion to mention the BIBLE CHRISTIANS. Their church, called Christ's Church, in King-street, Salford, was built at the sole expense of the late Rev. William Cowherd, and vested in trustees for the free use of the congregation, the minister, organist, and singers all serving gratuitously. It is a peculiarity of this sect, that they abstain from animal food and intoxicating liquors, from a persuasion that the practice is conducive to health, and in accordance with the principles of humanity. Christ's Church, in Every-street, Great Ancoats-street, opened the 29th of February, 1824, is served by a pupil and disciple of the late Mr. Cowherd.

The JEWS are much less numerous in Manchester than in Liverpool; at present they assemble for public worship in a large room in Ainsworth's-court, Long Millgate, formerly used as a school-room; but they are building a neat Synagogue in Halliwell-street.

Many of the Dissenting Chapels in Manchester are destitute of that very important requisite a burial ground; but this deficiency is in some degree supplied by a general cemetery of four acres in Rushulme-road, opened in 1821 for the use of persons of all religious denominations, who have the opportunity of interring according to their own form and by their own minister. A small chapel is erected in this ground, wherein the burial service is read, and the registrar, the Rev. William Manning Walker, occupies a house built for the resident minister.

Much to the honour of Manchester, great attention is paid here to Schools, the education of youth, and especially to the children of the poor. So general indeed, and persevering are the endeavours of the benevolent of all ranks to afford instruction to the rising generation, that no child, however abject may be the poverty of its parents, needs to be destitute of the advantages of that humble degree of learning which is to be obtained in a Sunday School. The doors of these institutions are thrown wide open, and the invitation of "come and welcome," is held out in every division of the town. The time is not very distant when a large proportion of the inhabitants could not write their own names, and the following short but striking document, collected from the parish register of the Collegiate Church by the Rev. Cecil Daniel Wray, serves to prove the necessity which exists for giving instruction to the labouring classes.

Making an aggregate of 7505 couples, or 15,010 individuals, of whom 9756 could not write their own names! Since 1812, no return of this kind has been published, but the number of the ignorant is no doubt annually decreasing, and a marksman will in an age or two become as rare a character as a scholar was in the fifteenth century, when the ability to read conferred upon its possessor the privilegium clericale, or the benefit of clergy.*

The following is a compendious view of the Free Schools of Manchester, exhibiting the number of scholars in each, at the beginning of the year 1825, from which it appears that the number of day scholars receiving gratuitous education in Manchester is 2,582; and the number of Sunday scholars 25,684; forming a grand aggregate of 28,266, which amounts to more than five-sixths of the whole number of children in the two townships of Manchester and Salford, between the ages of 5 and 15 years.*

* When the last census was taken in 1821, the number of children in Manchester and Salford from 5 to 15 years of age stood thus:—16,558 males, 16,603 females; total 33,253.

Those marked with an * are boys' schools; those with † girls' schools; and those without marks admit both boys and girls.

In the Day Schools there are 1581 boys, 1001 girls; and in the Sunday Schools 12,629 boys, 13,055 girls.

The dates refer to the erection of the present buildings.

The MANCHESTER SCHOOL for the education of the DEAF and DUMB, was opened on the 9th of Feb. 1825. The rules prescribe that children shall be admitted, by ballot, from 9 to 14 years of age; but the rule on this point has been relaxed, and children as young as five years of age received. The pupils are boarded, educated, and provided with every necessary domestic comfort, some gratuitously and others by an annual payment. They are taught to speak, read, write, and cypher, and made acquainted with the important truths of revelation, and consequently rescued from a state of mental and moral darkness.

The Societies in Manchester and Salford, which have for their object the dissemination of religious knowledge are—

THE AUXILIARY BIBLE SOCIETY, established in 1810; and the Ladies' Branch Bible Society, established in 1817, is auxiliary to it.

THE AUXILIARY MISSIONARY SOCIETY, a Branch of the London Missionary Society, was established here in 1795; the Church Missionary Association, called "the Manchester and East Lancashire Association," was established in 1815, and the Methodist Auxiliary Missionary Society in 1815.

The Auxiliary Society in aid of the London Society for Promoting CHRISTIANITY AMONGST THE JEWS, was established in 1812. The Society for PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE, was instituted in Aug. 1814, and is auxiliary to the London Society, established in 1699.

RELIGIOUS TRACT SOCIETIES, auxiliary to the London Religious Tract Society, have existed in Manchester nearly from the formation of the parent institution; the Church of England Tract Society was established in 1812, and the Wesleyan Tract Society, was established in September, 1822. The objects of these valuable institutions are happily so well understood, as to supersede the necessity of any detailed description.

Religious Societies.

The Provident Societies of Manchester are more numerous than varied, and the sick clubs which are the most humble, are perhaps the most important in their influence on the community. The MANCHESTER COMMERCIAL CLERKS' SOCIETY, established in 1802, is a provident institution, consisting principally of persons in trade and those employed as clerks or principal servants, who by the payment of an entrance sum, varying according to the age of the members, from three to five guineas, and an annual payment of one guinea, with the aid of the honorary contributions, make a provision for themselves in sickness and old age, as well as for their widows and children. The MANCHESTER ANNUITANT SOCIETY, instituted on the 9th of January, 1807, is of a more general nature, and members, by the payment of an admission fee, varying according to the age when they enter, from 1*l.* to 8*l.* and an annual payment of 2*l.* make a provision for themselves in old age, and for their widows. The SAVINGS BANK at No. 11, Marsden-square, affords a beneficial investment for the savings of the humbler classes. This establishment was opened in January, 1818, and on the 1st of April, 1825, the deposits amounted to £114,738 17*s.* 7*d.*

Provi-
cieties.

At the head of the institutions for healing the sick, both in importance and seniority, stands THE MANCHESTER GENERAL INFIRMARY and DISPENSARY. This establishment was commenced in the year 1752, and has been progressively enlarging its sphere of usefulness, till, in the year ending the 24th of June, 1825, the number of patients admitted (including 2,500 accidents) was 12,569, classed thus—

* Patients visited at their own dwellings.

CHAP. V. swelling the grand total of patients admitted since the first opening of the Infirmary to 382,978, and comprehending an aggregate of benefit which no mind is capacious enough to conceive. The present Infirmary was built in 1755, a house on Shude-hill having been used in the mean time. In ten years afterwards, the buildings forming the Lunatic Hospital and Asylum were erected, but placed upon a separate establishment. Into this asylum 25 patients were admitted in the year ending June 1, 1825, and 72 were previously in the house. The whole number admitted since the opening of the establishment in 1766 is 2,574, of whom 1,014 have been discharged cured; 335 relieved; 804 by request; 339 have died; and 8 were considered incurable. In 1781, the medical officers of the Infirmary began to visit the patients at their dwellings, and in 1792 the Dispensary was added. Many munificent benefactions have been presented to the General Infirmary, but that which far exceeds any other, is the donation of 10,000*l.* presented by Dauntsey Hulme, Esq. in the year 1824, (subject to a life annuity) being the third benefaction from the same gentleman.* An enlargement of the Infirmary has recently been resolved upon: the wings are to be brought in a line with the front, which is to be of stone, with a handsome portico, and it is proposed to remove the Lunatic Asylum.

The HOUSE OF RECOVERY, or Fever Hospital, is one of those charities which operate both by prevention and cure. Its benefits extend to the rich as well as to the poor—by healing the maladies of the latter it protects both classes from the spread of contagion. This establishment is situated in Aytoun-street, and has existed since the year 1796, during which time 10,212 patients have been admitted. In the year ending the 1st of June, 1825, the number of patients was 685, of whom 544 were discharged cured, 104 died, and 37 remained in the house when the report was made up.

The LYING-IN-HOSPITAL, in Stanley-street, Salford, dispenses relief to poor married women in child-birth at their own homes. This charity was instituted in 1790, and the extent of the good it confers may be in some degree estimated from the fact, that during the year ending on the 1st of May, 1825—3163 women enjoyed its benefits. A Ladies' Society, auxiliary to this institution, affords bed-linen for the month to those who are destitute of it, and a suit of linen for the infant.

The HUMANE SOCIETY for the hundred of Salford was originally established under the patronage and principally by the public-spirited exertions of the late Thomas Butterworth Bayley, Esq. Chairman of the Salford Quarter Sessions, and its directions for restoring suspended animation are substantially the same as those inserted in the first volume of this work, at page 181.†

The STRANGERS' FRIEND SOCIETY is an institution formed in the year 1791, at the instance and with the assistance of the Rev. Dr. Adam Clarke. Objects are sought out by the committee, and their wants administered to after due investigation. This is a sectarian society in the good sense of the term: its patrons and supporters are chiefly Methodists, but Methodists alone are excluded from its benefits, and persons of every other denomination, or of no denomination whatever, are relieved by no other standard than the measure of their distress and the capability of the funds. The SAMARITAN SOCIETY, established in 1824, is an institution of a similar nature, whose meetings are held weekly, on the Friday evening, in the vestry of the Methodist chapel in Gravel-lane.

An institution for the cure of DISEASES OF THE EYE was established in King-street, in 1815, and removed to 35, Falkner-street, in 1822. This society, with very slender means, dispenses a large amount of benefit: about 1200 patients being admitted yearly, though the whole annual revenue scarcely amounts to £200.

The LOCK HOSPITAL, 15, Bond-street, for the relief of the most miserable class of human beings, whom poverty and disease have rendered outcasts, was established on the 1st of March, 1819, and had, up to the same period in 1825, administered relief to 3104 claimants, of whom 2786 were out and home-patients, and 318 in-patients.

The FEMALE PENITENTIARY, in Rushulme-road, was opened in 1822, as a temporary asylum for such women as, having deviated from the paths of virtue, are desirous to abandon their vicious courses, and to become qualified by virtue and industry, for reputable situations.

There are several societies for supplying poor persons with articles of clothing gratuitously, the most considerable of which are the Manchester and Salford Church CLOTHING SOCIETY, and the Salford DORCAS SOCIETY, instituted in January, 1822, by all of which much good is done, partly to the poor, but principally to the fair benefactors themselves, from the gratification they derive and the disposition they cultivate while employed in working for the objects of their bounty. The funds of the National and Lancasterian Schools were very seasonably replenished during the present year by the ladies of Manchester and Salford, whose taste, industry, and benevolence accumulated in the Exchange Dining-rooms a large stock of all the vast variety of articles of utility and ornament which ladies are accustomed to fabricate. This splendid Bazaar was opened in the forenoon of Tuesday, the 12th of April, 1825, and proved so attractive as to realize for the institutions upwards of £800, of which sum £183 was received for admission to the rooms, and the remainder for the articles sold.

The Manchester Society, at No. 5, Chapel-walks, for the IMPROVEMENT AND ENCOURAGEMENT OF FAITHFUL FEMALE SERVANTS, established May 1st, 1816, as a free registry office, rewards also the servants of subscribers who have lived stated periods in their service, with annual premiums, and in that way produces a large share of domestic comfort.

Manchester and Salford are rich in public charities. In addition to the foundations of Bishop Oldham, and Humphrey Cheetham, and the Exhibitions of Mr. Hulme, as well as the numerous other charities of more modern date, mentioned above, there are other funds for the use of the poor, to the amount of upwards of four thousand pounds a year. The distribution of many of them is confided to the boroughreeve of Manchester, hence called the Boroughreeve's Charities, and in 1792, Thomas Walker, Esq. at the termination of his year of office, published a list of these charities, which, as he observes, was accurate as far as it proceeded, but was still deficient in some particulars. These particulars we have endeavoured to supply, and the following, it is hoped, will be found a tolerably complete enumeration of this description of Charities in Manchester and Salford, derived from the best authorities:—

HUMPHREY BOOTH, the Elder, founder of Salford chapel, by deed dated 18 Feb. 1630, left an estate consisting of 6 acres of land at Shooter's-brook, and 8 acres called Millward-croft with the buildings thereon, now forming the upper end of Piccadilly, and extending from thence through Garrett to Oxford-road, called the Standley Barn Charity, for the better relief, succour, and aid of such poor aged and impotent people as shall inhabit within the town or borough of Salford, as the constable and churchwarden shall judge proper. One of the effects of these charities is to diminish the pressure of the poor-rate upon the inhabitants, and it is calculated that the contributions of the parishioners in the township of Salford, for the relief of the poor, do not exceed one-half the amount they would be called upon to pay if these charities did not exist. The Select Vestry of Salford, in the laudable discharge of their duty, have recently procured plans to be taken of all the charity lands belonging to the poor of that township, and they have also possessed themselves of all deeds and wills relating to the property for the purpose of guarding against any future misapplication of the funds.

* This act gives the trustees a power to extend and direct the distribution.

† In spite of the "wood-work and the chains," many of these works have disappeared, but there still remains a good collection of old divinity in the closet of Trinity Chapel, unchained and unstolen.

Charities.

One very important charity, though hitherto destitute of vitality, remains yet to be mentioned. THOMAS HENSHAW, Esq. of Oldham, by will dated the 14th November, 1807, expressed his wish that a Blue Coat School should be erected at Oldham, and a Blind Asylum established at Manchester, under the management and direction of trustees; and for that purpose he bequeathed twenty thousand pounds to each of these charities, directing that the said money should not be applied in the purchase of lands or the erection of buildings; and by a codicil to his will dated the 9th January, 1808, he bequeathed to the Blue Coat School the further sum of twenty thousand pounds, empowering his executors to fix the establishment of the said Blue Coat School at Manchester instead of Oldham, if they should think it more convenient. By a second codicil, dated May 9, 1808, Mr. Henshaw appointed the following trustees for the charities: namely, Dauntsey Hulme, Jonathan Beever, John Atkinson, George Duckworth, Nathaniel Gould, Thomas Drinkwater, William Jones, and Thomas Atkinson, all of Manchester; and James Clegg, Thomas Barker, George Hadfield, and John Taylor, of Oldham, with power to fill up their number whenever they are reduced to nine. On the 4th of March, 1810, this princely benefactor died, but, owing to the difficulties of executing the trust, from the prohibition against building or buying land, the capital sum has been allowed to accumulate, and the fund now amounts to about £90,000. In the mean time repeated applications have been made to the Lord Chancellor, for such directions as may best enable the trustees safely to carry into effect the wishes of the testator, and hopes are entertained that the time is not far distant when the difficulties will be removed, and when, instead of the interest reverting back again and again to the fruitless soil of the Court of Chancery, it will circulate in a genial stream through those channels of benevolence in which it was meant to flow. Several changes have taken place in the trusteeship within the last seventeen years, and the following gentlemen form the present list of trustees:—

The Very Rev. Thomas Jackson Calvert, D.D. Warden of Manchester.

John Atkinson, Esq.	John Taylor, Esq.	James Norris, Esq.
Thomas Drinkwater, Esq.	Edward Loyd, Esq.	H. H. Birley, Esq.
Thomas Atkinson, Esq.	John Barton, Esq.	Thomas Hardman, Esq.
Thomas Barker, Esq.	Thomas Heywood, Esq.

The Institutions in Manchester for the promotion of Literature, Science, and the Fine Arts, are, The Literary and Philosophical Society, consisting of 130 members; the Society for the promotion of Natural History; and the Royal Manchester Institution. No provincial society of the same nature has acquired a fame so solid and well deserved as that of the LITERARY and PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY of MANCHESTER; the Memoirs of its Transactions are published in nine volumes, which have been translated into both the German and French languages; and amongst the contributors to those treasures of knowledge we find the names of Richard Watson, D.D. Bishop of Landaff, Thomas Percival, M.D. F.L.S. Charles White, Esq. F.R.S. Thomas Barnes, D.D. Mr. Thomas Henry, F.R.S. John Ferrier, M.D. Rev. George Walker, F.R.S. Rev. Gilbert Wakefield, B.A. James Currie, M.D. Mr. John Gough, and that of the present scientific president, John Dalton, F.R.S.

The Manchester Society for the promotion of NATURAL HISTORY, established on the 30th of June, 1821, has risen rapidly into importance. Already this institution possesses a museum of considerable value and variety, and a library is now forming to consist of books in the various branches of natural history.

The object of the ROYAL MANCHESTER INSTITUTION, as explained by its founders, is to diffuse a taste for the Fine Arts, by establishing a collection of the best models that can be obtained in painting and sculpture, and by opening a channel through which the works of meritorious artists may be brought before the public; and to encourage literary and scientific pursuits, by facilitating the delivery of popular courses of lectures. Early in the year 1823, a few enlightened and public-spirited gentlemen, residing in Manchester, impressed with the propriety of an alliance between the commercial and liberal arts, formed the design of a society of this nature, and a committee was appointed, consisting of its principal promoters, to prepare propositions to be submitted to a general meeting of the inhabitants. That meeting assembled in the Exchange-room, on Wednesday, the 1st of October 1823, and in a series of resolutions passed unanimously, established the society, and, formed its constitution. The first intention was to occupy premises in King-street, but the tide of popular patronage set in so strongly as to expand the views of the governors, who determined to build a Hall in Mosley-street, at a cost of 30,000*l.* which is now erecting.

The Manchester AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY was amongst the earliest of the institutions established in England for the promotion of this highly important branch of rural economy. The society, which was instituted in the year 1767, and now holds its meetings at the Bridge-water Arms, comprehends a range of thirty miles round the town. A FLORAL and HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY has recently been established to encourage the growth of flowers, plants, and fruits; the third meeting of which Society was held on Monday, the 8th of August, 1825, when a large number of prizes were dispensed to the successful competitors.

In connexion with literature and science, the PUBLIC PRESS OF MANCHESTER claims a place in its history. We have already seen that the press, which made so great a sensation in its day, under the direction of "Martin Marprelate," was at work here as early as the year 1580, and that some of the pamphlets for which the unfortunate Penry forfeited his life, were printed in Newton-lane. For 150 years afterwards the history of the public press of Manchester is a blank; but on the 22d of December, 1730, Mr. H. Whitworth commenced the first newspaper printed here, called, Whitworth's Manchester Gazette, the name of which was afterwards changed to the Manchester Magazine. Under this title it was printed in the year 1745, and the number, dated Tuesday, December 24, in that year, gives a circumstantial account of the movements of the rebel army under the young Chevalier, Prince Charles. How long this paper survived the rebellion is unknown, but it had ceased to exist on the 3d of March, 1752, when Mr. Joseph Harrop began the Mercury. On Saturday, March 2, 1752, Messrs. Schofield and Turnbull established a newspaper, under the title of the Manchester Journal, which was discontinued in 1756. The first Manchester Chronicle was published by Mr. T. Anderton, in June 1762, but afterwards discontinued. Another Journal was begun by Mr. John Prescott, on Saturday, March 23, 1771, which shared the fate of its predecessor, leaving the Mercury the entire possession of the field, till Mr. Charles Wheeler commenced the Chronicle, on Saturday, the 23d of June, 1781. Manchester Herald, begun on Saturday, March 31, 1792, by Mr. M. Falkner, was published till the 23d of March, 1793. The Gazette, first published by Messrs. Bowden and Cowdroy, in 1795, was afterwards published by Mr. Cowdroy alone, and now is conducted by Mr. Arch. Prentice, the proprietor. The Telegraph, commenced Jan. 1, 1803, by Messrs. James Edmonds and Co. was the first new periodical publication commenced in Manchester, in the 19th century; it was succeeded by The Mercantile Gazette, and Manchester and Liverpool Daily Advertiser, in August 1803—an unfortunate speculation of the late Dr. Solomon. The British Volunteer, which appeared for the first time on Saturday, June 30, 1804, from the press of Mr. Harrop, of the Mercury-Office, was the next Manchester newspaper. The Mail, issued for the first time on Tuesday, January 1, 1805, by Mr. Joseph Aston, was succeeded by the Exchange Herald, commenced on Saturday, September 30, 1809, by the same publisher, which was afterwards changed to Tuesday, and since to Thursday. The Manchester Magazine, or Chronicle of the Times, was published monthly in 1814, 1815, and 1816. No. 1, of The Manchester Courier, published by C. H. Cowdroy, appeared on Saturday, January 4, 1817. The Observer, first published by Mr. Thomas Rogerson, on Saturday, January 3, 1818, changed hands several times, and was discontinued on the 21st of June, 1821. The Spectator, printed by Mr. T. Wilkinson, appeared first on Saturday, the 7th of Nov. 1818; and was succeeded by the Recorder, published by Mr. J. Leigh, on Thursday, May 6, 1819. The first number of the Guardian was issued on Saturday, May 5, 1821, by Mr. John Edward Taylor; the first number of the Courier, published by Thos. Sowler and Co. appeared on Saturday, January 1, 1825; and two Commercial Newspapers announced for publication on Tuesday, one from the Gazette, and the other from the Guardian Office, complete the series. Several minor periodical papers have been published here, and many valuable works, chiefly in numbers, have issued from the Manchester press.

The Manchester MECHANICS' INSTITUTE, consisting of about 400 members, was opened under very favourable auspices, on Wednesday, the 30th of March, 1825, at their rooms, in the Commercial Buildings, Cross-street. The MECHANIC and APPRENTICE LIBRARY, in Commercial Buildings, was opened on the 14th of February, 1825, and contains about 900 volumes.

A new institution, called THE INFANTS' SCHOOL, has this year been established in London-road, for the reception of children from two to six years of age, as day scholars, on payment of three-pence per week. The object of this school is to keep young children out of danger and bad company, without undue restraint, at the same time that instruction is afforded to them.

There are in Manchester a considerable number of LIBRARIES attached to places of religious worship, containing books on religion and morals. But the principal establishments of this kind, after the College Library, are the Manchester Circulating Library, in Exchange-buildings, consisting of 12,000 volumes, instituted in 1765; and the New Circulating Library, in Pool-fold, founded in 1792. The Portico, in Mosley-street, combines the advantages of a Library and News-room, and partakes much of the nature and character of the London Institutions. This classical edifice was commenced in 1802, and completed in 1805, at a cost of 7000*l.* defrayed by the proprietors, in 400 shares. The Law Library, in Brown-street, instituted on the 21st of July, 1820, consists entirely of professional books, and is supported by gentlemen of the law.

The PLACES OF PUBLIC AMUSEMENT consist of the Theatre, in Fountain-street; the Minor Theatre, or New Pavilion, for pantomimes, melo-dramas, &c. in Spring-gardens; the Assembly Rooms, in Mosley-street; the Concert Rooms, in Fountain-street; the Billiard Rooms, in Mosley-street, and Cross-street; the Diorama, in Cooper-street; the Public Baths, at the Infirmary, and at the Lying-in Hospital, at once afford relaxation and conduce to health. The races, held on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, in Whitsun week, on Kersal-moor, are resorted to by immense numbers, and form a sort of annual carnival.

We have already seen that the manorial rights and privileges of Manchester became vested, by purchase, in the Mosley family,^a in 1596, and in this family they have remained to the present time. In the year 1808, a negociation was set on foot by a town's meeting, for the purchase of the manor, which is co-extensive with the township, comprising the markets, right of holding markets, fairs, tolls, wastes, &c. and including the market site of the Old Shambles, the sites of the St. John's and the Hay-market, in Camp-field, and at New-cross, ancient rents appendant to the manor, issuing from lands in Manchester, Gorton, and Blackley; the site of the Butchers' market, in Deansgate, with Mr. Ainsworth's premises adjoining; and the building used as the cheese market, and the butchers' stalls in the different markets. For this property, and these privileges Sir Oswald Mosley asked 90,000*l.* and the deputation appointed to treat with him offered 70,000*l.*; that difference was however adjusted, but unfortunately for the town another meeting annulled all that had been already done; and from the increased value of the property and tolls since that time, the income of Sir Oswald and his posterity has probably been benefited to the amount of from two to three thousand pounds a year. Under his jurisdiction, the Courts Leet and Courts Baron are held.

v. i. p. 73.

The Court Leet assembles twice in the year—at Easter and Michaelmas, at the latter of which meetings the Boroughreeve and other officers of the manor are appointed. The Court Baron for the recovery of debts and damages under 40*s.* is held every third Wednesday,* and the Court of Requests for the parish of Manchester every second Wednesday, for the recovery of debts under 5*l.* In addition to these Courts, there are held the Court for the Hundred of Salford,† every third Thursday; and the King's Leets and Customary Courts of Record twice a year. The County Court is also now held in Manchester once a month, wherein debts to the amount of 10*l.* may be recovered.^a

The rapid rise of Manchester and Salford in opulence and population, as well as in political and commercial importance, renders it an interesting inquiry, under what local government and municipal regulations that elevation in the scale of the empire has been attained. The inquiry will show, that these towns are governed by the same authority as when their countless streets were subject to the plough, when their manufactures originated with the distaff, and when their exports were made on the backs of pack horses to “London and Sturbich Fayres.” That mass of buildings, (which to a stranger appears to be one town, and is in common parlance so considered, and which consists of the several townships of Manchester, Salford, Ardwick, Cheetham, Chorlton Row, Hulme, and Pendleton, comprehending 157,751 inhabitants,) has no greater authority within its immense population, than that which preserves the peace in the most insignificant village parish. By their respective charters, Manchester and Salford are ancient free boroughs, but they have no corporation, nor do they return any burgesses to parliament.

The Boroughreeves of Manchester and Salford were anciently the conservators of the public peace, and acted as the deputies of the lord, whose rent and tolls they collected. Their duty is now to convene and preside over public meetings, to correspond with public bodies, and to distribute certain charities, which benevolent individuals have consigned to those officers, for the time being, as perpetual trustees: they are also treasurers of the police funds of their respective townships, under an annual appointment. The constables are here, as elsewhere, the principal officers for the preservation of the peace, but the active duties are performed by the stipendiary deputy constables and beades, assisted by so many special constables as may be required. There are also a number of other officers appointed annually at the Michaelmas Court Leet, under the designation of "Market Lookers," "Inspectors of Weights and Measures," "Officers for preventing Ingrossing," "Searchers and Sealers of Leather," "Dog muzzlers," and "Tasters of Ale and Beer," the last of which duties are performed throughout the year with exemplary fidelity, by a large number of self-elected tasters.

The churchwardens and sidesmen of the parish of Manchester are chosen at Easter, at the parish table in the Collegiate church. The poor of this immense parish are, however, under the separate government of the overseers of the thirty townships of which it is composed, and those of the township of Manchester are regulated by a special act of parliament,^a obtained for building the workhouse.* The parochial concerns of Salford are managed by a select vestry. The highways in the parish of Manchester being no less than 122 miles in length, including the public streets, are regulated by an act of parliament, obtained in the year, 1819,^b and the different townships are charged with their repairs.

The police, lighting, watching, and cleansing the town, as well as the hackney coaches, are under the management of an indefinite number of commissioners, as many as choose to qualify, being owners or occupiers of property of the annual value of 30*l.* within either or both of the townships. The meetings are separate, but the act under which they are held is a joint act.^c It is in contemplation to obtain an amendment in this branch of the local government, but the arrangements for that purpose are not yet finally agreed upon. In Manchester, as in London, a stipendiary magistrate presides over the police, the appointment of whom is in the Chancellor of the Duchy. The duties of this situation are very arduous, and the salary paid to the professional gentleman who fills the office is a 1000*l.* a year.† The quarter sessions for the hundred of Salford generally continue for a fortnight; and the chairman of those sessions, whose appointment is in the magistrates of the hundred, has hitherto received for his services 400*l.* a year, in virtue of an act of parliament passed 45 George III. cap. 59 ; but by an act passed in 1825, a power is given to the magistrates to advance the salary to 800*l.* a year. For twenty-two years the Rev. W. R. Hay discharged the duties of this office, which, on his resignation, in 1823, devolved by election upon Thomas Starkie, Esq. but that gentleman having resigned, James Norris, Esq. was appointed his successor, on the 18th of July, 1825, thereby rendering vacant the office of police magistrate. While this sheet was passing through the press Walter Wm. Fell, Esq. author of "The Law of Mercantile Guarantee," &c. was appointed to the vacant chair, but no sooner had he taken his seat, than he was summoned by death to a higher tribunal ; and two out of the twenty-one magistrates present at the July session (of 1825) terminated their mortal career before the final adjournment of the sessions.

A magnificent TOWN HALL has just been erected, in King-street, at a cost of 28,000*l.* for the transaction of the municipal and police business of Manchester. The stile of architecture is derived from the temple of Erectheus, at Athens, and the dome in the centre is taken from the model of the octagonal tower of Andronicus, generally called, the tower of the winds. The figures in the front over the centre of the portico represent the town of Manchester, commerce and trade, and those in the niches, Solon and Alfred. The medallions in the attic, are portraits of Pythagoras and Locke, of Lycurgus and Judge Hale. The building measures 134 feet in front, and 76 feet deep. The offices for the police business, with apartments for the residence of the deputy constable, comptroller of police, and beadles, occupy the ground floor, and the second story consists principally of the public room, 131 feet in length, and 38 feet wide. Much regret has been felt that this beautiful stone edifice should have been placed on so crowded and ineligible a site, and measures are taking to repair this original error, by purchasing some of the neighbouring buildings, with the intention of removing them.

The parochial concerns of this township are gigantic ; they are managed by three churchwardens, eighty-eight overseers and assessors, and a comptroller, with twelve assistants, and six collectors ; but as there is in their administration nothing out of the ordinary way, it will suffice to exhibit the amount of the sums expended for the relief of the poor during the last eleven years, ending the 25th of March, in each year :

In the township of Salford, the annual expenditure for the maintenance of the poor, exclusive of the county rates and the constables' account, amounts only to 3600*l.* while that of Manchester exceeds 21,000*l.* The population of Manchester is, indeed, four times as large as that of Salford, but the parochial disbursement in actual relief is

This difference may partly arise from the advantages of a select vestry, and partly from the poor inhabitants in the latter place being fewer in proportion to the general amount; but another, and a still more important cause than either, is found in the charity funds already described, which in Salford are chiefly at the disposal of the parish officer, and which, if the expression may be allowed, are thus made conducive both to the relief of the rich and the poor—to the payer and to the receiver of poor-rates. The poor rate is at present (August, 1825) 2s. in the pound in each township, there is however a considerable difference in the assessment, that of Salford being lower in proportion to the rack-rent.

The other townships of Manchester have already been enumerated. The relief they afford to their poor is regulated by the same principles as those which prevail in the townships of Manchester and Salford. The whole parish of Manchester contains 34,507 statute acres, or fifty-four miles, as appears from an actual survey, made by Messrs. Johnson and Son, and obligingly communicated by those gentlemen to the author:—

The market days in Manchester are Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. On Tuesday the business between the manufacturers and the merchants is chiefly transacted; and the principal provision market is held on Saturday. The market of Thursday is of minor importance. Till of late, the market accommodation in this town was very scanty, but the spirit of improvement which now so generally prevails, has become visible in the public markets, as the covered market in London-road, opened on the 14th of February, 1824, Smithfield market, at Shudehill, and the market now erecting in Brown-street, for the butchers from the Old Shambles, and the fishmongers from the Market-place, as well as that now erecting for Salford, sufficiently indicate.

* See
v. ii. p. 67. The ancient fair of Manchester is held by charter on the eve, day, and morrow of St. Matthew.^a Formerly Acres field, on which St. Anne's church now stands, formed the scene of this annual festival, but on the erection of that structure, the fair was removed into St. Anne's-square, where it continued till Sir Oswald Mosley, in the exercise of his right as lord of the manor, removed it to the new market at Shude-hill, where it is now held. The other Manchester fair is held at Knott-Mill, on Easter Monday, and is a mere holyday anniversary. There are two fairs held in Salford yearly, the first commences on Whit Monday, and the latter on the 17th of November, and they each continue twenty-one days.

Bridges.

There are five bridges over the Irwell, connecting Manchester and Salford, namely, the Old Bridge, existing from time immemorial, but re-built in the reign of Edward III. Blackfriars Bridge, constructed originally of wood, in the year 1761, but now built of stone, and opened on the 1st of August, 1820; the New Bailey Bridge, opened in 1785; the Regent's Bridge, built in 1806; and Strangeways Iron Bridge, of one arch, erected in 1817.

The existing river and canal navigations, which not only connect Manchester with the port of Liverpool, but also with all the great manufacturing towns of Lancashire, and the principal trading districts of the kingdom, have already been described.^a Vast as were these undertakings, a scheme has been broached, in these adventurous times, still more gigantic, which is nothing less than the making and applying to mercantile purposes a SHIP CANAL, from the Irish sea, at the mouth of the Dee, direct to Manchester. The capital proposed to be invested in this extraordinary enterprise is one million sterling, in 10,000 shares, of £100 each. In furtherance of this object, a bill was brought into parliament at the beginning of the session of 1825, but the proper notices not having been given, nor the levels taken or plans prepared, the project was stopped in limine; and whether it will ever be resumed remains to be determined. In the same session a bill for the construction of an Iron Railway,^b from Manchester to Liverpool, was brought into parliament, but after encountering a very determined opposition in the committee, by which an enormous expense was incurred, the measure was withdrawn from the consideration of parliament, though not till all hopes of success, for that session, at least, had vanished.

The COAL GAS WORKS of Manchester, Water-street, were established in 1817, on a scale of 100,000 cubical feet, contained in seven gasometers. These works were not erected by a company, as in most other places, but by the commissioners of police, and when the additional works now erecting in St. George's-road are complete, they will, it is calculated, yield 10,000*l.* a-year to the ley payers, either to be expended in public improvements, or to be applied in diminution of the rates. Only two gasometers will be employed in the new works, but they will be of a capacity sufficient to contain 130,000 cubic feet of gas.

The Gas Works for Salford, at No. 19, Clowes-street, are the sole property of Mr. Thomas Appleby and Mr. George Clay, and were erected in 1820, on a scale of 11,000 cubical feet of gas. To prevent the neighbouring streams from being fouled by the coal-tar, the engineer has ingeniously invented a contrivance by which it is consumed.

The Manchester and Salford WATER WORKS, No. 13, Piccadilly, were established in 1809. The town is, at present, supplied through pipes from three reservoirs in the township of Beswick, but the capacity of the original works having been found insufficient, two additional reservoirs have been formed in Gorton and Audenshaw, which cover fifty acres of land. The new works are expected to be brought into operation about midsummer 1826.

There are two sets of Barracks here, one of them for cavalry, in Hulme; and the other for infantry in Regent's-road.

Manchester is frequently represented as under the visitation of perpetual rain, but in reality the air and climate of this place do not in any material degree differ from other parts of the county, as already described. Taken on an average of years, there are three wet days and four days of fair weather in the week. On these subjects we are, by the obliging attention of Mr. Thomas Hanson, of this place, put in possession of a large body of meteorological observations, made in Manchester for a number of years past, but the limits of the present work allow of only a summary of their contents. Mr. Hanson's contributions are contained in three tables:—

TABLE II. On the Temperature at Manchester, shows the general annual Mean from 1807 to 1820, both inclusive, to be 49° 87; and

TABLE III. exhibiting the Barometrical Results of the same fourteen years gives 29.75 as the General Mean; 30.669 as the greatest mean Elevation in Inches; 28.350 as the least mean Elevation; 2.314 as the difference of the extremes; 1.02 as the mean variation in twenty-four hours; 64.70 as the mean spaces in inches; and 151 as the mean number of changes per year.

The manners of the people in the manufacturing districts of the county have been already described, and the characteristics there given apply with as much force in Manchester as in any part of the county.^a The appearance of the town is continually improving, from the streets becoming more spacious and the public buildings more handsome. Prosperity, and its natural associate, contentment, prevail to an extent that has seldom been exceeded, and the indications of opulence, which exhibit themselves in a thousand different ways, become every year more decided.

To the enumeration of the men of eminence, produced by Lancashire, and given in the first volume of this work,^b a number of others may very appropriately be added, and the following further contributions to the list of worthies are presented by the town of Manchester:—

Thomas Falkner, an eminent traveller, born in Manchester; died 1774.

Henry Clarke, of Salford, a writer on "The Infinite Series," 1789.

Thomas Henry, F. R. S. an eminent chemist, died in 1816.

Charles White, F. R. S. the first medical officer of the Manchester General Infirmary, an eminent surgeon; died in 1813.

The Rev. Charles Lawson, A. M. an eminent scholar, High Master of the Grammar School, died 19th of April, 1807.

Thomas Barnes, D. D. a divine and philosopher, born at Warrington in 1747; died at Manchester, in 1810.

Joseph Farrington, Esq. R. A. eminent as a landscape painter.

Thomas Barrit, of Manchester, a self taught antiquary; died October 29, 1820.

Lee Phillips, Esq. a naturalist and a liberal patron of the arts, died 1815.

We have thus, with a rapid hand, sketched the history of Manchester, and a finer subject for topography it is not easy to imagine. Instead of sharing the fate of a large portion of the Roman stations, this place has preserved, through successive ages, its rank amongst the first of the British towns; in many of the great political events which have marked the eras of our national history, it has taken a prominent part; the first of the staple manufactures of the kingdom has chosen this for its favourite seat; and the capability displayed by Manchester at the present moment for future growth exceeds even its past prosperity.

MANCHESTER GENERAL DIRECTORY.

EXPLANATION.

The following Directory comprehends the Names of the principal Inhabitants and Traders of Manchester and Salford, and of those residing in the other Townships of the Parish, within two miles from the Exchange.

In some cases this limit is exceeded, when the name of the place is printed in Italic characters.

In general the Names of Persons residing in the Parish, but at a distance exceeding two miles from the Exchange, are printed in the Village Directory, under the head of the Township or Village in which they reside, or have their works.

An Alphabetical List of Markets, Public Offices, &c. is inserted at the end of the Manchester Directory.

Contractions have occasionally been found necessary, but the following Explanations will render them perfectly intelligible.

As there are several streets of the same name in various parts of the town, it is necessary to say, that when a street of this description is mentioned, without reference to any other, the principal street of that name is to be understood. The following list will show which of these are considered the principal.

☞ In order to present the whole list of Manufacturers of Cotton Goods at one view, the introduction of reference figures has been found indispensable, and are used to point out the particular description of fabric produced by each house.

Many firms have the figure 6 attached, which denote Mfrs.
of Cotton Goods generally, but other figures are given to show the leading articles.

And so on in proportion, the postage increasing progressively one penny for a single letter for every like excess of distance of 100 miles.

All letters to and from Scotland are charged an additional halfpenny.

All double, treble, and other letters and packets whatever (except by the penny post) pay in proportion to the respective rates of single letters; but no letter or packet to and from places within the Kingdom of Great Britain, together with the contents thereof, shall be charged more than as a treble letter, unless the same shall weigh an ounce, when it is to be rated as four single letters, and so on in proportion for every quarter of an ounce above that weight, reckoning each quarter as a single letter.

Invoices, bills of lading, bills of exchange, merchants' accounts, &c. if with a letter or any other communication, are charged with extra rates of postage.

Patterns, if sent open at the side, and under one ounce, with no writing except the name of the person, place of abode, and prices of the articles, will be charged only a single letter, but otherwise double. If above an ounce, the full rate of postage, as for other letters.

All law proceedings (if more than one) are charged as separate letters, although only on one sheet of paper.

 The rates of postage are charged by the distance of the routes by which the letters are conveyed: Thus a single letter to Rochdale is charged by the York mail, 4d.; by the Carlisle mail via Bolton, 6d. and others in a similar way.

 During the building of the Bridge over Conway Ferry, an additional rate of 1d. is made on all single Letters to and from this town in communication with North Wales.

MONEY ORDERS.—To prevent the loss of money sent in letters by post, for which the post-office is not accountable, a clerk attends at the money-order office, post-office, from eleven in the morning until three in the afternoon (Sunday excepted) to pay orders drawn upon the Post-master, Manchester, and to give orders payable at sight, on the post-masters where the remittance is required to be paid, to any part of the United Kingdom, for any sum not exceeding five guineas.

Single letters from any seaman in his majesty's navy, or from any sergeant, corporal, soldier, &c. in his majesty's service, within any part of his majesty's dominions, on his own private concern only, not to be charged more than one penny each, to be paid when put into the post-office:—the name of the writer, his class or description, and the name of the ship, regiment, &c. must be given by himself, and the officer actually having the command must sign his name, and the name of the ship, regiment, &c. he commands.

Single letters to any seaman or soldier, &c. under the same restrictions to pay one penny each, at the office where the letter is put in:—to specify on the superscription the class of the person, and the name of the ship, or regiment, &c. to which he belongs; such letter not to be delivered to any person but the one to whom it is directed, or to some person appointed to receive the same, under the hand-writing of his commanding officer.

Not to extend to commissioned or warrant officers, midshipmen, masters' mates, captains' clerks, or school-masters in the navy, or to commissioned or warrant officers in the army.

Officers endorsing letters, knowing them not to be on the private concern of such seaman or soldier, under his command, to forfeit five pounds for every offence.

Officers endorsing letters of seamen or soldiers, not under their command, to forfeit five pounds.

Any person directing a letter to any seaman, &c. intended for another person, to forfeit five pounds.

Any person procuring any seaman, &c. to obtain the signature of his officer, which shall not be on his own private concern; or if any seaman, &c. obtain his officer's signature, for any purpose contrary to what is here intended, each and every person so offending, to forfeit five pounds.

One-half of any of the above sums to the use of his majesty, the other to the informer, recoverable before any justice of the peace where the offence is committed; in default of payment to be committed to the House of Correction, for any space not exceeding one month, or till the penalty be paid.

Dead Letters, Refused Letters, and those whose owners cannot be found, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, in London, on the 15th and last days of every month, for the purpose of being opened; and returned for the writer's information as speedily as possible. Such letters having on either of those days remained the three following distinct periods, according to the different reasons assigned for their non-delivery, viz. One week, if "Refused," or for persons "Deceased." Three Weeks, if "Not Found," or "Gone away without leaving an address." One month, when directed to the post-office, and "not called for." Refused letters are returned, and allowances for overcharged letters made from 12 till 50'clock.

UNCLAIMED LETTERS; NOT FOUND, &c.

A statement of unclaimed letters, and of the "not found," is exhibited at the window of this office.—And a statement is also published daily in the General Post-office Packet List.

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE AND REGULATIONS.

Letters for foreign parts, except the British American and British West India Islands, must be paid (both inland and sea postage): at the post office, when put in, without which they cannot be forwarded. In default they are sent to the general post-office, where they are opened and re-directed to the writers.

SHIP LETTERS.—Letters for places abroad, to which there are no packets—as China, New S. Wales, Sierra Leone, Cape Coast Castle, Goree, Senegal, St. Helena, and many parts of South America, are forwarded in sealed ship letter bags, by vessels sailing from London or the out-ports. The postage, which must be previously paid, is 1s. 9d. Letters brought to this country by merchants' ships, are liable to a sea postage of 8d. for a single letter, in addition to the inland rates.

By the Ship Letter Act, it is enacted, that every master of a vessel, immediately on his arrival in port, shall take the whole of the letters to the Post-office, under penalty of £200, and the captain must sign a declaration that every letter has been so delivered, before his vessel can be reported at the Custom-house.

Letters conveyed outwards in sealed bags, are chargeable with half packet postage, which must be paid when put into the office.

FOREIGN LETTERS

At $\frac{1}{2}$ past 3 aft. the boat arrives at Runcorn, where passengers and luggage are rapidly transferred to a steam packet, by which the route to Liverpool is completed.

Returning from Runcorn to Manchester, the passage boat leaves the former place daily, at 10 mg. passes Preston brook at 11, and London bridge at 1 at noon, where the conveyances above alluded to are again stationed. The boat next arrives at Altringham at 4, and returns to Manchester at 6 in the evening.

Extra steam and passage boats are used during the summer months; the periods of departure are regulated by the tides. The specific hours may be ascertained by reference to printed tables, which are issued by the proprietors.

James Parkinson & George Hitchmough, Masters of the Manchester & Runcorn passage boats.

A passage boat (Thomas Wood, Master) leaves London bridge, near Warrington, every Saturday mg. at 5; at 6 arrives at Lyonn; at Altringham at 8; and Manchester at 10, returning the same evg. from Manchester, at 4 aft. arrives at Altringham at 6; Lyonn at 3; and London bridge at 9 the same ngt.

A passage boat, (Jonathan Oldfield, Master) leaves Worsley at 7, and arrives at Manchester at $\frac{1}{2}$ p. 9 mg. the same packet leaves Manchester at 10 the same mg. arr. at Worsley at 12, the same packet leaves Worsley 3 aft. the same day, and arr. at Manchester $\frac{1}{2}$ p 5 evg. remains $\frac{1}{2}$ an hour, ret. the same evg. from Manchester at 6, and arr. at Worsley at 8, (except Sun.) when the same packet leaves Worsley at 4 aft. and arr. at Manchester at $\frac{1}{2}$ p. 6, leaves at 7, & arr. at Worsley at 9.

The same boat leaves Leigh for Manchester every Tuesday mg. at 6, and on return arrives at Leigh the same evg. at 9.

if requested) at the same hours as the regular boats.

A passage boat conveys passengers and luggage to Liverpool and Southport by Barton, Worsley, Astley, and Leigh. This boat arrives at Wigan at 12 noon, and Scarisbrick bridge at 4 aft. and at Liverpool at 9 at night, (from 1st May to the 29th Sept.) every mg. precisely at $\frac{1}{2}$ p. 6. At Scarisbrick bridge conveyances are in readiness to forward passengers and luggage to Southport (distant about 4 miles) immediately after the arrival of the boats. In the reverse route, viz. from Liverpool to Manchester, the packet arrives at Scarisbrick at 11 mg. (similar conveniences of transit being provided at Southport for the return) at Wigan at 3 aft. & Manchester at 9 evg. During the autumnal and winter months (from 30th Sept. to 30th April) this packet proceeds from Manchester at 1 at noon to Wigan, where it arrives at $\frac{1}{2}$ p. 6 evg.; returning from Wigan next mg. at 7 & arrives at Manchester the following day at $\frac{1}{2}$ p. 12 noon.

Printed statements and other information relative to the above packets may be obtained from Mr. Gould, at the Runcorn, Wigan, and Worsley Packet house, Knot mill.

Office, at the Old Quay, Water-Street,—Thomas Lingard, Principal.

Goods are conveyed by the Company of Proprietors of this Navigation daily, (Sundays excepted) to and from Manchester and Liverpool and the intermediate places, with the greatest despatch and safety, and forwarded by Canal or land carriage, to Ashton, Oldham, Stockport, Rochdale, Leeds, Huddersfield, Halifax, Wakefield, Sheffield, and all parts of Yorkshire.

Sloops or vessels having cargoes to be forwarded by this navigation, are admitted, free of dockage, into a capacious basin, (newly formed at Runcorn) to discharge their cargoes into the company's vessels, plying on this navigation, as also into their newly constructed wet dock, Old Quay, Liverpool.

Packet boats, with passengers and their luggage, sail every morning to and from Manchester and Runcorn. The Liverpool coaches meet the packet at Warrington; and a new steam packet at Runcorn, (as frequently as the tides will admit) meets the Company's packets for the conveyance of passengers, &c. to and from Liverpool. Private rooms, for the accommodation of parties, may be engaged for the day.

During the summer months, (from May to Sept.) the Proprietors of this navigation employ an extra packet, so arranged as to meet the steam packets at Runcorn every day, by which passengers are enabled to proceed to Weston Point and Liverpool without delay.

Information relative to the packets may be obtained by applying at the Company's offices, Manchester, Liverpool, Warrington, and Runcorn.

MIDDLETON.

MIDDLETON is a Market Town and Parish, in the Hundred of Salford, in the Deanery of Manchester, and Archdeaconry of Chester, 4 miles W. of Oldham, 5 miles S.S.W. of Rochdale, 6 miles N.N.E. of Manchester, and 192 miles from London. This Parish contains eight Townships, including two Chapelries, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821; and the estimated annual rental of all the lands, messuages, and other buildings in each township in the parish:

Of the 2241 families in this parish, 262 of them are employed chiefly in agriculture; and 1923 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft; the remaining 56 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed.

Middleton is amongst the most ancient of the parishes in Lancashire. The Bartons were its early lords, but by the marriage of Sir Rafe Assheton, son of Sir John Assheton, of Assheton-under-Line, Knt.^a with Margery, daughter of John Barton, and heir of her uncle Richard Barton, of Middleton, Esq. in the fifteenth century, the lordship of Middleton passed into the possession of the Asshetons. This Sir Rafe Assheton, was Knight Marshal of England in the reign of King Edward IV. and was the Black Knight of Assheton-under-Line, when the ancient annual ceremony, still celebrated in that place, was instituted.^b In the last year of the reign of Edward IV. Sir Rafe fought under the command of Richard Duke of Gloucester, the king's brother, at Hultonfield, in Scotland, and was made Banneret on the field for his gallant services. When Richard ascended the throne, he created Sir Rafe Assheton Vice Constable of England, by his letters patent, in the year 1483, and we are inclined to think, in opposition to the opinion of Dr. Hibbert,^c that it was while in the exercise of the odious and unconstitutional functions awarded to him, by the tyrant Richard, and not in the time of Henry VI. that he became so obnoxious.

Sir Richard Assheton, the grandson of Sir Rafe, was one of the distinguished heroes of Flodden Field, and took prisoner on that memorable day, Sir John Forman, Knight, Sarjeant Porter to King James IV. of Scotland, and Alexander Barrett, high Sheriff of Aberdeen, whom he delivered to Thomas Lord Howard, Earl of Surrey, the general of the English army, and for his valorous service received the honour of knighthood from the king with divers privileges for his manor of Middleton. In the early part of the seventeenth century, Ralph Assheton, Esq. Lord of Middleton, had a son Richard, who died young, in the year 1630, being supposed to be bewitched to death, by one Utley, "who, for this crime, was tried at the assizes at Lancaster, and executed there."^a Ralph Assheton, the father of this ill-fated youth, represented the county of Lancaster in the Long Parliament, and was commander-in-chief of the Lancashire forces under the Commonwealth. His son Ralph, pursuing the same course as Sir George Booth, the representative of the Ashton-under-Line family, espoused the cause of Charles II. and was, after the restoration, created a baronet, in the year 1660 by that monarch. This baronet, in 1716, was succeeded in his title and estates by his nephew Ralph, the last of the male line of the ancient house of Middleton; who had issue one son, who died in his minority, and two daughters, Mary and Eleanor, the former of whom married Harbord Harbord, Esq. afterwards Lord Suffield, son and heir of Sir William Morden Harbord, K.B. and Baronet, of Gunton, in the county of Norfolk; and the latter married Sir Thomas Egerton, Bart. afterwards Lord Grey de Wilton, of Heaton, in this county. On the death of Sir Ralph Assheton, on the 31st of December 1765, the ancient seat of the manor of Middleton and the advowson of the rectory, together with the township and other adjoining property, came into the possession of Lord Suffield, who died in the year 1810; and was succeeded in his title and possessions by his eldest son William Asheton Harbord, who, dying without issue in 1821, was succeeded by his only brother Edward, Baron Suffield, of Suffield, in the county of Norfolk, the present lord.

The parish church of Middleton is dedicated to St. Leonard; no Church record whatever exists to fix the date of the erection; it is certainly very ancient, and has been built at different periods. The south side is evidently of more modern date than the other parts of the church, and an inscription, expressed in the following terms, designates the age in which that part was built, and the persons by whose beneficence the pious service was performed:

The tower is low and surmounted by a superstructure of wood, the sandy foundation being deemed not sufficiently firm to bear a fabric of stone. The choir has three aisles, of which the middle and north belong to the rector, and the south to the Lords of Middleton, for whom it forms the burial place, and is stored with monuments and monumental inscriptions. The most remarkable is that over the commander of the Lancashire forces, and his lady (with their effigies) expressed in these terms:—

In the northern compartment of the chancel, known by the name of "Sir Raphe Assheton's Chapel" are many very curious monuments of the rectors of this church, the accumulation of several centuries, the greater part of whom have been descendants of the Asshetons, formerly patrons of the living. The stained glass which now forms the ornament of the chancel window, was removed hither from an ancient room in the rectory house called "The Hall," where is still to be seen a very curious specimen of a carved oak screen. The rectory house is an antique structure supported in part by buttresses; some of the old inhabitants remember when it was surrounded by a moat with a draw-bridge and a wooden bridge-house; part of the moat is still seen, and in the walls of the house, loop-holes for the discharge of arrows are visible.

The living of Middleton is a rectory, valued in the Liber Regis at £36 3s. 11½d. of which the Right Hon. Lord Suffield is the patron, and the Rev. John Haughton, A.M. the incumbent. A screen of seven compartments, in bold relief, divides the nave from the chancel, on which are shields with the armorial bearings of the Bartons, the Ash-tons, the Ratcliffes, the Byrons, and the Stanleys. The great east window of the church is ornamented by the arms of several noble families, who have been and are resident in the neighbourhood. Many of the side windows are similarly decorated, and among the most remarkable is a group in the window of the north aisle, consisting of a priest and sixteen archers, in a kneeling posture, with their quivers at their backs, and their bows on their shoulders, representing the bowmen who accompanied Sir Richard Assheton to the field of Flodden. To add to the harmony and solemnity of the religious services, a handsome organ has just been erected in the church.

Chapels.

The Methodists have a handsome chapel, in Wood-street, built in the year, 1805, at a cost of about £1550; in the same street there is a small chapel or room, opened in 1807, by the followers of Baron Emanuel Swedenborg; the Primitive Methodists also have a chapel at the bottom of Barrow Field, built in 1823; and during the year 1824, a chapel belonging to the Countess of Huntingdon's connexion was built in High-street. In addition to these chapels the Independents have a room appropriated to religious purposes, in the Market-place; and the Unitarians have a room in King-street. To each of these places of religious worship a Sunday School is attached, and the number of children receiving instruction in these humble but useful seminaries amounts to 1710.

"Queen Elizabeth's Free School of Middleton," was founded and endowed "with a competent salary both to the master and under master," by Alexander Nowell, D.D. Dean of St. Paul's, by charter dated August 11, 1572; the Dean at the same time founded thirteen scholarships in Brazen Nose College, Oxford, "for the better encouragement of learning and true Christian religion among the rude inhabitants of Lancashire, he being a native there."^a Owing to the great depreciation in the value of money, none of the scholarships have been claimed for upwards of a hundred years past, and neither the master nor the under master of Middleton school has "a competent salary." Hence the benevolent intentions of the founder, and the reasonable expectations of the parishioners are both defeated. A persuasion in the mean time prevails here, how well founded we have not the means of ascertaining, that the principal and fellows of Brazen-nose College, Oxford, who are the incorporated governors of the Free School, have the power by the charter, and ample means from the endowment funds, to increase the revenue of the school to £150 per annum, and it is highly desirable that the inquiries of the parliamentary commissioners should be directed to this unfortunate foundation.

Middleton Hall, the ancient mansion house of the Ashtons, having Mansion & Park. fallen into decay, was taken down, and partly rebuilt about twenty years ago, since which time it has been occupied by the steward of the estate. The park is no longer a pasture for deer, but has been converted into farms. Since the establishment of manufactures here, the town has increased greatly; and the five hundred inhabitants contained in the parish, in the time of the commonwealth, are now swelled to upwards of twelve thousand. To promote the accommodation of this continually augmenting population, a grant for holding a weekly market, and three annual fairs, was obtained from the crown, in 1791; and Lord Suffield, at a very considerable expense, built commodious Shambles and a Market-house, with a range of warehouses for general merchandise. The day fixed for holding the Market is Friday; and for the fairs, the first Tuesday after the 11th of March; the first Tuesday after the 15th of April; and the second Thursday after the 29th of September; but both the markets and fairs are nominal, there being no business done at either of them. Population.

The cotton trade is carried on in this township and parish to a Trade. considerable extent; and the processes of spinning, weaving, bleaching, and printing, are to be seen here in all their different branches. The cotton manufactory of Daniel Burton and Sons, in the centre of the town, is worked by two steam engines, one of forty, and the other of twenty-four horse power, by the agency of which 11,000 spindles, and 500 power looms are put in motion, the latter of which are principally employed in producing calicoes for the printers. The same firm has an extensive print work in the vicinity, on the banks of the Irk, at a place called "Rhodes," where a steam engine of twelve horse power is employed to supply any deficiency of water. The other manufactures of the place are nankeens, gingham, checked handkerchiefs, &c. The silk trade is making considerable progress here, and Messrs. Oakes and Aubrey have lately established an extensive manufacture of that fabric. Coals are obtained in abundance, not in Middleton, but in the townships of Thoruham and Hopwood, in this parish.

The government of the parish is in two constables, chosen at the Government. annual court leet and court baron, held in October, which courts are also held in April, under the lord of the manor of Middleton. In the year 1812, when the spirit of *Luddism spread from the county of Nottingham into Yorkshire, and prevailed in some degree in Lancashire, a riotous assembly, consisting of several thousand persons, rose on the 20th of April, in this parish, and gathered, with menacing array, round the power loom weaving manufactory of Messrs. Daniel Burton and

* Luddism had for its object the destruction of manufacturing machinery, recently introduced, which superseded or diminished manual labour in the manufacture of the articles to which it was applied: hence the broad stocking frames of Nottingham, the cloth dressing machinery of Yorkshire, and the power looms of Lancashire, were peculiarly obnoxious to the Luddites.

Sons, in the centre of the town of Middleton. This event was foreseen, and arms had been provided for the protection of the property. The mob, unintimidated by the knowledge of this circumstance, commenced an attack upon the mill, where they were fired upon and four of their number killed. This terrible example saved the premises from destruction; but the following day an attack was made upon the house of Mr. Emanuel Burton at some distance from the mill, which was set on fire and destroyed. Here the mischief ended, and the arrival of a large body of cavalry from Manchester restored tranquillity.

The soil of this parish is very variable, some parts being strong clay and others light sandy loam; the area of the parish comprises from 7000 to 8000 statute acres, of which the township of Middleton contains upwards of one thousand acres, seven yards to the perch, called in Lancashire customary measure. The largest township in the parish is Thornham.

In many of the parishes of Lancashire the establishment of manufactures has been the signal for the gentry withdrawing themselves from the place, and taking up their residence at a distance; the reason is obvious; trade gives an increased value to landed property, and the proprietor, influenced partly by the consideration of an improved rent-roll, quits a station, which has diminished charms as a country residence, and takes up his abode where he can enjoy more comfort at a less cost. The failure of the male line in the Ashton family contributed to produce this effect at Middleton, and that land is not likely ever again to be occupied for parks and pleasure grounds, each acre of which now yields to the noble proprietor from five to ten pounds a year.

NEWTON IN MACKERFIELD.

NEWTON IN MACKERFIELD is a small Borough Town and Chapelry in the Parish of Winwick, and in the Hundred of West Derby; 5 miles N. of Warrington, and 7 miles S. of Wigan. This Borough contains 275 houses, occupied by 289 families, consisting of 1643 persons. Of these families 55 are employed chiefly in agriculture, 221 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft, and the remaining 13 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed. The rental of the lands, messuages, and other buildings in the township, according to the estimate for the county rate, amounts to £6202.

This place was described nearly three hundred years ago by Leland, as "Newton on a brooke, a litle poore market, whereof Mr. Langton hath the name of his Barony. Sir Perse Lee, of Bradley, hath his place at Bradley, in a parke a ii miles from Newton.*" The market which was held on Saturday, has now fallen into disuse, and the barony is extinct, though the Court Baron is still held here, and small debts have been recovered under its jurisdiction within a few years.

Edward the Confessor was Lord of Newton, the barony of which passed successively to Roger de Poitou, and the Langtons. From documents of the date of the 22 Edw. I. and 2 Edw. II. it appears that Sir John Langton obtained the wardenship of Alice, daughter and heiress of James Banister, Lord of Walton-le-dale, whom he afterwards married. Both the Barony of Newton, and the Lordship of Walton, remained in the family of Langton, till the 32d Elizabeth, when Thomas Langton, that year High Sheriff of the County of Lancaster, then in the 62d year of his age, slew Thomas Hoghton, of Hoghton Tower, Esq. in a rencontre at Lea, near Preston, and, to make his peace with the Hoghton family, settled on them the manor of Walton, "for a term of years," says the Lancashire MS. book of pedigrees, "but the possession was kept in perpetuity."

Newton still retains so much of its former dignity, that it returns two members to Parliament, in virtue of the ancient barony; it is not, however, amongst the number of early boroughs, for the elective franchise has not existed here longer than since the first year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth. William Shippen, Esq. one of the representatives of the borough in 1717, was committed to the tower for reflecting on the king's speech (George I.) when the House was in a committee of supply, the honourable member having said, "that the second paragraph of the speech seemed rather to be calculated for the meridian of Germany, than of Great Britain, and that the king was a stranger to our language and constitution." Of this member the story is told, which is more correctly related of Andrew Marvel, that he secured his independence by limiting his wants, and that he made three dinners of a shoulder of mutton.

The right of election for the borough of Newton is exclusively vested in the freemen or burgesses of the borough, that is, of any person possessing a freehold estate in the borough of the value of forty shillings a year or upwards, of whom the number is at present about 60. Thomas Legh, Esq. of Lyme Park, in Cheshire, and of Haydock Lodge and Golborne Park, in this parish, and Sir Robert Townshend T. Farquhar,

* The most and ancient gateway of Bradley-hall still remain.

Bart. are the present representatives. The returning officers are, the steward of the borough, and bailiff of the manor. These officers hold a Court Baron and Court Leet in the months of April, May, and October, and in them is vested the government of the borough.

Thomas Legh, Esq. is the present Lord of the Manor, the property of which his family acquired by purchase about two centuries ago. Some idea of the former importance of the borough may be found from the great extent of the fee of Mackerfield, which is incident to the manor, and which extends over the adjacent townships of Lowton, Golborne, Haydock, Ince, Pemberton, Billinge, Winstanley, Orrell, Hindley, Abram, Kenyon, Ashton, Southworth with Croft, Houghton, Middleton and Arbury, Woolston with Martinscroft, and Poulton with Fearnhead; the freeholders within which townships owe suit and service at the Courts Leet, which are held for the borough and manor of Newton and fee of Mackerfield. The bailiffs of Wigan also owe suit and service there, and are in the suit roll.

There is here a free school, the endowment of which is about £50 a year; the Rev. John Sedgwick is the master, and the school, like the chapel of Newton, is in the patronage of Thomas Legh, Esq.

The town consists principally of one broad street. The sports of the turf and of the cockpit formerly prevailed in this borough to a considerable extent; but in the year 1816 they were discontinued, or rather suspended, for it is now announced that Newton races are to be resumed in the year 1825, and held this year, and in future years, the first week after the Manchester races. There are also two fairs held yearly, namely, on the 17th and 18th of May, and the 11th and 12th of August. There are several very ancient houses in the township. The Old Hall and the Oak-tree House, both built of wood, and situated at opposite extremities of the borough, are worthy of notice. Adjoining to the Old Hall is a small rising ground, formerly surrounded by a moat, and tradition represents that it was once a royal residence.

At the distance of half a mile from and to the N. of Newton, stands an ancient barrow, called Castle-hill. It is romantically situated, on elevated ground, at the junction of two streams, whose united waters form the brook which flows past the lower part of the town of Newton. The sides and summit of the barrow are covered with venerable oaks, which, to all appearance, have weathered the rude and wintry blasts of centuries. It is a spot well adapted for the repose of the ashes of the mighty dead. The barrow is about twenty-five yards in diameter, and from eight to nine yards in height.*

* On the 24th of July, in the year 1822, a whetstone, encased in wood, in a state of decay, was found by two colliers, about 30 yards below the surface, while they were sinking a coal-pit, two miles to the north of Newton. The strata above it were a foot of brown soil, four feet of red clay, five feet of red book-leaf marl, 74 feet of toad-back marl, and six feet of grey quicksand, in which the whetstone was found, being part of a bed of sand 17 yards deep. All the gravel in the quicksand was mixed with round pieces of coal, and both the marl above the whetstone and the gravel below it contained oyster and other sea-shells. No other coal-pit had been sunk within a hundred yards of this place, nor is any stone of this kind found in the neighbourhood, and the probability is, that the whetstone has remained in the quicksand as long as the sea-shells, which were found above and below it. This relic of other times is in the possession of the Rev. Peter Legh, incumbent of the Parochial Chapel of Newton, to whom we are indebted for the communication of these interesting facts. Upwards of a century before a whetstone was discovered in a morass, some distance from Martin Meer, and with it an instrument of mixed metal resembling in form the Roman securis, or sacrificing axe.

The country is flat, but fertile, and the soil is partly a strong and partly a sandy loam. To the west of Haydock Lodge, there is a small tract that has almost the tenacity of clay.

The Parochial Chapel was built at the expense of Richard Legh, Esq. in the year 1682. It is dedicated to St. Peter, and is in the patronage of Thomas Legh, Esq. who a few years ago enlarged the chapel yard, and erected, at his own expense, the present handsome stone wall, and iron palisades, which enclose it. The Rev. P. Legh, M.A. is the present incumbent.

The amount of the expenditure of Newton, in the year 1824-25, in support of the poor, the constable's account, and county rate, was 840*l.* 17*s.* 5½*d.*;—of which sum 146*l.* was paid for the county rate; 66*l.* 8*s.* for law expenses; and 14*l.* 18*s.* to the mole catcher!

Upwards of 400 children are educated at the Church Sunday-schools, established in the year 1823. The public buildings are an ancient court-house, and a handsome assembly-room.

OLDHAM.

OLDHAM is a township and parochial chapelry, (connected with Prestwich,) in the Hundred of Salford, in the Deanery of Manchester, and in the Archdeaconry of Chester, 7 miles S.S.E. of Rochdale, 7 miles N.E. of Manchester, 17 miles S.W. of Huddersfield, and 190 miles from London. Of the 6982 families in this chapelry, 215 of them are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 6667 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft, and the remaining 100 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed.

Oldham is strictly within the parish of Prestwich, but the descendant has so much outgrown the parent, that the chapelry has begun to take precedency of the parish, and though in the population returns published by the authority of parliament, in 1811, the term "Prestwich-cum-Oldham," is applied to this parish; yet, in the succeeding return of 1821, the words are reversed, and they stand "Oldham-cum-Prestwich;" but the inhabitants of Oldham, and of the other townships in the chapelry, still marry at Prestwich church, and the rector of Prestwich, in virtue of his office, holds the patronage of the living of Oldham. With some degree of subordination, there is, however, much of independence in the church of Oldham. The townships of Oldham, Chadderton, Crompton, and Royton, support Oldham church by a rate, without contributing in any way towards the church of Prestwich, and the inhabitants of these townships have the rites of sepulture and baptism at Oldham church only. The register books of Oldham and Prestwich are quite distinct and unconnected, and each place has its separate churchwardens. Growing, as this extensive chapelry is, in wealth and in importance, and containing, as it does, a population of 40,000 souls at least, the greater part of whom are at a distance of eight miles from the parish church of Prestwich, it was hoped and expected, when Earl Grosvenor purchased the advowson of that living some years ago, that he would have erected Oldham into a separate parish, under the authority of parliament, after the example of Chorley and several other places in this county, where the necessity was less urgent. From causes with which the public are unacquainted, this expectation has not hitherto been realized; and it may be judged advisable that his majesty's commissioners for building new churches should exercise the powers with which they are invested, of dividing the parish into districts for ecclesiastical purposes.*

The town of Oldham is situated on an eminence, near the source of the Irk, and is washed on the east by a branch of the Medlock. These streams formerly contributed in a material degree to the manufacturing prosperity of the place, and they are still of considerable utility, but the general introduction of steam engines has diminished the necessity for water-power, and supplied its place by a more potent and an unfailing agency.

The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Mary; it was built in the year 1476, by Sir Ralph Langley, Knight, parson of Prestwich, and the third warden of Manchester.†^a The Radcliffes, the Cudworths, and the Hortons have each family monuments within it, and are all, as well as the Asshetons, whose burial-place was Middleton, closely identified with the chapelry of Oldham.

The ancient family of the Radcliffes, of Royton Hall, are descended from Nicholas Fitz Gilbert de Radcliffe, youngest brother of Fitz-Gilbert the fourth baron of Kendal, in the time of Henry II. which Nicholas held the manor of Oldham of his nephew William the first lord of Lancaster.^b This family of the Radcliffes, long settled in the chapelry of Oldham, became connected, by intermarriage through successive ages, with many of the principal families in the county of Lancaster,^a and William Radcliffe, Esq. by marriage with Elizabeth Dawson, a Yorkshire heiress, succeeded to the Milns-bridge estate in that county. This William, dying without issue, on the 26th of September, 1795, bequeathed his estate to his nephew, Joseph Pickford, of Althill, Esq. who, in compliance with the will of his maternal uncle, took the name of Radcliffe, and who, for his "exemplary exertions as a magistrate,"^c in resisting the spirit of insubordination which existed amongst the cloth-dressers in the West-Riding of Yorkshire, in the year 1812, was created a baronet, on the 2d of November, 1813. Sir Joseph, on his death, in 1818, was succeeded by his grandson, the present Sir Joseph Radcliffe, Bart. of Campsall Park. The ancient family of Radcliffe, which spread from the parent stock of Radcliffe Tower, in this county, into the branches of Ordsal, Oldham, Smithells with Edgeworth, Wimmersley, and Todmorden, after having risen nearly to the summit of English nobility in the Earls Sussex of that name, is now almost extinct in Lancashire.

The Cudworths, of Wernith Hall, are a branch of the Cudworths, of Cudworth, in Yorkshire; and John Cudworth, by marriage with the daughter and co-heiress of Matthew de Oldham, in the reign of King

* In an Inquisition, made by order of Parliament, on the 4th of June, 1650, Oldham is called a parish, and the church "Oldham Parish Church," of which the Rev. Robert Constantine was minister, with a stipend of £100 per annum, paid out of the tithes, amounting to near £140.

† Sir Ralph was the second son of Langley, of Edgecroft. This family became extinct in the reign of Elizabeth; the last of them being Sir Robert Langley, who left four daughters, one married to Reddish, of Reddish; the second to a younger brother of the Leighs, of Lime, by whom he had Alkington, now in possession of the Levers; the third to Assheton, of Chadderton, who became patron of Prestwich; and the fourth to Dauntzey, of Agecroft, whose descendants now possess the ancient seat of the Langleys.

John, became possessed of this estate. In the thirty-fourth of Henry VI. the manor-house took fire, and was destroyed, and the family records shared the fate of the mansion. In due time the house was rebuilt, and the manor and estate remained in the family till the early part of the last century. Dr. Ralph Cudworth, son of Ralph Cudworth, "Chief Lord of Oldham," as Fuller calls him, was born here. About a century after his death, Joshua Cudworth, Esq. the representative of the family, sold Wernith Hall, and the estate, to Sir Raphe Assheton, of Middleton, who presented it as a portion to his third daughter, Catharine, on her marriage with Thomas Lister, of Arnoldsbiggin, Esq. This estate, which consists of about one hundred acres of land, with valuable minerals, chiefly of coal, and extensive common rights, was sold to Messrs. Parker and Tidebottom, of London, for 25,000*l.* and re-sold by them, in the year 1794, for 30,000*l.*^a to John Lees, of Oldham, Esq. the father of Edward Lees, Esq. the present owner. Hugh Oldham, Bishop of Exeter, who lived on the eve of the Reformation, was born at Oldham, in a house still standing, in Goulburn street, and was doubtless a descendant of Matthew de Oldham. Fuller says of this prelate, that he "was no ill scholar, and a good man, most pious according to and above the devotion of the age he lived in; he was a foe to monkish superstition, and a friend to university learning. Brazen Nose College, in Oxford, and Corpus Christi College therein, will for ever bear witness to his bounty to advance religion and learning. Besides the town of Manchester has good cause to remember him, who founded and endowed a school therein^b (the Free Grammar School), with large revenue, appointing the warden of the college therein Caput Scholæ. This bishop, having a tough contest with the Abbot of Tavistock, was excommunicated for refusing to stand to the decision of the court of Rome, and dying excommunicate,^c was buried upon the brink of his own chapel, on the south side of the cathedral."

Oldham Church was originally a small, simple edifice, suited to the manners and the means of the inhabitants. As the number of parishioners has increased, the Church has been enlarged, and it consists at present of a body, a chancel, and two aisles, with a tower attached. The Rev. John Fallowfield is the incumbent. The dilapidating hand of time, operating upon a building never remarkable for its strength, and necessarily impaired by the alterations it has undergone, combined with the circumstance of the inhabitants within the chapelry having swelled to upwards of 40,000 souls, has suggested the propriety of providing more suitable accommodation, and an act has accordingly just been obtained, conformable to the resolutions of the parishioners in vestry assembled, for taking down the present Church, and building a new one in its place; the funds for defraying the expense of the erection to be raised by an assessment upon the inhabitants, to which the owners of property are to contribute two-thirds, and the tenants one-third. The commissioners under the million act have it also in contemplation to build a new Church, on a site near the bottom of Greenacres moor, in this township, principally to accommodate the inhabitants of the populous village of Mumps, the cost of which is estimated at 15,000*l.* St. Peter's Chapel, in Chapel-street, High-street, was built in 1765, by a voluntary subscription raised by the inhabitants; and in the year 1804, this structure was enlarged, and provided with a fine-toned organ. The incumbent is the Rev. William Winter.

The other places of religious worship in Oldham, are the Methodist Chapels. Chapel, in Manchester street, built in 1789, and opened by the Rev. John Wesley, on Good Friday, in the year 1790, which superseded a small chapel erected in this place for the same religious community in 1775; the Baptist Chapel, situated at the top of Manchester street, built in the year 1805, by the followers of Mr. Alexander Kilham, the founder of the Methodist New Connexion, but sold by them in 1816 to the Baptists, by whom it was opened on the 6th of September in that year; the Unitarian Chapel, in Lord-street, opened on the 4th of Jan. 1816; the Independent Chapel, in Queen street, built in 1822; the Independent Methodist Meeting-house, in George street, built by a sect of seceders from the Methodists; and the Primitive Methodist Chapel, in Grosvenor-street. There is also a Meeting-house for the Society of Friends, at Twif-lane, Royton, which community has existed here ever since the foundation of Quakerism. To all the principal places of religious worship, in Oldham, Sunday schools are attached, and the inhabitants are laudably emulous to afford instruction to the rising generation.* The new chapel and schools at Salem, built in the year 1824, by John Lees, Esq. of Lower Clarksfield, are dedicated to the use of the church of the United Brethren, (Moravians.) Clarksfield has been the residence of the family of Lees, ever since the reign of James I. In the year 1625, this estate was purchased by Mr. John Lees, from Sir George Booth, of Dunham park, and was devised to the late John Lees, Esq. of Ashton, in 1766, who resided there in the early part of his life, and at his death, in 1815, the property descended to John Lees, Esq. of Fairfield, the present owner. Under his direction the ancient mansion has been greatly improved and beautified, and in addition to an extensive view of the vale of the Medlock, the situation commands a prospect of the Cheshire, Derbyshire, and Staffordshire hills, as well as of the mountain scenery of Greenfield and Stanedge.

The Free Grammar School of Oldham, situate in School croft, was founded by James Assheton, Esq. of Chadderton-hall, in 1611, and endowed with about a statute acre of land in the centre of the town. This land is now built upon, and the rents of the premises yield a salary both to the head master, the Rev. William Winter, and to his usher. The trust deed bears date the 15th of May, 1607,^a and the original trustees were the principal inhabitants of the chapelry, with Lawrence Chadderton, Master of Emanuel College, Cambridge, at their head. According to the provisions of this deed, the children were "to be freely instructed in the English, Greek, and Latin tongues, and withall in good manners." In addition to these branches of learning, the education is partly commercial, and writing and arithmetic are taught, for which the usual quarterage is paid. An inquisition, sans date, quoted in the Kuerden MS. orders, "that the feepees being dead, a new deed shall be executed." The commissioners further report, that "James Ashton, of Chadderton, dec: did by deed made to Law: Chaderton and other feepees grant a real charge of 40s. for eur to the schoole of Oldham out of a Oldham has had the honour to produce two of the most munificent benefactors of this county—Hugh Oldham, bishop of Exeter, and Thos. Henshaw, Esq. an opulent hat manufacturer. The richly endowed Free School, at Manchester, is a perpetual monument of the bounty of the former; but the charity of the latter has hitherto been obscured, and is almost unknown. It has already been stated, in this work,^a but it may not be improper here to repeat, that Mr. Henshaw, by will, dated the 14th of November, 1807, bequeathed 20,000*l.* for the endowment of a Blue Coat School, at Oldham, and the same amount for a Blind Asylum at Manchester. By a codicil to this will, made in the following year, he bequeathed the further sum of 20,000*l.* for the endowment of the Blue Coat School, leaving to his trustees an option either to establish the school at Oldham, or at Manchester. A provision in the will disqualifying the trustees from building, or purchasing lands, or erections, for the use of these establishments, has hitherto prevented them from carrying into effect the benevolent intentions of the testator, and the money has in consequence accumulated to the sum of 90,000*l.* Endeavours are now making by the trustees to bring these charities into active operation, and it is fervently to be hoped, that some method may be devised to withdraw this immense fund from the unfruitful embraces of the high Court of Chancery, and apply it to the use of those for whose benefit it was intended. Though the will forbids that any part of the principal sum devised should be expended in the purchase of lands or buildings for the use of the charities, the restriction may not apply to the appropriation of the accumulated interest to this purpose, and 30,000*l.* would provide sufficient premises for both institutions.

The Bible Society has an auxiliary in Oldham, established in the year 1821, connected with which there is a Ladies' Bible Association of the same standing. The Benevolent Society for the relief of the sick is another of the charities of this place, established in 1814; and the Humane Society administers both to the temporal wants of the sick, and to their spiritual necessities.

Manufactures have grown in this place with astonishing rapidity. Sixty years ago there was not a cotton mill in the chapelry; at present there are no fewer than sixty-five, of which all, except two, have been built during the present century. These mills, which are wholly employed in spinning cotton, are all worked by steam, and there are, within the same limits, one hundred and forty steam engines, used in the various processes of manufacturing and mining. The vicinity of Oldham to Manchester, the great mart for cotton goods, the advantages of water, but above all the abundant supply of coal, from the mines in the surrounding townships, have constituted this one of the most extensive and improving seats of the staple manufacture in the county. The goods chiefly made here are fustians, velveteens, and cotton and woollen cords.

The manufacturers of Glodwick, in this township, lay claim to the invention of the spinning jenny; but that claim is urged with so entire an absence of dates and particulars, that it is not likely to shake the well-founded pretensions of the reed-maker of Leigh, as exhibited in the history of the rise and progress of the cotton trade in this work.^a of hats. As early as the year 1482, a great alarm existed in this county, on account of the introduction of machinery for the abridgement of manual labour, as applied to the fulling of hats, which operation had hitherto been performed by the action of the hands and feet; and it is probable, though there is no positive evidence of the fact, that the journeymen batters of Oldham were amongst the number of those who petitioned parliament, with some success, to forbid the use of the new machines;^b however that may be, the hat manufacture has continued to prevail in this place ever since, and it is now carried on to a greater extent here, in proportion to the number of inhabitants, than in any other town in the British empire.

The coal mines in this neighbourhood open an important branch of Collieries trade, and give employment to a large number of persons. Every township in the parish has its collieries, and the quality of the coal obtains for it a preference in the Manchester market. The quantity of fuel dug up yearly from the numerous beds is immense, and the supply seems inexhaustible. The coal strata, as well as all the other minerals, dip here to the S. S. W., or, as it is technically called, to the two o'clock sun; and coal is found at all the distances, from the surface to a depth of 150 yards. The beds vary in thickness, from half a yard to five feet. The trade and traffic of the neighbourhood, both in coal and in the various branches of the manufacture, are essentially promoted by the inland navigation; and the Oldham Canal, which commences at Hollinwood, on the west side of the town, and communicates with Manchester, Ashton-under-Line, and Stockport, as well as the Rochdale canal, which passes through the heart of the township of Chadderton, co-operate to enrich and improve this district. To add to the number and to the facilities of conveyance, a railway is projected from Oldham to Manchester, and it is difficult to imagine a more advantageous situation for the application of this new mode of conveyance, whether with regard to the easy inclined plane on which the road may be constructed, or the vast weight of coals and merchandise which daily pass in this direction.

A chalybeate spring was discovered at Lees, about a mile from Spring-Oldham, 30 years ago, which acquired a considerable degree of celebrity. "This spring," says Dr. Walker, of Huddersfield, "is distinguished from the great majority of chalybeates, by the presence of aluminous earth;" "it owes its impregnation to its contiguity to coal pits, and perhaps to the decomposition of pyrites so abundant in this district." The saline contents of a quart of the Oldham spa water, the Doctor found, by analysis, to be as follows: Sulphate of iron, 21—0; sulphate of alumine, 5—6; oxyde of iron, in solution with carbonic acid, 4—0; sulphate of lime, 1—4. The indiscriminate use of this water is strongly condemned, and when there is a feverish state of the system, it is absolutely forbidden; but, as a tonic remedy, it is entitled to confidence, and it is strongly recommended in scorbutic and scrofulous complaints, and indeed in all that class of cutaneous diseases connected with constitutional debility. "When properly used," says our authority, "this spring seldom fails to renovate the appetite and spirits, and to amend the general health and strength."* About four years ago

* A small wine-glassfull, which contains nearly two grains of the salt, is a proper dose to adopt in the first instance, and may be repeated two or three times a-day. If it agree with the patient, the quantity may be increased, but, from its astringent properties, care must be taken to counteract any tendency to obstipation.

this spring was in so much repute, that the waters, which were supposed to be a sort of universal specific, whether taken internally or applied externally, were taken to a distance, and sold at a high price; but undue popularity of all kinds has generally its season of re-action, and the virtues of the Oldham spa water are now as much under-rated as they were formerly over-valued. Like other water, it will ultimately find its level.

ments.

Oldham is preparing to compete in the race of public improvements which, at this period, prevails so generally in the manufacturing towns of Lancashire. It is in contemplation, and the surveys for the purpose are already made, to establish, with as little delay as possible, both water works, which have long been wanted, and coal gas works, which will greatly improve the appearance of the town by night, and for the generation of which luminous vapour the raw material is so near at hand. A police act, with powers for erecting a town-hall and public offices, is also prepared for the next session of parliament. This is the more necessary, as Oldham has become a principal connecting link between the two first counties in the north of England—York and Lancaster, and the number of carriages and travellers passing through the town, both by night and by day, is already very large, and daily increasing.

There is no regular market-day here, but Saturday is observed as a kind of vegetable and flesh market. There are three annual fairs for cattle, horses, sheep, and pedlery, two of them stationary, and the third moveable; the fixed fairs are on the 2d of May, and the 8th of July, and the moveable fair is on the first Wednesday after the 12th of October.

Inquest.

Soon after the memorable 16th of August, in the year 1819, the attention of all England was directed to a judicial inquiry which took place in this town, arising out of the death of one John Lees, a cotton spinner, and which proceeding was called emphatically the Oldham Inquest. The deceased, while in attendance at the Manchester reform meeting, over which Mr. Hunt presided, had received several bruises in different parts of his body, and a sabre wound upon his arm; to these injuries he had not paid proper attention, in consequence of which a mortification ensued, and he died on the 7th of the following month. To ascertain the cause of his death, an inquest was summoned, by the clerk of the coroner for the district, the principal being at that time from home on his professional duty, at the assizes at Lancaster. After an investigation continued by adjournments, partly in the presence of the coroner, and partly in that of his deputy, for several weeks, and conducted in the spirit of those unhappy times, the whole proceeding was rendered nugatory by a decision of the Court of King's Bench, which determined that the inquest was illegal, because it was not originally held by the coroner, but by his deputy; and, though the coroner had caused the body to be disinterred, that it might be viewed by him in the presence of the jury, yet as he had not re-sworn the jury, after the inspection, the defect of the original holding was not remedied. Under these circumstances the jury was dismissed without being called upon for their anxiously expected verdict.

Royton.

The Chapelry of ROYTON extends to the north of Oldham, and though the least of the three dependant townships, it contains a population of upwards of 5000 inhabitants. The village is situated in a deep valley, and is fast assuming the form of a regular town. There is here a small episcopal chapel, subject to Oldham, called St. Paul's, built in the year 1754, on land presented by Thomas Percival, Esq. of Royton Hall, for that purpose. The mansion called Royton Hall was long in the possession of the Byron family, (the ancestors of the illustrious poet of that name) and who were the principal proprietors of the soil. After the decease of Mr. Percival, this hall was occupied by Joseph Pickford, Esq. (afterwards Sir Joseph Radcliffe, Bart.) but it is now falling into decay. This township has the usual characteristics of the parish: the cotton manufactures prevail to a considerable extent, and valuable beds of coal are found under at least one-half the land.

CHADDERTON is situated to the west of Oldham, and forms a right angle with Royton. The early history of the township is chiefly distinguished for its two ancient mansions, Fox-denton-hall and Chadderton-hall, and for the families by whom they were occupied. At the period when the liberties of England began to assume a settled character, both these mansions were possessed by the Traffords, but soon after Magna Charta was granted by King John to the demands of his barons, Richard de Trafford conferred the lordship and manor of Chadderton upon his second son, Geoffrey. This Geoffrey assumed the name of Chadderton, and his daughter, Margaret, having married John Radcliffe, grandson of Richard de Radcliffe, of Radcliffe-tower, Fox-denton passed as a dowry into that family. The hall is now sharing the fate of Royton-hall. Chadderton-hall was the birth-place of Dr. Lawrence Chadderton, who lived at the period of the reformation, and was amongst the number of the principal reformers. Fuller says of this divine, that "he was intended for a lawyer, and in order thereto brought up some time in the inns of court, till he (was 20 years of age, when he) changed his profession, and admitted himself in Christ's College, at Cambridge. His father (who was nuzled up in popish superstition) hearing that he had altered his place, studies, and religion, sent him a poke with a groat therein, for him to go a begging therewith, disinheriting him of the fair estate of Chadderton, which otherwise had descended upon him." This eminent divine became master of Emanuel College, and survived, with sound faculties, to the patriarchal age of ninety-four years. Dr. William Chadderton, bishop of Chester, and one of the ecclesiastical commissioners for Lancashire, along with Henry Earl of Derby, in the reign of Elizabeth, appears to have been a member of this family. The father of Dr. Lawrence Chadderton having disinherited his son, and bequeathed his estates to the Radcliffes, Chadderton passed by marriage to Edmund Assheton, son of Sir John Assheton, of Ashton-under-Line, who married Joan the daughter and coheirress of Richard Radcliffe. About the year 1690, William Assheton, a descendant of Edmund, sold the manor and estate of Chadderton to Joshua Horton, Esq. of Howroyd, in the county of York, which possession, on the death of his father in 1708, descended to Thomas Horton, whose son William was created a baronet in 1764, and was succeeded by his son Sir Watts Horton, Bart. in 1774, who, by marriage with Henrietta, daughter of James Lord Strange, became allied to the Stanley family. During the time of Sir Watts Horton, Chadderton was in its zenith: the house was well stored with pictures, and the park and pleasure grounds, with their bold and varied scenery, appeared to the greatest advantage. Sir Watts, dying without male issue in 1811, was succeeded in his title and estate by his brother Sir Thomas Horton, Bart. Clerk, who dying in 1821, without issue, the estate devolved partly upon Thomas Horton, Esq. and partly upon ——— Reece, Esq. who married the only daughter of the late Sir Watts Horton, and now possesses Chadderton-hall, which is unoccupied.

Near to Chadderton-hall, but in the township of Oldham, is an Episcopal Chapel, built in the year 1765, at which the Rev. W. R. Hay, the present vicar of Rochdale, was assistant curate soon after he had, like Dr. Chadderton, quitted the bar for the pulpit. There is no existing record, written or traditional, of any great battle fought in Chadderton, but one of those tumuli, raised on the remains of departed warriors, rears its head in the lawn, near the front door of the hall, and seems to indicate that this has been a scene of some considerable military operation. This tumulus has been materially reduced, and a number of ancient relics have been found here.

Crompton.

CROMPTON, the most northern part of the parish, has the largest population of any of the townships associated with Oldham; and its growth in numbers and in trade has fully kept pace with the other parts of this flourishing district. A bleak situation and somewhat sterile soil have produced a race of hardy and laborious men, and the close connexion with Saddleworth has given to the people much of the manners and character which prevail in those mountainous regions. An ancient free chapel belonging to the establishment stands at Shaw, in this township, which was twice enlarged and re-edified during the last century. Crompton-hall, like too many of the other ancient houses in the neighbourhood, has fallen into decay.

According to Dr. Aikin, the chapelry of Oldham consists of 4025 statute acres of land, of which the principal part is now enclosed. The soil is extremely variable, and by no means capable of raising a sufficiency of food to supply the wants of the inhabitants. The land is principally in grass, but there is considerable quantity of potatoes grown and some corn crops. The district is bare of wood, though timber might be planted in many situations, particularly on the sides of the hills, that would yield both profit, shelter, and ornament. The increase of population in the last century was considerable, as the following return will show; and the extract from the parliamentary census at the head of the present chapter proves, that this great increase has been nearly doubled within the present century :—

The growth of the manufactures has exceeded the growth in the numbers of the people, and if the inquiry is made at what place in the county of Lancaster, in proportion to its size, are cotton mills rising most rapidly? the answer is, at Oldham.

ORMSKIRK.

ORMSKIRK is a parish and market town, in the Hundred of West Derby, in the Deanery of Warrington, and in the Archdeaconry of Chester, 13 miles NNE. of Liverpool, 13 miles W. of Wigan, 14 miles NNW. of Prescott, 18 miles SSW. of Preston, and 208 miles from London. This parish contains six townships, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821, and the estimated annual rental of all the lands, messuages, and other buildings in each township in the parish.

Camden
Leland.

Camden, pursuing his route from Formby to this place, says, "From hence runs out a bold shore, with a great bend, and further in from the sea we see Ormskirke, a market town, famous for the burial place of the Stanleys, Earls of Derby whose chief seat, Latham, is in this neighbourhood." Leland, with a want of accurate admeasurement often to be detected in his Itinerary, and sufficiently indicative of the absence of those cheering companions to the traveller called mile-stones, says, "Ormekirk a iiii miles or v myles from Lyrpole, and about a ii miles from Latham, a paroch chirche in the towne; no river by yt but mosses of eche side." This place formerly belonged to the canons of Burscough Priory, and, by grant from Edward I. to that religious house, was invested with the privilege of a market and fair. Ormskirk is said to derive its name from two sisters of the name of Orm, who built the parish church, or from the church being a gift, and hence called Alms-church. This church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is of a date not well ascertained.* The living is a discharged vicarage, (valued in the Liber Regis at £44 5s. 6d. yearly,) in the patronage of the Earl of Derby, and the Rev. Joshua Thomas Horton, M. A. is the incumbent. It is remarkable for its two steeples; and according to tradition, the two fair founders, not being able to decide when they came to the steeple part of the structure, whether it should have a tower or a spire, accommodated their difference by giving to it both. A more probable tradition says, that the tower was built after the suppression of the monasteries, for the reception of the eight bells from Burscough Priory. In a chapel within the church of Ormskirk, is the cemetery of the Derby family,

Church.

tery.

* The antiquity of this church may be inferred from an inscription on a brass plate in the north wall, bearing the date of 1661, whereby Henry Mosoke avers that his ancestors have been buried here for 385 years.

being a vault, the descent to which is closed by folding doors; and here the dust of that illustrious race has been deposited ever since the dissolution of the Priory at Burscough, at which period the bodies of the deceased Stanleys, not then reduced to ashes, were brought to this place. This chapel and cemetery were erected under the direction of the will of Edward, the third Earl of Derby, dated in 1572, by which it was ordered, that his body should be interred in the church at Ormskirk, and a monument erected to his memory, according to his "honour and vocation." This nobleman died at Latham-house, on Friday the 24th of October, and was buried on Thursday, Dec. 4th, 1574. His funeral was ordered with the greatest magnificence, and a splendid record of it, copied from an authentic manuscript in the library of John Austis, Esq. garter king of arms, is preserved in Collins's English Peerage. The ancient family of Scarisbrick have also a chancel and burial place within this church. The church, which stands at the north-east extremity of the town, commands a fine view from the steeple, of the adjacent country, with the Irish sea, the mouth of the Ribble, and the towns of Liverpool and Preston, in the distance.

Ormskirk is a clean well-built market town, composed principally of four streets, intersecting each other at right angles, and having a handsome opening in the centre, which is used as a market-place. The fairs are held annually, on Whit-Monday and Tuesday, in virtue of a charter granted to the convent of Burscough, 14 Edward I.*

The places of worship in this parish, exclusive of the Church, are Skelmersdale Episcopal Chapel, built by subscription in 1776, and enlarged to double its original size in 1823; the Presbyterian Chapel in Aughton-street, erected in 1783; and the Methodist Chapel, New Connexion, in Chapel-lane, built in 1810. The Roman Catholics, who form a very numerous body here, formerly assembled for worship in Ormskirk, but they have now a large and commodious chapel, in the immediate vicinity of the town, in the parish of Aughton.

In the church-yard of St. Peter and St. Paul there is a free Grammar-school, erected in the year 1614, by Henry Croft, Esq.; and in Church-street, seventy boys, and fifty girls receive gratuitous instruction, on the national system, in a school-room erected in 1724, by James Earl of Derby, for a Blue Coat School. In May, 1705, a Dispensary was added to the charitable institutions of Ormskirk, to the honour of the more opulent part of the inhabitants; and in June, 1822, a Savings Bank was established here, in which, by the prudent care of the more humble classes, a fund has accumulated, amounting to from seven to eight thousand pounds.

The trade and the manufacture of the place are very circumscribed, but the cotton business, which insinuates itself into every part of Lancashire, has got some footing here; there are also several hat manufactories, and roperies, with some rather large furniture warehouses. In the loamy soils, which abound in the parish of Ormskirk, carrots are successfully cultivated for the Liverpool market; and the farmers in the neighbourhood are famous for the culture of early potatoes, and the superior quality of their produce.

* In Kuerden's MS. page 52, amongst the Lancashire claims, this entry appears:—"Ormskirk, Hector Prior de Burslegh claims to have a market every seventh day, in his manor of Ormskirk, two separate fairs, and an assize of bread and beer, and all other victuals and measures in his village."

Since the days of the virgins Orm to the present time, this town has been noted for spinsters, and, under their skilful hands, a species of confectionary, called gingerbread, has been made, of such exquisite flavour, that it is purchased freely in all the neighbouring towns, and forms even an article of exportation. From the returns printed above, it will be seen that during the last twenty years, there has been an increase in the population of 34 per cent. There were formerly annual races on Aughton Moor, near Ormskirk, but they were discontinued in 1815, and the common is now enclosed.

BURSCOUGH PRIORY, two miles NE. of Ormskirk, was founded for Black Canons, in the time of Richard I. by Robert Fitzhenry, Lord of Latham, and dedicated to St. Nicholas: after flourishing 350 years, it shared the fate of the other monastic institutions of England in the year 1536. At the time of the dissolution, this monastery maintained a prior with five canons of the Augustine order, and was endowed, according to Speed, with an annual revenue of £129 1s. 10d. at which time a moderate salary for a clergyman was £6 13s. 4d. and an ample salary £8 a year.* Nothing is now left of this pile but part of the centre arch of the church, which may be seen from the high road; and instead of the magnificent tombs of the Stanleys, which till the reformation graced this place, a few modern grave-stones peep through the grass, the memorials of poor catholics, who seem still to have preferred this burial place. The founder, Fitzhenry, endowed the monastery with considerable property, emoluments, and alms, and, according to the superstition of the age, thought thereby to obtain pardon and rest for the souls of Henry II. John Earl of Morton, himself, his wife, and and his ancestors; wishing the kingdom of heaven to all persons who would increase the gifts, and consigning to the devil and his agents all who should impiously infringe on his bequests. Since the dissolution of the monasteries there has been no place of public worship at Burscough, but arrangements are now making for the erection of a chapel of ease at Burscough Bridge.

Latham
House.

LATHAM HOUSE is a magnificent edifice, re-built by Sir Thomas Bootle, Knight, chancellor to Frederick Prince of Wales, and is the seat of Edward Bootle Wilbraham, Esq. M. P. It stands on a plain inclining towards the north, and commands an extensive view. The south front of this mansion was begun by William, ninth Earl of Derby, and was completed in a manner not unworthy of the ancient fame of this house, by Sir Thomas Bootle, between the years 1724 and 1734. The house consists of a ground floor, principal, and attic, and has a rustic basement, with a double flight of steps to the first story. The north front extends one hundred and fifty six feet, with nine windows on each floor, and the offices are joined to it by colonnades, supported by Ionic pillars. The hall is forty feet square and thirty high, the saloon is forty by twenty-four feet, the library fifty feet by twenty-one, and there are on this floor thirteen apartments. The house is situated in the centre of a park, between three and four miles in circumference.

The Latham House, of which Camden speaks when he calls it the chief seat of the Stanleys, was built by the De Lathams, and enlarged successively, from the time of Henry IV. when Sir John Stanley married Isabel, the daughter and heiress of the famous Sir Thomas Latham, and thence became possessed of the estate;* but it received so much injury during the civil wars of Charles I. that it became dilapidated, and the family seat was transferred to Knowsley. When Henry VII. paid his memorable visit to Thomas, first Earl of Derby, the step-father of that sovereign, Latham House stood in all its ancient splendour. At that period it had eighteen towers, nine in the outer and as many in the inner wall, the whole surrounded by a deep fosse, eight yards wide and two deep, immediately within which, and beyond the drawbridge, was a strong gateway, and in the centre a lofty tower, called the Eagle Tower. The sieges which the mansion sustained from the parliament forces in 1644 and 1645 and its gallant defence by the celebrated countess of Derby, Charlotte de la Tremouille, stand recorded in British history, and have already been shortly narrated in the general history of the civil wars in Lancashire, inserted in this work.^a Against a besieging army of three thousand men, with General Sir Thomas Fairfax at their head, the countess had to oppose only a force of three hundred troops; but, animated by her gallant spirit, and led on by the enterprise and skill of Captains Farrington, Ogle, Rawstorne, Farmer, Radcliffe, Charnock, Fox, and Chisnall, this little band of heroes made so determined a resistance, and so many desperate sallies, that they inflicted upon the enemy a loss of five hundred men, wounded one hundred and forty of their number, and repeatedly destroyed their works and spiked their cannon. At the end of eighty-eight days, (from the 28th of February to the 26th of May, 1644,) the siege was raised on the approach of Prince Rupert, and the trophies gathered by that Prince at Bolton and Liverpool were laid at the feet of his fair relative and companion in arms at Latham House. After the siege, the Countess of Derby retired with her children, under the protection of the Earl, to the Isle of Man, leaving Latham House to the care of Colonel Rawstorne. In the month of July, in the following year, the siege was renewed by General Egerton, at the head of four thousand men, who took up his head quarters at Ormskirk. The garrison made a gallant and successful stand for some time, but being at length reduced to extremities for want of the munitions of war, and disappointed in the expectation of a reinforcement from the King, who was at that time at Chester, the commander was

* The fabulous tradition of The Eagle and Child, the crest of the Stanleys, associates itself with the family of Latham, and is thus gravely related:—Sir Thomas, the father of Isabel, having this only child, and cherishing an ardent desire for a son to inherit his name and fortune, had an intrigue with a young gentlewoman, the fruit of which connexion was a son. This infant he contrived to have conveyed by a confidential servant to the foot of a tree in his park, frequented by an Eagle; and Sir Thomas, with his lady, taking their usual walk, found the infant as if by accident. The Old Lady, considering it a gift from heaven, brought hither by the bird of prey, and miraculously preserved, consented to adopt the boy as their heir:

“ Their content was such, to see the hap,

“ That th’ ancient lady hugs yt in her lap;

“ Smoth’r yt with kisses, bathes yt in her tears,

The name of Oskatell was given to the little foundling, Mary Oskatell being the name of his mother. From this time the crest of the Eagle and Child was assumed; but as the old knight approached near the grave his conscience smote him, and on his death-bed he bequeathed the principal part of his fortune to Isabel his daughter, now become the lady of Sir John Stanley, leaving poor Oskatell, on whom the King had conferred the honour of knighthood, only the manors of Irlam and Urmston, near Manchester, and some possessions in the county of Chester, in which county he settled, and became the founder of the family of Latham, of Astbury!

obliged to surrender Latham House into the hands of the parliamentary forces, upon bare terms of mercy. The besiegers soon converted the most valuable effects of the house into booty; the towers from whence so many fatal shots had been fired were thrown down, the military works were destroyed, and the sun of Latham seemed for ever to have set.

After the restoration of the Stuarts, Latham returned into the possession of the Derby family, and was occasionally inhabited by them in the early part of the last century.* In 1714 this estate was transferred by marriage to Lord Ashburnham, by whom it was sold to Mr. Henry Furnese, who, in 1724, disposed of it to Sir Thomas Bootle, Knight, of Melling, in this county. His niece and heiress married Richard Wilbraham, Esq. of Rode Hall, in Cheshire, and the estate, as already mentioned, is now possessed by the eldest son of that marriage. Near the house is a small chapel and a number of almshouses, founded by one of the Stanleys, the chaplain of which, the Rev. Richard Battersby, M. A. is called the Almoner of Latham. It does not appear that a market did ever actually exist in the village of Latham; but we find, from indubitable evidence, that, in the 32d year of the reign of Edward I. "Robert de Lathom" obtained the grant of a market and fair, both for his manor of Latham, in the parish of Ormskirk, and for his manor of "Robye," in the neighbouring parish of Huyton; and, in the reign of Edward III. a grant of free warren was made to "Thomas de Lathum" over the manors of "Lathum, Knouselegh, Childewall, Roby, and Aulasargh with licence imparcandi in Roby, Knouselegh, and Aulasargh."

SCARISBRICK HALL, in the parish of Ormskirk, the venerable seat of the ancient family of that name, has been much improved by its present possessor, who is lord of the manors of Scarisbrick, Halsall, and Downholland. The low situation of this mansion, and the flatness of the surrounding country, prevent its being seen to advantage from a distance; but two new approaches are now laid out, from the road between Ormskirk and Southport. By these, when completed, the visitor will be imperceptibly led to points of view in which the Gothic architecture will make its due impression. A chaplain of the ancient faith was always maintained in this family, and used to perform divine service regularly within the mansion house, where the domestics of the establishment, and the tenantry of the neighbourhood, assembled every Sunday, and on holidays. The increased population rendering this inconvenient, Thomas Scarisbrick, Esq. has provided a chapel, and a residence for the priest at a convenient distance from the hall. The Rev. Louis Dorival, lately deceased, officiated at Scarisbrick for about twenty years. The heads of this family have been lords of Scarisbrick at least seven centuries, and, if genealogy were the object of the present work, it would be easy to enumerate their alliances at various periods with some of the most ancient and honourable houses in this and the adjoining counties.

* In the year 1670, Dr. Borlase published a book, dedicated to Charles Earl of Derby, on the virtues of the "Latham Spaw," which was at that time in great fame.

POULTON-IN-THE-FYLDE.

POULTON-IN-THE-FYLDE, a market town and parish, in the hundred of Amounderness, in the deanery of Amounderness, and in the archdeaconry of Richmond, 9 miles N.W. of Kirkham, 18 miles W.N.W. of Preston, and 234 miles from London. This parish contains five townships, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821, and the estimated annual rental of the lands, messuages, and other buildings in each township in the parish :—

Of the 763 families in this parish, 417 are employed chiefly in agriculture ; and 231 in trade, manufacture, or handicraft ; the remaining 115 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed.

This small port is a place of great antiquity, and it is mentioned by name in the domesday survey as containing two carucates of land.* Ten years afterwards, at the foundation of the priory of Lancaster, Roger de Poitou, to whom it belonged, gave the church of Poulton, and one carucate of land, to that priory, so that the church is of the age of the Conquest, though it does not appear from the document already quoted that it was erected when the survey was made. The old church, after having stood for nearly seven hundred years, was taken down in 1751, and replaced by “ a plain commodious fabric of handsome stone.” The steeple was rebuilt in the time of Charles I. and it forms an integral part of the new edifice. According to Dr. Whitaker, the old church of Poulton had only a nave and north aisle ; with four octagonal columns, extending from the chancel to the front, and sustaining semicircular arches. The new church, like the old, is dedicated to St. Chad ; the living, which in the Liber Regis is valued at £7 16s. 8d. is in the patronage of Peter Hesketh, Esq. and the Rev. Nathaniel Hinde is the vicar.

The Dissenters have four places of public worship here, namely, an Independent chapel in Tythebarn-street, built in 1808 ; a Roman Catholic chapel in the Breck, built in 1813 ; a Wesleyan Methodist chapel in Back-street, built in 1819 ; and a Meeting-room, lately opened, in which the Society of Friends assemble.

There are in the parish of Poulton four free schools, three of which were endowed by Mr. James Baines of this place, in 1717 ; the same benefactor left also six acres of land to the clergyman, and property now

v. i. p. 17.

yielding a revenue of £100 per annum to apprentice poor children. Four hundred children receive gratuitous instruction daily in the free-schools; and about 250 are instructed in the Church and 50 in the Methodist Sunday schools.

The population of the parish increases in the ratio of two per cent. per annum, which is about the agricultural scale of increase in this county. The market day is on Monday; and the annual fairs, of which there are three, are held on the 6th of February, 13th of April, and the 3d of November, all for cattle, cloth, and pedlery.

It has been already suggested that a collateral branch, communicating with the Lancaster canal from Poulton through the heart of the Fylde by Kirkham, would be a source of wealth, both to those towns and to the whole district.* The Wyre is proverbial for the safety of its navigation, and when seamen on the coast wish to express the certainty of any future event, or the security of any place, they are accustomed to say it is "as safe as Wyre." Wyre water, it is understood, may be entered by vessels in stormy weather, when neither the Lune nor the Ribble can be reached with safety, and it is much to be regretted that more use is not made of so advantageous a commercial station. At present Poulton is a creek under the port of Preston. From want of a bridge over the Wyre, near Poulton, hourly inconvenience is felt by the inhabitants, and, as the expense of an erection of this nature would not be very considerable, it is hoped that this great public accommodation will not be much longer withheld.

PRESCOT.

PRESCOT is a market town and parish, in the hundred of West Derby, in the deanery of Warrington, and in the archdeaconry of Chester; 8 miles E. of Liverpool, 10 miles W.N.W. of Warrington, and 197 miles from London. This parish contains fifteen townships, including two chapelries, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821, and the estimated annual rental of all the lands, messuages, and other buildings of each township in the parish.

The Parish Church is dedicated to St. Mary; the living is a Church. vicarage in charge, valued in the Liber Regis at £24 10s. yearly, in the patronage of the Provost and Scholars of King's College, Cambridge, of which the Rev. Charles George Thomas Driffild, A. M. is the incumbent. The date of the erection of this church is unknown, but in 1611 it was pewed, elevated, and new roofed. In 1729, the ancient steeple was taken down, and replaced by a tower and spire, which at the time formed the most elegant structure of the kind in the county. In the chancel there is a large upright figure of John Ogle, Esq. of Whiston-hall, (a captain under the Countess of Derby, in the memorable defence of Latham-house) in the costume of the seventeenth century, with the motto "Veritas Vincit." In the church are some monuments of modern date, one extremely elegant, by Chantrey, to the memory of William Atherton, Esq. of Atherton-hall, whose widow gave to the church the present elegant and fine-toned organ. There are chapels of ease at Rainford, St. Helen's, and Great Sankey; the Vicar of Prescot presents to the curacies of Farnworth and Rainford; and Lord Lilford, the possessor of the Atherton estates, to Great Sankey; the election to the chapel of St. Helen's is vested in trustees.

The Methodists,^a the Unitarians, and the Independents^b have each a place of worship in Prescot.

School.

The Free School in this town was originally supported by parochial contributions or rates, from each township, for the benefit of education to the inhabitants of those districts. The parochial rate ceased about a century ago, but several benefactions in land and money have been made to the trustees, and the present head master, Mr. John Hamnett, is in the enjoyment of a salary from this source to the amount of £113 per annum. The trustees have built a new and enlarged school. The boys for this school are selected from the inhabitants of the town of Prescot. The education of the free boys is confined to reading, writing, and arithmetic, and there are now about thirty on the foundation. Boys, if born in the parish and intended for the University, are usually sent to Brazen-nose College, in Oxford, where they have a preference to seven fellowships; Lancashiremen have also the preference to several good exhibitions in the same college, in virtue of the will of William Smith, Bishop of Lincoln, a native of this parish, and one of the founders of that college.

Charities. There are several Almshouses, erected in 1708, by Oliver Lyme, Esq. at the east entrance of the town, with some other charities of less importance, and the landed estate of the whole of these charities yields an annual revenue of £169 7s. 6d. as exhibited in a late parliamentary return, thus :—

School, Do.	90	0	0
Bread on Sundays, Do.	5	12	6
Christmas Eve Benefaction, Do.	6	10	0
Cloth on St. James's Day, Do.	3	15	0
Sunday Schools from Lands and Funds,*	13	10	0

The records of the manor are kept in the town-hall, a handsome and commodious edifice, erected about 60 years ago; and the court baron, which has power by prescription to try causes to any amount, is held in this building. A Savings Bank was established here in 1824, which is open every Monday from 12 to 1 o'clock, and which, from the sums already deposited in its treasury, promises to be of essential use to the town and neighbourhood.

This town is situated on high ground, on the great road between Liverpool and Manchester. Leland describes it in his day as “a little market having no notable water about hyt, a iiij mile from Mersey up toward Lyrpole.”.....“Mr. Molineux, a Knight of great Landes, a ii myles from Prestcode dwellith,” saith the itinerant, “at a place called Crostoffe. Tokstaffe, a park of the kinges, hard by his house. Knollesley, a parke having a praty house of the Erles of Darby, within a mile of Prestcod.”

* Independent of the bequest of the Rev. Samuel Sewel, M.A. who founded the Church Sunday School, in 1784, and at his death in 1815, bequeathed £800 for its support, and £200 to the free school. Three hundred and ninety children receive instruction in the Church Sunday School; 130 in that attached to the Methodist Chapel; and 80 in the Independent Sunday School. A School of Industry for poor girls, under the patronage and support of the lady of the vicar, affords gratuitous instruction to from 30 to 40 poor girls, in reading, writing, sewing, and knitting.

Prescot, like Whitehaven, is almost built over coal mines, several being worked in every direction around it, and some of them at the very edge of the town. It is estimated that 2000 persons are employed in the collieries, in this parish; fuel is of course very plentiful, and the manufactories of the neighbourhood are essentially benefited by the abundance of the supply.

The whole township is copyhold of inheritance; the Provost and Scholars of King's College, Cambridge, are lords of the manor, and are entitled to all the great tithes of the parish, with the exception of those in a part of Great Sankey.

There are two markets weekly, on Tuesday and Saturday; and a fortnight fair for cattle, from Shrove Tuesday to the 1st Tuesday in May inclusive. The annual fairs are held on Ash Wednesday, Wednesday after Corpus Christi, 24th and 25th of August, 21st of October, and on the 1st of November. In the 7th of Edward III. a charter for the establishment of a market and fair in the manor of "Prescote," was granted to Wm. de Dacre, incumbent of the parish.

This town has long been celebrated as the centre of the manufacture of watch tools and movements; the tools have been excellent beyond the memory of man, and the manufacture of the movements has been greatly extended by improved tools of all sorts, and by inventions for first cutting teeth in wheels, and afterwards finishing them with exactness and expedition. The workmen of Prescot likewise excel in what is called motion work, such as dial wheels, locking springs, hour, minute and second hands. The drawing of pinion wire, which is carried as far as to 50 drawings, originated in this place, and the wire is completely adapted to every size of pinions, admirable for its truth and fitness for the purpose, but left for the workmen to harden. Small files, the best it is said in the world, are made here both for home consumption and exportation. These branches now extend from Prescot to the surrounding villages, and all along the road to Liverpool, in which town the business is carried on to great perfection, and to a large extent. There have been in Prescot for ages several manufactories of coarse earthenware,* for which the clay of the neighbourhood is peculiarly well adapted, and the cotton business, though not carried on here to any great extent, forms part of the employment of the labouring classes.

BOLD HALL, the principal mansion in the township of Bold, in this parish, is the princely residence of the ancient family of that name, who were seated here before the conquest. John de Bold, in the 6th and 7th Henry IV. obtained a grant of free warren in "Bold and Prescote, within the forest of Symond-es-node, in the wapentac' of (West) Derby." It was the singular good fortune of this family to retain their possessions uninterrupted in the male line down to the death of the late Peter Bold, Esq. M. P. for the county of Lancaster, who died in 1761, leaving several daughters, but no son. Anna Maria, his eldest daughter, succeeded her father in his estate, and died in her 82d year, in the month of November, 1813, when Peter Patten, Esq. of Bank, within Warrington, having married the second daughter of Peter Bold, Esq. succeeded to the family estates, and assumed the name and arms of Bold in addition to those of Patten. At his death, in October, 1819, the estates devolved on his eldest daughter, Mary, who, in the year 1823, married his serene highness Prince Sapieha; but by the death of the Princess, which took place at Rome, in December, 1824, the Bold estates devolved on her sister, the lady of Henry Bold Hoghton, of Walton-hall, Esq. (heir to the Hoghton baronetage and possessions) who by royal licence and permission then took the name of Bold before Hoghton. The present superb residence of the family at Bold was built from a design of Leoni, the celebrated Italian architect. The old hall is a curious edifice of very ancient date, and is used as the farm-house of the modern mansion. It is mentioned as a proof of the great opulence of this family, that in the levy of 1574, ordered by Queen Elizabeth, they provided as many horses and horsemen as any family in the county of Lancaster, the Stanley family alone excepted. The Rev. Rd. Barnes, the suffragan bishop of Nottingham, preferred to Carlisle, in 1570, and 7 years afterwards to Durham, was born in the township of Bold, as was also his brother, John Barnes, the chancellor.

*Ch. Rolls

Farnworth.

Among the worthies of Lancashire one of the most distinguished is a native of FARNWORTH, in this parish—William Smith, a fellow of Pembroke College, Cambridge, and Bishop of Lincoln. This prelate, who was born at Peel-house, in Widness, was appointed president by Henry VIII. of a court of presidency erected by that sovereign in Wales, and discharged the duties of his station with singular integrity, till the day of his death. Fuller says of him, "this man, wheresoever he went, may be followed by the perfume of charity he left behind him. At Lichfield, (of which diocese he was bishop before his elevation to Lincoln) he founded an hospital for a master, two priests, and ten poor people. In the same place he founded a school, procuring from Henry VIII. that the hospital of Downhall, in Cheshire, with the lands thereunto belonging, should be bestowed upon it. At Farnworth, he founded a school, allowing 10*l.* annually, (in that age no mean salary) for the master thereof.* The University of Oxford discreetly chose him their Chancellor, and lost nothing thereby, for he proved a more loving nephew than son, so bountiful to his Aunt Oxford, that therein he founded Brazen Nose College, but died 1513, before his foundation was finished." Farnworth is not itself a township, but a populous village within the township of Widness; it is however a parochial chapelry, containing the townships of Bold, Cronton, Cuerdley, Ditton, Penketh and Widness with Appleton.

The venerable church of Farnworth, which is dedicated to St. Wilfrid, is in the incumbency of the Rev. William Thompson, who has discharged the duties of a Christian minister here for thirty years. The Bold family have a chapel in this church, which is filled with the monuments of their ancestors. Opposite to this chapel stands one built by William Smith, of pious memory, the good bishop of Lincoln.

ST. HELENS is in this parish, but, having assumed the rank of a market town, its history and directory will be found amongst the towns in the alphabetical order.

Sankey.

In the year 1755, a great public work was undertaken in this parish, called the SANKEY BROOK NAVIGATION. Since the time of the Romans, when they cut their foss dike, or at least since the reign of Henry II. when that medium was re-opened, no water conveyance for the purpose of trade, cut out of the solid land, had existed in England, till this company engaged in the Sankey Brook Navigation. The original intention of the undertakers was to deepen Sankey Brook, but instead of making this the channel of communication, the navigation runs entirely separate from it, except that it crosses and mixes with that water in one place about two miles from Sankey bridge. This navigation affords a medium of transit for various descriptions of merchandise, and tillage, including slate, grain, timber, stone, lime, and manure; but the principal article is coal, which is carried in great abundance to Liverpool, Warrington, Northwich, and other places, from the mines in the parish of Prescott, and particularly from those of St. Helens. Vessels of sixty tons burden can navigate this water with sixteen feet beam, and a draught of five feet and one inch. The speculation has proved highly beneficial both to the public and to the undertakers; and though some of the collieries upon its banks have been exhausted, an ample supply of fuel is still afforded both to the large works in the neighbourhood in which it is dug, and for distant consumption.

BEWSEY HALL, the seat of the ancient family of the Botelers, or Bewsey. Butlers, is situated in the township of Great Sankey, near to the line where it touches the parish of Warrington.^a

The parish of Prescott may rank with the most interesting parishes of Lancashire: to the south east it is watered and ornamented by the majestic stream of the Mersey; in the interior it abounds with one of the most valuable mineral productions—coal, which supplies its own extensive manufactories, and affords fuel to other places; and its red grit stone quarries give out an excellent material for the builder; while a stratum of clay, peculiarly adapted to the fabrication of pottery-ware, serves to find employment for the poor, and to enrich the middle classes.

PRESTON.

PRESTON is a borough, market town, and parish, in the hundred of Amounderness, in the deanery of Amounderness, and in the archdeaconry of Richmond; 9 miles N. of Chorley, 11 miles S.S.E. of Garstang, 18 miles N.N.E. of Ormskirk, 22 miles S.S.E. of Lancaster, 31 miles N.N.E. of Liverpool, 31 miles N.W. of Manchester, and 217 miles from London. Situated in 53° 46' of N. latitude, and 2° 41' of W. longitude. This parish contains nine townships, including one borough, and one chapelry, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821; and the estimated annual rental of all the lands, messuages, and other buildings in each township in the parish :—

quity.

As the name of Amounderness is more ancient than the name of any hundred, or wapentake in the kingdom, so the town of Preston, the capital of that hundred, is of at least as high Saxon antiquity as any town in the county of Lancaster. The term Saxon is required to limit the expression, for it is allowed by the most eminent of our English antiquaries, that when, by the gradual recession of the waters, or by that mighty convulsion of nature which threw up the huge mass of Pendle, and deranged the whole system of plants and minerals in the vale of Ribble to a great extent,^a Ribchester sunk into decay, Preston rose upon its ruins, and became the principal port of Lancashire. This rank it sustained through a long succession of ages; and even as late as the time of Charles I. the contribution demanded by that monarch for ship-money from the borough of Preston, was one-fourth more than was required from Lancaster, and nearly double the amount that was imposed upon Liverpool.^b During the Roman period, the road called Watling-street, made by the Conquerors from the Setantian port, at the Neb of the Nese, passed within little more than a mile to the north of Preston; while the Roman road from Languvallium, in Cumberland, to Condate, in Cheshire, in its way through the hundred of Amounderness, intersected Watling-street, near Tulketh-hall, and advanced by Preston to Blackrode, the Coccium of Antoninus.^a

It is recorded of this district, that, at the consecration of the monastery and church of Ripon, in 705, after its re-edification by Archbishop Wilfrid, among other donations of the great Saxon princes and nobles who witnessed that ceremony, lands near Ribble, in Hasmundernesse were bestowed on the new foundation.^b About this period, probably, the parish church of Preston was erected, and, on the canonization of Archbishop Wilfrid, the new edifice was dedicated to that Saint. At a more advanced stage of the heptarchy, Athelstan, the son of Edward, the elder, in the sixth year of his reign, granted the whole district of Amounderness to the cathedral church at York. Successive transfers of the hundred from cathedral to cathedral rendered the capital of the district the abode of ecclesiastics, and gave to it the name of Priest's Town, of which Preston is a contraction.

The Guild Merchant probably belongs to these times, and, though the Guild of 1329 is the first celebration of the kind on record in this borough, and though the grant of a Guild Merchant since the conquest is not to be traced to any higher source than Henry I. it is generally supposed, that Preston Guild commenced in Anglo-Saxon times. That Guilds existed during the heptarchy is indisputable. Originally they were a kind of sick clubs, and the contributions, the processions, and the conviviality of our modern benefit societies have a close resemblance to the Guilds before the conquest. There were also Guilds Merchant established in sea ports, in the time of the Saxons, and these were fraternities constituted for the purpose of carrying on more successfully commercial enterprises,^c with Hanse privileges. Preston was one of those ports, in proof of which, it appears from an ancient customale, in the records of the borough, that periodical port notes, for the purpose of hearing and determining causes relating to harbour, were held here several times in the year, and that the chief magistrate of the borough was stiled the Portgreve.^{*}

The Danes, on their arrival in the Humber, spread over the ancient country of the Brigantes, and the county of Lancaster became the scene of their ferocious devastations. The church of York, finding the possessions in Amounderness unproductive, abandoned them, and Toasti, the brother of Harold, became Lord paramount. The conquest of England, by William the Norman, transferred the lands between Mersey and Ribble to Roger de Poitou, and Amounderness was added to his princely possessions. The defection of this baron led to the forfeiture of his lordships to the crown. When the Domesday survey was made,

* The document above referred to shows that there was at an early period in use in this town an instrument of correction, called a "Ducking Stool," and there are several fields adjoining to the corner of the Moor near St. Paul's church, known by the name of the "Cuck Stool Pit Field," to this day. Insolvent burgesses were submitted to the chastisement of the correctional chair, and it is probable that a species of domestic delinquents underwent the same cooling operation. How this matter may be, we have not now the power to determine, but a passage in the History of Liverpool, in the first volume of the present work,^a may shed some light on this curious subject. Not more than thirty-five years ago, a Cuck-stool complete stood over a pit, near Longtoun, on the way from Preston to Liverpool, adjoining the turnpike road.

Amounderness contained but sixteen thinly inhabited villages, and three churches—Preston, Kirkham, and St. Michael's, belonging to Preston, and all the rest of the hundred was waste.^a Penwortham, at the opposite side of the Ribble, had a castle and a church, to which a priory, subject to the abbey of Evesham, was added in the reign of the conqueror.^b

^b See v. i. p. 46.

Soon after the conquest, Preston became a chartered borough, as appears from the ancient customale already quoted, and Henry II. granted to the burgesses another charter, which is the first now extant; this charter was confirmed by King John, in whose reign the men of Preston were fined in ten marks and a palfrey, to have peace, touching a plaint, which Theobald Walters had brought against them concerning the gibbet and gaol in Preston.^c

The Butlers.

From the period of the second defection of Roger de Poitou to Richard I. the possessions between the Cocker and the Ribble remained in the crown; but in that year the king, to reward the services of Theobald Walters, granted to him the fee of the lordship of Preston, and the whole wapentake and forest of Amounderness. In the sixth year of the same reign, Theobald was made Sheriff of the county of Lancaster, and retained that office till the first year of the reign of King John. This baron contributed largely towards the redemption of King Richard I. His son Theobald married Maud, sister of Thomas a Becket, the canonized Archbishop of Canterbury, and he assumed the official surname, upon receiving the appointment of Butler of Ireland, which office remained vested in the Kirkland family till the 31st of May, 1811, when the Butlership was abolished on the payment of 216,000*l.* to Walter, Marquis of Ormonde out of the public treasury.

Preston had two monastic institutions: first, an ancient hospital dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, mentioned in the Lincoln Taxation of 1291; and second, a Franciscan convent of Grey Friars or Friars minor, built by Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, son of Henry III. in 1221, to which Robert Holland, Knight, who impeached Thomas Earl of Lancaster, of high treason, contributed largely, and was buried here. The site of this monastery was granted on the dissolution, in the 32d Henry VIII. to Thomas Holcroft. The first of these religious foundations stood on the eminence now occupied by Tulketh-hall, in Ashton-upon-Ribble, and was used as a temporary residence for the Cistercian Monks, while their magnificent abbey in Furness was building; and the latter,

^e Leland.

“built on the soil of a person named Preston, dwelling in the town,”^d stands a little to the west of Friargate, to which street it imparts the name. Here many of the Sherburnes were interred.^e The friary, in its original state, was a small collegiate building, with a chapel attached to its quadrangular cloisters. By the mutations of time, this building became first a residence of the Breares, of Hammerton, in Bowland, of which Oliver Breares, one of the council named in the charter of Elizabeth, was a member, and next a house of correction, in which latter way it continued to be occupied till the prison at the bottom of Church-street was erected in 1790. It is now divided into habitations for cottages, but the shell of the chapel, as well as some remains of the monastic windows, may still be traced. In the Maudlands, lying W. and N.W. of Preston, the remains of an ancient religious foundation may be traced, and in the deeds in possession of James Pedder, Esq. of Ashton Bank, the principal proprietor of this district, a chapel dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen is frequently mentioned. Several ancient coins have been found in the Maudland fields, within the last twenty years.

The right of pasturage on Fulwood-moor was granted to the burgesses of Preston by a charter in the 1st of King John, together with as much land as they should want out of the forest itself to build their town upon. Henry III. in the 11th year of his reign confirmed this grant; and a subsequent charter, in the 37th year of the same reign, recites an inquisition of the Sheriff of Lancashire,^a from which it appears that an encroachment had been made upon the king's domains to the extent of 324 acres, (comprising what has since been called Preston Moor) the possession of which purpresture the king for himself and his heirs confirms to the burgesses. In the 51 Geo. III. Fulwood-moor was enclosed, the crown reserving the race-ground and some adjoining closes of which Lord Stanley enjoys a lease. An allotment of 67 statute acres was at the time of the enclosure claimed by Nicholas Grimshaw, Esq. on behalf of the in-burgesses of Preston, in virtue of their charters and bye-laws, which, after some opposition from the commissioners, was obtained.

The repeated invasions of the Scotch, whose foot-steps were marked with blood and desolation, plunged the northern part of the kingdom into a state of abject poverty; and in the 16th of Edward II. during the octaves of the nativity of St. John the Baptist, one of the most tremendous of their visitations befel this town and county: "Robert Bruce," says Holinshed, "entered into England by Carlisle, kept on his way through Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Lancaster to Preston, which town he burnt, as he had done others in the counties he had passed through, and, after three weeks and three days, he returned into Scotland without engaging." The Ribble seems to have been the line of demarcation, beyond the southern banks of which the invaders did not pass, but upon Clitheroe and Ribchester, as well as upon Lancaster and Preston, they poured out the vials of their indignation.

Scotch
Invasion

In the next reign the tide of victory turned against the Scotch; Edward III. advanced to the North to chastise the spoilers, and in his route halted at Preston, where a remembrance of past wrongs, and a strong feeling of national animosity, conspired to recruit his army, and to swell his military supplies. The sequel is written in the general history of both countries. The intrepid monarch advanced to Hallidown-hill, where he overthrew the Scotch army, under Douglas, slew or captured all the nobles of distinction, and left 30,000 of their troops stretched upon the field of battle.^b During this reign the county of Lancaster was erected into a palatine, under the "thrice noble" John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, the King's fourth son,^c and Preston was constituted the chief seat of the duchy and palatine courts. The house of Lancaster, so renowned in British history, held this place in high estimation, and nothing but the local situation of their baronial castle on the banks of the Lune, prevented them from establishing the capital of the county where it ought to have been fixed—on the banks of the Ribble.*

counties of England, and his description of Preston and its neighbourhood, now nearly three centuries ago, is sufficiently interesting to be transcribed:—

“ Within a Mile of Preston” says he, advancing from Chorley, “ I came over Darwent River, the which at Penwardine Paroche a celle to Evesham goith into Ribell. This Darwent devidith Lelandshire from Andernes (Amounderness) and a mile above beyond the Place wher I passid over Darwent Mr. Langton dwelith, at Walton-on-Darwent, and is Baron of Newton in Macrefield.—Half a Mile beyond Darwent I passed over the great Stone Bridge of Rybill, having a v. great Arches. Likewise is the soile betwixt Preston and Garstan, but alway the most part of the Inclosures be for Pasturages. Whete is not verl communely sowid in thes Partes aforesald.”

Description.

Camden's account of Preston is more antiquarian: “ Since Ribchester,” he says, “ in length of time was ruined by war, or, as the common people think, by an earthquake, lower down, where the Ribill receives the tide, and is called by the geographer BELLISAMA ÆSTVARIUM,” (or rather the Portus Sistuntiorum)^a “ near Penwortham, where, in the conqueror's time was a castle, as appears from that prince's survey, out of the ruins of Ribchester, arose Preston, a large and, for these parts, handsome and populous towne, so called from religious persons, as much as to say Priest's Town. Preston is vulgarly called Preston, in Andernesse, for Acmundesse-nesse; for so the Saxons called this part of the country, which runs out with a long compass between the Ribill and Cocar, and forms a promontory resembling a nose, and afterwards called Acmoundernes.”

Royal Visit.

In the reign of Elizabeth, when Camden wrote, Preston received its great charter, which ratified and extended the grants of former sovereigns, and placed this borough amongst the most favoured in the kingdom. During the next reign Preston had the honour to receive another royal visiter. His Majesty, James I. on his return from Scotland, took up his residence in the hospitable mansion of Sir Gilbert Hoghton, Baronet, at Hoghton Tower, and, before his departure from Lancashire, the king and his royal retinue became the guests of the mayor and corporation of Preston. In the midst of all the hilarity which distinguished the royal visit into Lancashire, the materials for civil war were silently accumulating, and that fatal publication, called The Book of Sports, suggested, if not written on the banks of the Darwent, was one of the great superinducing causes of the effusion of British blood, which flowed so copiously during the following reign.^b Another of the local causes of the civil wars, was the star chamber, a branch of which existed at that time under the authority of the court of the duchy of Lancaster,^c and was probably held at Preston.

Plague.
tion Records.

A dreadful epidemic, designated by the name of “ the great sickness of the plague of pestilence,” ravaged this town in the early part of the reign of Charles I. of which eleven hundred persons died,^d within the town and parish of Preston, between the 10th of November, 1630, and the 10th of November, 1631!

The history of "The Great Rebellion,"^a as far as the county of Lancaster was the scene of its operations, is already written, and will be found in the first volume of this work. No sooner had Charles I. issued his memorable commission of array at York, than James Lord Strange, heir apparent to the Earl of Derby, quitted that city, in obedience to his sovereign's command, and erected the royal standard in Lancashire. To give effect to his services, his lordship raised a species of levy-en-masse, by mustering the county in three separate places, namely, on the heaths of Bury, the moor of Ormskirk, and the moor at Preston, assembling at each place, according to Seacombe, 20,000 men at the least, most of them armed with sharp pikes, muskets, or other weapons.*

Civil
Chas. I.

At the commencement of the contest, the mayor and the constituted authorities of the borough espoused the royal cause, and the town was held in the name of his Majesty Charles I. Sir Thomas Fairfax, on his arrival in Lancashire, soon became aware of the importance of occupying the strong holds of the centre, and Sir John Seaton, a major-general in the parliamentary army, advanced from Manchester on the 10th of February, 1643, against Preston. Sir John was accompanied by serjeant-major Sparrow, Colonel Holland, Captain Booth, and serjeant-major Birch, and with them three companies of foot; together with as many more from Bolton, who all rendezvoused at Blackburn, where they were joined by four or five companies from Blackburn Hundred, under the command of Captain Nowel, of Mearley, with some other officers, and about 2000 clubmen. This force arrived before Preston on the night of the 12th, and, on reconnoitring the place on the following morning, they found it well fortified with a brick wall, both outer and inner. Undismayed by the difficulties which presented themselves, Captain Booth scaled the walls, and, rushing forward into the town at the head of his three companies, exclaimed, "Follow me, or give me up for ever!" The gallant conduct of the captain inspired his troops with heroic ardour, and, advancing into the town, the different companies emulated each other in situations of danger. The garrison, not less resolute, fought with undaunted spirit; after the outer wall had been carried, they maintained the inner wall "with push of pike," and for a considerable time, bravely defended the breach with their swords. At this moment, Sir John Seaton, having entered the town at the end of Church-street, drove the troops of the garrison from their posts, one of the principal of which was the church steeple. The fight continued with the greatest courage and resolution for near two hours, at the end of which time the assailants became masters of the town. A number of the combatants fell on both sides, and, amongst others, Adam Morte, the mayor of the borough,† a man of the most resolute courage, who had,

* A very different version is given of this memorable meeting on Preston Moor, by Alexander Rigby, Esq. M.P. who was himself present: the number of persons assembled was, he says, about 5,000, including the High Sheriff, (Sir John Girdlington) Lord Molyneux, Sir Alex. Radcliffe, Mr. Tildesley, of Miercough, and Mr. William Farrington, all supporters of the Royal cause. The High Sheriff, he adds, exhibited the commission of array, and exclaimed, "For the King!" "For the King!" On which, about 400 persons joined in the exclamation, but the others "prayed for the King and the parliament."—Letter to the Speaker of the House of Commons, dated June 24, 1642.

† So he is styled in Sir Thomas Fairfax's despatches, but it appears from the

in the ardour of his zeal, declared "that he would fire the town rather than surrender it into the hands of the rebels, and that he would begin with his own house." This intrepid royalist fell in a charge made upon Colonel Holland's company; and his son, a bold and enterprising youth, was killed by his side. The brother of Sir Gilbert Hoghton, a captain of horse, serjeant-major Purvey, and doctor Westley, a physician, and several officers, were likewise slain. Captains Farrington and Preston, with Mr. Anderton, of Clayton, the commander of the garrison, Mr. George Talbot, the son of Sir John, Mr. Richard Fleetwood, Mr. Blundel, Mr. Abbot, Mr. Mausley, Mr. Thomas Hoghton, and Captain Hoghton, Sir Gilbert's nephews, all men of quality, and about 200 others of meaner condition, were made prisoners; while Sir Gilbert Hoghton, of Hoghton Tower, and Mr. Towneley, of Towneley, escaped only by flight. Lady Hoghton and Lady Girlington, who happened to be in the town at the time, were both taken by the parliamentarians, and served to swell the number of prisoners. This victory was considered by Sir Thos. Fairfax as of great importance to the parliamentary cause, inasmuch as it secured an advantageous station to their forces, and interposed a barrier against the royalist troops marching from the north to join their sovereign in the midland counties. The booty secured by the parliamentary force is not mentioned, but a supply of ordnance, amounting to 19 pieces of brass, and two pieces of iron cannon, was taken from a royal store ship, which had foundered, probably at the mouth of the Ribble, along with a considerable quantity of gunpowder and small arms. Lord Strange, now become Earl of Derby, arrived on the coast at the head of a considerable force on the following day, in time to take possession of the ship, but the kernel was gone, and the enterprising Round-heads had left for the gallant Cavaliers only the shell. A detachment of the parliamentary troops next marched to Lancaster, and took the town almost without resistance.

The Earl of Derby solaced himself for his disappointment with a nobler prize. Accompanied by Lord Molyneux, his lordship marched after sun set from Latham House to Lancaster, in the night of the 17th of March, 1643, and carried that garrison by a sort of coup de main. Three days afterwards, the noble lords advanced to Preston, and sent a summons to Edmund Werden, Esq. the chief magistrate, to surrender the town to his majesty. The mayor refused to obey the summons, and the earl gave orders forthwith to assault the works in three places, by Captain Chisnal, Captain Radcliff, and Captain Edward Rosthorpe. For about an hour the battle raged with great fury, and with dubious success, but at length the garrison surrendered, after sustaining a loss of about six hundred killed, and the remainder taken prisoners, with the exception of those who escaped out of the town, and secured their retreat by fording the Ribble. The Earl of Derby, apprehending that the place might again fall into the enemy's hands, demolished the works, which service being effected, his lordship and his gallant associate in arms quitted the town for Manchester."

The fortune of war having at length effected their liberation, the council of the corporation, conceiving themselves "bound in conscience to see them eased in regard of their imprisonment, and the expense they had incurred, ordered ten pounds to be paid to the mayor, and five pounds each to the bailiffs."^b dale.

For upwards of four years afterwards, no military event of any great importance took place in this borough; but, in the summer of the year 1648, the fate of the Scotch army under Duke Hamilton, and of the English army under General Langdale, both engaged in the royal cause, was sealed on the plains of Preston, and in the valley of the Ribble, by the skill and prowess of the most renowned of the parliamentary generals, Oliver Cromwell. The battle took place on the 17th of August; and the scene of operations extended from Ribblesdale to the north bank of the Ribble.^c After a sanguinary engagement of four hours, fought in the fields and lanes, the duke's troops began to give way, and were charged through the streets of Preston at the point of the bayonet. Being driven out of the town, they retreated over Walton bridge, where the battle was renewed,

"And Darwen stream with blood of Scots imbrued."

Night coming on, the hostile armies took up their quarters within musket shot of each other, without being able precisely to ascertain their relative situation. The next morning, however, disclosed the fact, that the royal army had lost about one thousand men slain, and four thousand taken prisoners.* On the following day the engagement was resumed at the pass of Winwick, with so much success on the part of Cromwell, that, though a part of the duke's army "reeled on" into Staffordshire, it was finally overthrown at Uttoxeter, and the duke himself made prisoner. The memorial preserved by the corporation of Preston, of this short but decisive campaign, one of the most sanguinary in the annals of Lancashire, is expressed in these glowing terms:—

"Decimo Septimo die Augusti, 1648, 24th CAR.

"That Henry Blundell, gent. being mayor of this town of Preston, the daie and yeare aforesaid, Oliver Cromwell, lieutenant-general of the forces of the Parliament of England, with an army of about 10,000 at the most, (whereof 1500 were Lancashire men, under the command of Colonel Raph Asheton, of Middleton,) fought a battaile in and about Preston aforesaid, and overthrew Duke Hamilton, general of the Scots, consisting of about 26,000, and of English Sir Marmaduke Langdale and his forces, joined with the Scots, about 4000; took all their ammunition, about 3000 prisoners, killed many with very small losse to the Parliament army; and in their pursuit towards Lancaster, Wigan, Warrington, and divers other places in Cheshire, Staffordshire, and Nottinghamshire, took the said Duke and Langdale, with many Scottish earls and lords, and about 10,000 prisoners more, all being taken [or] slayne, few escaping, and all their treasure and plunder taken. This performed in lesse than one week."

The defeat of Duke Hamilton's army was the last military operation in Lancashire during the civil wars of Charles I. But, on the return of the Earl of Derby from the Isle of Man, whence he was summoned by his sovereign Charles II. in the year 1651, to lend his power ful aid in restoring the Stuart dynasty, his lordship issued warrants by royal authority through Lancashire, requiring all the friends of the king to meet him at Preston, in arms. Not more than three hundred persons appear to have obeyed this mandate. His lordship brought with him three hundred followers from the Isle of Man, and when the battle of Wigan Lane was fought, immediately after his departure from Preston, the number of his troops amounted but to six hundred.^a This fatal campaign was terminated by the battle of Worcester; and the Earl of Derby, having been made prisoner on his return into Lancashire, was brought to trial at Chester for high treason against the commonwealth. A military tribunal cut short all legal difficulties in the way of conviction, and, in a few days afterwards, his lordship underwent the same fate at Bolton,^b which had three years before overtaken his royal master at Whitehall.

The ecclesiastical, as well as the secular government of the country, was now changed, and the presbyterian superseded the episcopal form of church government. For the due administration of spiritual affairs, each county was divided into classes, composed of ministers and people, and Lancashire was one of the first counties in England to adopt the new system. Preston, from its central situation, was selected as the place for holding the first Lancashire Assembly of Divines,^c and the meeting took place here in the month of November, in the year 1646.

Not only the Lancashire assembly of divines, but the Lancashire committee of sequestration, also held their sittings in Preston during the Commonwealth, and it was here that the "delinquent" lords, knights, and gentlemen of this county compounded for their estates in the year 1646, &c. conformable to the list inserted in the 66th page of the first volume of this work.

When prelacy again resumed its authority, on the restoration of Charles II. a number of the clergy, comprehended in the Lancashire classical Presbyteries, were ejected from their churches,^d and many of the laymen, who were generally men of influence in their respective neighbourhoods, espoused the cause of non-conformity, which from that time took deep root in the county of Lancaster. In this reign two royal charters were granted to Preston, by each of which the privileges and immunities of the corporate body were extended.

The visit of James II. to Chester, the year before he abdicated the throne, called forth expressions of loyal attachment from the corporation of Preston to that monarch, and a deputation, with five aldermen at its head, was appointed, on the 25th of August, 1687, to proceed to Chester, to present the address. Three days before, the corporation voted the sum of five shillings each to two afflicted females, the daughters of indigent burgesses, "towards their charges in going to Chester to get the king's touch!"

The revolution of 1688 does not appear to have produced any strong sensation north of the Trent; but in the early part of the following century a rebellion, arising out of this great political change, originated in Scotland, and spent its fury in the town of Preston. It has already been seen,^e that, in the year 1715, a desperate effort was made by the partizans of the house of Stuart, to replace that family on the throne which James II. had reluctantly abdicated, and that with this view a small army, commanded by a gentleman of Northumberland, of the name of Foster, with the Earls of Derwentwater, Wintown, Nithsdale, and

Carnwath, and Lords Kenmure, Widdrington, and Nairn, in his train, marched into England. Having traversed the counties of Cumberland and Westmoreland, the rebel army reached Lancaster on Monday, the 7th of November, where they secured a supply of cannon, and, on Wednesday the 9th, marched into Preston, to the music of the bagpipes. The first care of the rebels was to proclaim the Chevalier de St. George, by the title of James III. This ceremony was performed with great pomp at the obelisk in the centre of the market-place, in the presence of the principal part of the army.* All this military array spread considerable alarm, not only in the town, but in every part of the county, and the wealthy inhabitants had quitted Preston on the approach of the enemy, taking with them the most valuable part of their effects. The municipal authority knew as little as the rest of the inhabitants where to look for succour, and it was not till Friday that news arrived that the king's forces, under the command of General Wills, were advancing by way of Wigan to engage the rebels. This intelligence served only to increase the general consternation, and, as orders were instantly given by the Jacobite commanders, to mount the cannon taken at Lancaster, and to barricade the streets, it became evident that this town was once more to be made the scene of a military engagement. "Every street," says one of the witnesses, in his evidence before the House of Lords, "was barricadoed, and, to strengthen the defences, two cannon were placed in each street." In the morning of Saturday it was announced that the King's troops were within a few miles of the town, and at mid-day General Wills, with the regiments of dragoons of Wynn, Honeywood, Munden, and Dormer, together with Preston's regiment of foot, crossed the bridge over the Ribble, at Walton, and marched to the front of the town, where the forces were drawn up. While viewing the town to discover its vulnerable points, some shots, fired from the garrison, struck two of the general's dragoons, and killed them dead on the spot. This incident seems to have precipitated the attack, and General Wills gave orders to carry the place by storm. The attack at Church-street-bar, then opposite Water-street, was led by Brigadier Honeywood, accompanied by Lord Forrester, who commanded Preston's regiment of infantry, and a simultaneous attack upon the barricado on Friargate brow, was made by the squadrons of Wynn, Dormer, and Stanhope, commanded by Brigadier Dormer, supported by the regiments of Pitt and Munden. Thus the whole of the troops were brought into action, and the engagement, which was continued till after midnight, was fought with determined resolution on both sides. At the extremities of the town the first barricadoes were carried, and a number of houses were set on fire, but the rebels still maintained possession of their inner works, and had inflicted upon the assailants a loss in killed and wounded of about two hundred men. The near approach of another army to reinforce the royalists induced them to desist from any further attack. At ten o'clock on Sunday morning, General Carpenter arrived, with three regiments of dragoons. The place was now invested on every side, and a council of war was called within the town, at which all the noblemen

* The Rev. Samuel Peploe, at this time Vicar of Preston, displayed so much fearless zeal as to read the prayers for the Brunswick family in the Parish Church, while the adherents of the Stuarts were present in arms; this devotion to the royal cause was duly appreciated by his sovereign George I. by whom he was rewarded, first with the wardenship of Manchester, and afterwards with the bishoprick of Chester.

in the rebel army and all the principal officers attended. At this meeting it was determined to sue for a capitulation, and, at two o'clock in the afternoon, General Foster despatched Colonel Oxborough, with an offer on the part of the garrison to lay down their arms, and to become prisoners of war, on condition of mercy. To this overture it was replied, that they must submit at discretion; that, as rebels, they could not be treated with; and all that could be promised to them was, that the soldiers in the royal army "should not cut them to pieces till further orders!"^a Some further negociation took place, which was concluded by a message from General Wills, to the effect, that, if they did not immediately surrender, he would attack the town, and put the garrison to the sword. This threat had the desired effect, and the rebel army, which amounted to from fourteen to fifteen hundred men, became prisoners. The duty of taking possession of the town, and disarming the garrison, devolved upon Lord Forrester. On repairing to the Mitre Tavern, he arrested the seven noblemen who had accompanied this ill-fated expedition, and they were despatched to London, where they were marched through the streets to the Tower in chains, like so many malefactors. Here they remained close prisoners till the early part of the year 1716, when they were impeached before the House of Lords, on a charge of high treason, and all of them convicted. The Earl of Derwentwater and Lord Kenmure paid the price of their treason on the block; Earl Nithisdale and Earl Wintown escaped at different times out of the Tower, not without some suspicion of connivance, and to Lord Widdrington, the Earl of Carnwath, and Lord Nairn, the royal clemency was extended. General Foster, Mr. Mackintosh, and several other officers of inferior note, were also tried in London, but the general escaped from Newgate, and arrived on the continent in safety; and Mr. Mackintosh and some others seized their keeper, and, with the assistance of their friends, effected their escape. Four others, less fortunate, amongst whom was Colonel Oxborough, were executed at Tyburn; and Major Nairn, Captain Lockhart, Captain Shaftoe, and Captain Erskine, being convicted by a court martial, were shot at Preston. Mr. Richard Shuttleworth, of Preston; Mr. Roger Moncaster, of Garstang, attorney; Mr. Thomas Coupe, of Walton-le-dale; William Butler, and William Arkwright, were hanged on Gallows hill, at Preston, on the 28th of January; and on the 9th of February, Richard Chorley, of Chorley, Esq. James Drummond, William Black, Donald M'Donald, John Howard, Berry Kennedy, and John Rowbottom, shared the same fate, at the same place.* Besides these, twenty-seven others of the rebels were executed at different places in the county, and in this way the blood of the royal troops shed in the attack on Preston was expiated.

1745. The rebellion of 1745, though much more formidable in itself than that of 1715, was viewed in Preston with much more composure. The history of that insurrection will be found in the first volume of this work,^b and it is only necessary to say here, that the insurgent army, about six thousand strong, with Prince Charles Edward at its head, marched through

* On cutting through the Gallows Hill, in May, 1817, the workmen discovered two coffins, in which the headless bodies of two of the rebel chiefs executed here were no doubt deposited. According to tradition, the heads were cut off at the time of execution, and exposed on poles in front of the Town Hall.—Taylor's Notes on a Brief Description of Preston.

Preston, on the twenty-seventh of November, on its route to London, to the animating tune of "The King shall have his own again."

After advancing by Manchester to Derby, the Prince and his followers, to avoid being surrounded and made prisoners, commenced their retreat to Scotland, and on the 12th of December, they again passed through this town to the less agreeable, but equally appropriate sounds of "Hie thee, Charley, home again."

The pursuit of General Oglethorpe's dragoons hastened the movements of the rebel army, and, had the Duke of Cumberland arrived a few days sooner, Fulwood moor would probably have witnessed the scene, which in the month of April following took place on the heath of Culloden.

In the midst of these agitations, the ladies of Preston were by no means inactive, when the safety of their own families, or the welfare of the public required their exertion; and it is related of the mother of the worthy Mayor of the guild, on the best authority, that while her husband, the under sheriff of the county, was at a distance providing for the safety of a part of his young family, she raised a sum of several hundred pounds, demanded from the inhabitants, and presented with her own hands the price of the public safety to the Scotch chiefs.

An institution of a singular kind, connected with the political history of these times, was set on foot in the year 1701, by the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Derwentwater, Sir Thomas Sherburne, Sir Wm. Pennington, and a number of other gentry of the Jacobite party in Lancashire. Under an appearance of jollity and conviviality a political purpose was concealed, and the members constituted themselves into a sort of mock corporate body by the designation of The Mayor and Corporation of the ancient borough of Walton. The meetings were held at a small public-house in that village, now called the Unicorn, and the proceedings were conducted with a kind of ludicrous formality. Their register contains a record of such of the transactions as it was judged prudent to commit to paper, and a mace, a sword of state, and three large staves covered with silver, served to keep up the mystery and whimsicality of this coterie. The rebellion of 1715 took off some of the most efficient of the members, but the mock corporation continued to exist* when its essential functions had passed away, and the register and staves are now in the possession of Sir Henry Philip Hoghton, Bart. c1818.

For upwards of a century, after the year 1660, the borough of Preston remained stationary, and at least four generations of men were born and died without materially affecting the amount of the population, which fluctuated during that long period between five and six thousand souls. Owing to the increased difficulties of navigating the Ribble, Liverpool and Lancaster had begun to divide the commerce of the county, to the exclusion of Preston; the only manufacture was linen, from yarn spun with the distaff and the spindle; the courts of justice and public offices, however, served to keep up the consequence of the place, and, if the expression may be allowed, law was then the staple commodity. prepared to give an impulse to the cotton business of England, which has continued to operate with augmenting force to the present hour, and has contributed essentially to render this branch of manufacture the most considerable in the world.* It appears from the evidence of John Kay, a mechanic, delivered on oath before the court of King's Bench, the 25th of June, 1785, on a legal inquiry into the subject of the patent right of spinning machines, that in the year 1768 this deponent accompanied Richard Arkwright, to Preston, at the time of Burgoyne's election, bringing with him two models of a spinning jenny, invented by Thomas Highs, a reed maker, at Leigh. Some time before the election commenced, Arkwright was actively employed in preparing for his manufacturing operations, and his first rude spinning machine was fitted up in the parlour of the house belonging to the Free Grammar School, which was lent to his friend and future partner, Mr. Smalley, for the purpose, by Mr. Ellis Henry, the head master of the school. At that time the wardrobe of the future Knight was in so tattered a condition, that a number of persons subscribed to put him into decent plight to appear in the poll-room. As soon as the election was over, Richard Arkwright and Kay left the town, and Mr. John Smalley, of Preston, a liquor merchant and painter, accompanied them into Nottinghamshire, where they soon after erected the first spinning manufactory ever established in England.^a At that time, there prevailed a strong prejudice amongst the labouring classes in all parts of Lancashire, against the use of machinery for abridging manual labour, which prejudice existed for many years afterwards, and arose to such a height as to endanger both the person and the works of any manufacturer who might have the temerity to introduce the new machines. This is the true reason why the county of Nottingham, instead of the county of Lancaster, was selected for the erection of the new works; and it was partly owing to this cause, that cotton machinery was not introduced into Preston for nearly ten years after it had become pretty general in some other parts of the county of Lancaster.

The first manufactory erected here for the spinning of cotton, was built by Messrs. Collison and Watson, at the bottom of Friargate, in 1777, but the business of that factory—The Factory, as it was emphatically called—though then thought considerable, would now be esteemed as on a small scale. The cotton trade made very little further progress in Preston, till the year 1791, when the late Mr. John Horrocks came to reside in the town, and commenced the muslin manufacture, in a small warehouse, at Syke-hill. The skill, enterprise, and industry of this extraordinary man, soon elevated him to eminence in his business, and the manufactories in Dale-street, Friday-street, Frenchwood, Spital's Moss, and Canal-street, rose in succession under his fostering hand. The character and pursuits of the town now underwent an important change; the gentry, for whom it had been for many ages distinguished, and who had been accustomed to give a tone to the manners and habits of the people, still continued to reside here, but the manufacturing soon became the predominant interest; and John Horrocks, Esq. at the head of that interest, supported by the corporation, was elevated, in 1802, to the rank of representative of the borough of Preston in parliament, having for his colleague and coadjutor Lord Stanley, the only son of the Earl of Derby. The career of this gentleman was as short as it was prosperous; he only survived his senatorial honours two years, and died in London, on the 1st of March, 1804, in the 36th year of his age. He was succeeded in both his business and seat in parliament, by his elder brother, Samuel Horrocks, Esq. the head of those great manufacturing establishments in this place, which at the present time afford employment in the spinning and manufacturing businesses to upwards of four thousand of the inhabitants,* independent of those employed in bleaching and finishing the cloth. In addition to the works of Mr. Horrocks,† and his copartners, several manufacturing establishments, belonging to other proprietors, exist in this town and neighbourhood; and there are at present no fewer than 40 factories, chiefly engaged in the spinning of cotton, which yield 70,000lbs. of cotton yarn weekly, and are worked by 41 steam engines, of the aggregate power of 885 horses. The weavers are also very numerous, and almost all the branches of trade connected with the manufactures of Lancashire prevail here, as will be seen from the Directory.

From the reign of James I. to the breaking out of the second revolutionary war with France, when England rose in arms to repel the insolent menace of a threatened invasion, it does not appear that Preston had ever the honour to entertain a guest of the blood royal, (except indeed the young Chevalier Prince Charles Edward) but on the 21st of September, 1803, his royal highness Prince William Frederick (now duke) of Gloucester, the commander of the north-western district of England, attended by a numerous suite, came hither from his headquarters at Liverpool, to review the volunteer corps under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Grimshaw and Lieutenant-Colonel Watson. On this occasion, the freedom of the borough was presented to his royal highness, by Samuel Horrocks, Esq. the mayor, after an address from James Allan Park, Esq. the recorder, and the corporation displayed their hospitality by entertaining the noble visiter and his suite with a public dinner at the Bull Inn. On the anniversary of this visit, in the year following, the Duke of Gloucester, brother to his late Majesty George III. attended by his son Prince William Frederick, inspected the Preston volunteer corps on the Marsh, and was presented with the freedom of the borough by Daniel Lyon, Esq. the mayor, in the Town-hall, after an eloquent and impressive address from John Grimshaw, Esq. the senior alderman, and father of the corporation.

The edifices devoted to the purposes of religious worship in Preston Churches consist of four churches and one chapel of the Establishment, two Roman Catholic chapels, and seven other chapels, belonging to various denominations of Protestant Dissenters. The Parish Church, as we have already seen, is of Saxon origin, built the first century after the establishment of the Christian religion in this country, and at first dedicated to St. Wilfrid, Archbishop of York. At a later period, probably soon after the reformation, the Romish saint was discarded, and this parish church is now called St. John's. The living is a vicarage, valued in the Liber Regis at £15 3s. 11½d. of which Sir Henry Philip Hoghton, Bart. is the patron and lay rector, and the Rev. Roger Carus Wilson, A.M. the incumbent. As a fabric, there is nothing about St. John's to call for particular observation; it is properly described as a good ordinary parish church,* and it has been entirely rebuilt in three different portions within the last fifty-five years. A handsome organ, presented to the parishioners by the late John Horrocks, Esq. M.P. at a cost of 500 guineas, stands in the front of the gallery, and contributes at once to ornament the interior of the church, and to add to the solemnity of its services. The Bills of Mortality furnished by the register of this church for the last thirty-seven years, serve to indicate the progress of population in Preston:—

* At mid-day, on Sunday, the 27th of July, 1823, an attempt was made in the public streets of Preston, by a cotton spinner, of the name of Andrew Riding, to assassinate Mr. Samuel Horrocks, by striking him several desperate blows on the head and arms with a butcher's cleaver, but the instrument happily fell from the assailant's hand before the bloody deed was fully perpetrated, and the consequence, though at first very alarming, proved less serious than might have been apprehended. Riding, who was brought to trial at the ensuing Assizes at Lancaster, and acquitted on the ground of insanity, but confined for life under an act of the late King, attributed this ferocious attack to some attempt on the part of the manufacturers to reduce the wages of the spinners, and which purpose, he conceived, had been unduly promoted by Mr. Horrocks.

Formerly the Roman Catholics, who are a very numerous body here, interred their dead at the Parish Church, but for the last 10 years they have had a burial ground of their own, and the Dissenters also occasionally bury in the ground adjoining to their own Chapels.

St. George's. Next to the parish church, ST. GEORGE'S CHAPEL, situated between Fishergate and Friargate, is the oldest episcopal place of worship in Preston. This plain brick edifice, built in the year 1723, is a chapel of ease to St. John's, and has at all times had a respectable, though not a very numerous congregation. The Rev. Robert Harris, B.D. head master of the free school, is the chaplain.

The rapid increase of population towards the close of the last and the beginning of the present century, has led to a corresponding increase of churches, and Trinity Church, St. Peter's, and St. Paul's, have all been erected within the last ten years. TRINITY CHURCH, consecrated by Dr. Law, Bishop of Chester, on the 15th of December, 1815, is a neat plain Gothic structure, built at a cost of £9,000, of which sum £4000 was raised by subscriptions and donations. The site is well chosen between Great Shaw-street and the Back-lane, in an elevated situation, on a plot of ground formerly called Patten-field. A handsome square tower, somewhat deficient in height, stands at the west end of the church, and the interior to the east is appropriately ornamented, by a spacious window, of stained glass, in five compartments, executed by Mr. William Raphael Egginton, of Birmingham.

The foundations of ST. PETER'S CHURCH, in the Fylde-road, were laid on the 12th of September, 1822, during the festival of the last Preston Guild, by Mr. Justice Park, the Recorder of this Borough; and the church has been erected by the commissioners for building new churches, at a cost of 6,900*l.* on a site presented for that pious purpose, along with the land forming the adjoining cemetery, by James Allan Park, Esq. the son of the Judge. This church, which contains a handsome east window of stained glass, executed by Mr. Seward, of Lancaster, is just finished, and will be consecrated in the autumn of the present year (1825).

THE NEW CHURCH, dedicated to St. Paul, now building by the same Commissioners, is situated near the bottom of Church-street, adjoining Park-road to the east. It is a handsome building of Gothic architecture, and of the style called the early English, or that which prevailed in the 12th century. This edifice is situated in a spacious church-yard, provided as an additional cemetery for the use of the parish. Both this and St. Peter's Church do much credit to Messrs. Rickman and Hutchinson, the architects, from whose designs they are built. It was generally wished that a spire might be attached to one of the new churches, and that the additional expense should be raised by subscription, but the plans could not be altered. The manufactories still tower over the churches, the highest building in the town being the chimney of a steam engine, and it is an extraordinary fact, that there is not a spire between the Lune and the Ribble, with the exception of one at Lancaster, nor is there a single spire within fourteen miles of Preston.

Numerous as the Roman Catholics have long been in the town and neighbourhood of Preston, it does not appear that, at any period since the Reformation, when the Franciscan Convent was dissolved, and the parish church passed out of their possession into the hands of the Protestants, that they had ever more than one place of public worship in this town, till the year 1793. The original chapel, called St. Mary's, is situated at the top of Friargate-brow, and serves as a chapel of ease to their more modern sanctuary, which is dedicated to the early patron saint of the parish church. A well executed painting of the Lord's Supper hangs over the altar in St. Mary's chapel. On the erection of the new chapel, the old one was converted into a cotton warehouse, to which purpose it was applied for nearly twenty years, when it was again fitted up as a chapel, and has been ever since used by the Roman Catholics for the purpose of religious worship. St. Wilfrid's chapel is a capacious building, capable of accommodating a congregation of 3000 persons; it is situated in Chapel-street, Fishergate, and was opened on the 4th of June, 1793. High Mass is performed here on all the great festivals, and the altar-piece is enriched with several paintings of superior workmanship. Contiguous to this chapel the Benedictine Nuns of Ghent had a seminary, which was opened in the year 1792, but in 1812 they removed to Caverswall-castle, in Staffordshire, where the sisterhood are now established. Stonyhurst,* the great English Catholic seminary, is in this neighbourhood, and from thence this town and neighbourhood are supplied with Catholic Missionaries.

One of the most eminent of the Non-conformist Ministers, the Rev. Isaac Ambrose, Vicar of Garstang, and author of the evangelical treatise on "Looking to Jesus," was settled here at the period of the commonwealth, and it is probable that a congregation of Protestant Dissenters was formed in Preston soon after the passing of the memorable St. Bartholomew's act in 1662. The chapel near the bottom of Church-street, built in the year 1718, was first used by the Presbyterians, but has for many years been occupied by the Unitarians. The Friends' Meeting House, in Friargate, was erected in 1784. Before that time, this religious community assembled in a building between Everton-gardens and Spring-gardens, to the east of St. John's-street. The Baptist Chapel, at the top of Leeming-street, was erected in 1783. The Methodist (Old) Chapel, in the Back-lane, now converted into a corn warehouse, was built in 1788, during the life-time of the Rev. John Wesley, and was superseded, in the year 1817, by the more spacious and commodious structure in Lune-street, which is capable of accommodating a congregation of 2000 persons. The Independent Chapel, in Fishergate, was built in 1790; and the Independent Chapel, in Grimshaw-street, Church-street, was finished in the year 1808. St. Paul's Chapel, in Vauxhall-road, formerly used by the followers of Mr. Alexander Kilham, a sect of seceders from the Methodists, who contend for a more popular form of church government, was purchased by a congregation of semi-episcopalians, in 1819, and the service according to the ritual of the Church of England was performed here for a short time by a minister licenced at the quarter sessions, but not ordained by the bishop; it was then purchased by the Wesleyan Methodists, and is now used occasionally by them for religious service. The Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion occupy a temporary place of worship in Cannon-street, and are preparing to build a new chapel.

Schools.

The charitable institutions for the promotion of Education are, the Free Grammar School, the Blue Coat School, the National School, the Catholic School, the Methodist School, and various Sunday Schools.

The FREE GRAMMAR SCHOOL is situated on Syke-hill, and is under the patronage of the Corporation, who have the appointment of both the master and usher. There are no existing documents to show the origin of this school, but one of its benefactors was Bartholomew Worthington, a member of the common council, who, by will dated 18th of December, 1663, devised the residue of the lease of a close of land, called the School-field, in aid of the stipends of the master or masters of the Free Grammar School, and the freehold of which the corporation afterwards purchased of John Cottam, gentleman, for the use of the school. On this land, the theatre and the houses adjoining southward have since been built, and the property now yields a rent of 55*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* yearly, exclusive of the sum of 180*l.* paid to the corporation by the Lancaster Canal Company for a small part of the field, and for which capital sum the corporation pay 9*l.* a year interest to the head master of the Grammar School. There are no written statutes or ordinances at Preston Free School, but the council of the corporation, on the 19th of Sept. 1698, established a set of rules for the government of the school.* Formerly the sons of freemen only were instructed gratuitously, others paying a quarterage, but this payment is not now exacted. The number of scholars varies from 30 to 40; the system of education is principally classical, but partly commercial. No exhibitions or other university advantages attach to this school, which is one reason why it has not produced many eminent men. The Rev. Robert Harris, B.D. of Sidney College, Cambridge, is the head master, which office he has filled upwards of 36 years. His stipend is about 100*l.* a year, exclusive of the compliment usually paid to him at Shrovetide by the parents of the boys under his care, which varies from half-a-guinea to two guineas each, and exclusive also of a good family house, in which he resides rent free. The usher teaches writing and accounts in the lower school, for which two guineas a year is paid as quarterage. The corporation pay salaries to the head master and the usher in addition to Worthington's bequest, and on that body the cost of buildings and keeping the school house in repair devolves.

A CHARITY SCHOOL, for the instruction of "the poorest children of the parish of Preston, gratis, in reading English," was founded and endowed in the year 1704, by Roger Sudell, an alderman of the borough. The school-house is situated in Midspritt Wiend, and the endowment is 12*l.* a year.—10*l.* to be paid to the master," and 2*l.* for the purchase of books. At a subsequent period, this small foundation became a Blue Coat School for boys and girls. In addition to Sudell's bequest, this charity possesses 1000*l.* in the public funds, arising from legacies left by other pious individuals.* This humble charity for a time was suffered to merge in the national school, but that union is now dissolved, and the present vicar, who acts as trustee and visitor, contemplates the purchase of a building, in which a blue coat school shall be revived with more than its former utility.

A school for the instruction of both sexes, upon Dr. Bell's system, in conjunction with the diocesan committee of the National Society for the education of the poor, was instituted in the year 1814, and has, ever since the commencement of the year 1815,^a afforded gratuitous instruction to an aggregate of about 285 boys, and 130 girls. The school house, situated on Syke hill, is a spacious plain building, erected for the purpose, in which is kept the district library or deposit belonging to the Society for the promotion of Christian Knowledge.

The poor of Preston enjoy the advantage of a number of other charities, producing funds from the interest of money and the rents of lands to the aggregate amount of about 150*l.* a year, lists of all which we possess, partly from private sources of information and partly from published official documents, but the present work does not afford room for their insertion.

A CATHOLIC SCHOOL, in Fox street, is coeval with the National School. The first stone of this edifice was laid on the 29th of August, 1814, by the Rev. Joseph Dunn, the senior pastor of the Catholic congregation of St. Wilfrid. No institution can perhaps show more demonstratively than this the catholic spirit of the age in which we have the happiness to live. The benefits of education are here extended daily to a considerable number of children, male and female, all of the Roman Catholic persuasion, and yet a "great proportion of protestant names" adorn the catalogue of its supporters. If the spirit displayed here, both by protestants and catholics, in the education of youth, could be generally diffused over the provinces of Ireland, what a changed country would that become! The author of this historical sketch is old enough to recollect the time when the protestants and catholics of Preston were worrying each other with their religious, or rather their irreligious feuds, and he is young enough, he hopes, to live to see the day when, under the influence of a tolerant and christian temper, the example now set in his native town will be followed in every part of the United Kingdom.

In all large manufacturing towns there must of necessity be a vast number of poor children, who cannot avail themselves of the advantages of education, though it may be dispensed gratuitously, on the days devoted to secular employments; hence SUNDAY SCHOOLS have been established in all the principal towns of England. In Preston they flourish to a considerable extent, and the following is a list of the number of scholars in each of these schools, as they stood on the 3d of January, 1825 :—

The corporation is in possession of a certificate, under the hand and seal of Sir Thomas Walmsley, chief justice in the time of Queen Elizabeth, stating that, amongst other charters to Preston, he had seen one granted by Henry I. in the first year of his reign, the heads of which he recites in his certificate, but no charter of Henry I. is to be found either amongst the records of the corporation or in the CALENDARIUM ROTULORUM CHARTARUM in the Tower.

The charter of Henry II.† grants to the burgesses of Preston the same privileges and immunities as those which were enjoyed by the inhabitants of Newcastle-under-Lyne, and the principal of which were, that they should hold a Guild Merchant in the borough, and that they should pass through all his majesty's dominions with their merchandise, buying,

* The Charter of Henry II. is without Date, but in the Bye Laws of the Corporation of Preston, it is said to have been granted in the 10th Year of his Reign; this, however, appears to be incorrect, for John of Oxford, Bishop of Norwich, who is one of the witnesses to this Charter, was not made bishop of Norwich until 1175, about the 21st Henry II. The better opinion, therefore, is, that the Charter was granted in the 26th Year of his Reign, 1179 or 1180, in the former of which years he spent his Christmas at Winchester, where the Charter appears to have been granted.—See Holl. Vol. 3, Page 102.

† It has been stated that the burgesses of Preston paid one hundred marks to Henry II. and the sum of two pence, with sixty marks, and four chaceurs, or dogs, to King John, for these charters, selling, and trafficking freely, without being subject to tollage, stallage, customs, &c. The elective franchise was first conferred upon Preston in the 23d of Edward I. and succeeding charters through four centuries confirmed, and in some degree extended, the privileges of the burgesses; but the charter of Queen Elizabeth is the Magna Charta of Preston. By this the town was erected into a free corporate borough in deed, fact, and name, for one mayor (anciently called the portgreve or prefect), two bailiffs, or pretors, a common council of twenty-four, and the general body of the burgesses, by the name of the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of the borough of Preston, in the county of Lancaster. To this body, thus rendered corporate, was given the power to plead and to be impleaded; to use a common seal; to choose their own officers; to hold a guild merchant as hitherto, with a court to be held every three weeks on the Friday for ever,* and a court of frank-pledge. By the same charter the right was confirmed of holding a market and fairs, and the burgesses were privileged to hold and enjoy all the liberties, customs, franchises, and immunities which the burgesses of the said borough had hitherto been accustomed to enjoy. a See

v. l. p. 137.

In the 14th of Charles II. dating from the Restoration, that monarch granted to the corporation of Preston a charter, which, in addition to their other privileges, gave them the right of acquiring lands and revenues of the annual value of any sum not exceeding £200; but from the caprice of that monarch's councils, and with the assistance of his sanguinary Chief Justice Jeffries, Preston, in common with most of the other boroughs of the kingdom, was divested of its charters in 1684, and left without any rights or privileges but such as the king would vouchsafe to grant her.^{b*} In this situation the borough remained till within three weeks of the king's death, when the charter under which the town is now governed, was granted. By this document all the rights and immunities granted by Elizabeth were substantially confirmed, and the power given to the corporation of acquiring lands and other revenues of the annual value of 500*l.* in addition to their already acquired possessions. The corporation was in some degree new modelled, and the officers of that body were in future to consist of a mayor, recorder, two bailiffs, (one of them the town bailiff, and the other the mayor's bailiff) seven aldermen, and seventeen capital burgesses, forming together the common council. The mayor to be clerk of the market and coroner, and to be also a justice of the peace, as well for the county palatine of Lancaster, as for the borough of Preston, and his predecessor in office and senior alderman, and the recorder, to be justices of the peace for the borough. By this charter it is further directed that the election of a mayor shall take place every year, in the week next preceding the feast of St. Wilfrid,† by a jury of twenty-four resident burgesses, which jury shall be chosen by two of the more worthy and discreet inhabitants (called Elisors) and which officers shall be chosen, one by the mayor and the other by the aldermen of the borough present at the election. In general the person elected to the office of chief magistrate is the alderman next in rotation, but in the election of b Rapin.

* Jeffries was sumptuously entertained by the Corporation of Preston, on his return from the Assizes at Lancaster, in the autumn of 1684, on the principle, probably, that certain of the Indian tribes pay their devotion to the spirit of evil. A letter of the Chief Justice, in good preservation, is amongst the Corporation Records, dated 29th Sept. 1684.

a guild mayor this rule is sometimes departed from, in order to select a person of "good presence and complaisance" to perform the honours of that august festival. The duty of electing a new bailiff, called "the Town Bayliffe," and a new serjeant, called "the Town Serjeant," also devolves upon the jury, but the choice of the other bailiff, called "the Mayor's Bayliffe," and the other serjeant, called "the Mayor's Serjeant," is vested in the mayor elect. The new officers enter upon their duties in each successive year on the 12th of October, (St. Wilfrid's day) which is observed as a festival by the body corporate, and their friends. The corporation possess a handsome and somewhat superb regalia, of which the large silver gilt mace was presented to that body by his Grace James the fourth Duke of Hamilton, for their courteous attention to his accomplished Duchess, Lady Elizabeth Gerrard, during her abode in Preston.

Formerly no person except a freeman was allowed to carry on business here, "except he brought a new trade into the town, or a great necessity to introduce the same," but a more enlightened policy has discarded these pernicious feudal restrictions, which contributed for ages to stint the growth of the place and to impair the wealth of the inhabitants. The only privileges now enjoyed by the freemen are an exemption from toll in the market and at the bars,* the benefit of agisting cattle upon the moor and the marsh, and the exclusive privilege of filling the corporate offices of the borough. The government of the town is in the mayor and corporation, and its internal regulation in the commissioners of police, acting under the authority of an act of parliament obtained in the year 1815. The latter body is charged with the duty of lighting and paving the town, out of two separate rates raised upon the inhabitants, which from June 1823 to June 1824 amounted together to £3,510 3s., being £1,510 3s. for lighting, and £1,998 10s. for paving. Their powers do not affect those of the corporation.

Preston is a borough by prescription, as well as by charter, and returns two members to parliament. Universal suffrage prevails here, the right of election being in "all the male inhabitants" of the age of 21 years and upwards, who have resided during the last six months in the town, and have not for the twelve months immediately preceding the election been chargeable to any parish as paupers.† The present members^a are Samuel Horrocks, Esq. and Edmund Hornby, Esq. The number of electors amount to upwards of four thousand.

Preston
Guild.

One of the most ancient and certainly one of the most splendid and elegant festivals in this kingdom is held in the borough of Preston every twenty years, under the designation of PRESTON GUILD. It has been already observed,* that these institutions are of Saxon origin, and Camden describes the Gilda Mercatoria, or Guild Merchant as a liberty or privilege granted to merchants, whereby they are entitled to hold certain pleas of land and other possessions within their own precincts, and thereby neighbours enter into associations, and become bound to each other to bring forth him who commits any crime, or to make satisfaction to the injured party. The whole town of Ripon, of which Archbishop Wilfrid, was the patron, as he was of Preston, formed a fraternity of this nature, and from the time of Alfred the Great to the reign of Charles I. if any house in that borough was robbed between sun-set and sun-rise, the inhabitants at large, under the direction of their wakeman, or chief magistrate, indemnified the sufferer and prosecuted the delinquent. It does not appear that the institution of the Guild at Preston has ever been applied to these purposes; but whatever may have been the case before the date of the records that have come down to us, at present its ostensible objects are to receive and register the claims of persons having any right to the freedom or other franchises of the borough, whether by ancestry, prescription, or purchase, and to celebrate a periodical jubilee rendered distinguished by its unfrequent recurrence.* The Guild commences on the Monday next after the feast of the decollation of St. John the Baptist, which is always in the early part of the autumn. The first Preston Guild on record was celebrated in the reign of Edward III. one of the royal benefactors of the borough, and the following is a list of the years in which each successive guild has been held, with the names of the chief magistrates who presided:—

* The tolls levied at the bars are very obnoxious, and the corporation of Preston, who are now becoming an opulent body, have it in contemplation to follow the example of their Liverpool brethren, by adopting a liberal commutation of them under the sanction of parliament.

† Until the year 1661, the right of returning members to parliament appears to have been exercised by the select body of the corporation chiefly, but not without some exceptions in favour of the freemen at large. The point in dispute in the election in that year, between Doctors Fife and Rishton, was, whether the select body, or the freemen at large (inhabitants), had the right of voting, and it was decided that all the inhabitants (freemen) had that right. At the following election, about six years afterwards, the return was signed by freemen only, and so on to 1768, when, upon the petition of Sir Henry Hoghton and General Burgoyne, against the return of Sir Peter Leicester and Sir Frank Standish, the decision of the House was, that all the inhabitants had a right to vote, and not the freemen only.

Previous to the time for holding the Guild, a court is formed of the mayor, the four senior aldermen, as stewards of the Guild, and the other aldermen, with the town clerk, as clerk of the guild who sit daily for twenty-eight days to renew and grant freedoms. The entertainments (for the direction of which a committee of the corporation is always appointed) are generally confided to the taste of the mayor and lady mayoress, subject to the approbation of the committee. The processions are arranged by the mayor, with the concurrence of the committee also, after a communication with the wardens and stewards of the different companies of trade, and the heads of lodges. The duration of the guild, which was formerly for a month, is now only for a fortnight, but for civic purposes the guild books are open twenty-eight days. The nobility

* Though the corporation is by the charter empowered to enact bye-laws for the better regulation of the borough, yet these are always made, according to ancient practice, by the mayor, stewards, and aldermen of the guilds, and not in pursuance of the modern charters—orders of council are made between the guilds, and if in practice they are found useful, they are enacted at the following guild. The existing bye-laws have not been altered since the guild of 1742, when they were framed on the most mature deliberation, with the aid of men eminent in the law.

At the last guild, which may serve as a specimen, from fifty to sixty thousand persons were present. On the first day the companies began to assemble at eight o'clock in the morning, under their proper banners, and decked in their gayest attire. At half-past ten they were formed in order by the grand marshal, and the mayor and corporation moved through their lines from the guildhall in procession to the parish church, accompanied by a large assemblage of nobility and gentry, amongst whom were the Lord Lieutenant and the High Sheriff of the county, the Earl of Wilton, the Earl of Stamford and Warrington, Lord Lindsey, Lord Aymer, Lord Grey, &c. After divine service the grand procession commenced, and the companies, decorated with the insignia of their trades, and headed by the bands of music, paraded the town in the following order—1. Tanners, Skinners, Curriers, and Glovers: 2. Cotton Spinners and Weavers, headed by their masters and accompanied by machines in motion, mounted on stages, by which all the processes of the business were performed, from the steam engine to the loom: 3. Cordwainers: 4. Carpenters: 5. Butchers: 6. Vintners: 7. Tailors: 8. Plasterers: 9. Smiths: 10. Gardeners: 11. Odd Fellows: 12. Printers and Bookbinders: 13. Free Masons; the rear of the procession being brought up by the corporation and the gentry. But the great attraction of the guild was the procession of the lady mayoress, on the following day, when about one hundred and sixty ladies, headed by the representative of the lady mayoress,* the Countess of Derby, the Countess of Wilton, Lady Lindsey, Lady Houghton, the Miss Stanleys, and several other ladies of distinction, all decorated with towering plumes, and dressed in the full costume of the ball room, passed in procession, first to the parish church, and afterwards round the market-place to the guildhall. These splendid processions were only the fore-runners of other entertainments; for a whole fortnight, the town remained full of company; banquets, balls, plays, and races, each in their turn claimed the attention of the visitors. A fancy ball, which was attended by from six to seven hundred of the gentry of the county, was given in the first week. The second week was ushered in by an ascent of Mr. Livingston in his balloon; and a series of musical performances of the first order, consisting of oratorios and concerts, with a charity ball and masquerade, served to engage and to delight the company during the remainder of the festival.

It is erroneously supposed by some to be obligatory upon the corporation to celebrate a guild every twenty years, on pain of forfeiting their charter, but no such obligation exists; the guilds have indeed, for upwards of two centuries and a half, been held at regular intervals, in virtue of a bye-law of the mayor, stewards, and aldermen of the guild, passed in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, but this is quite a matter of choice and arrangement, and should the entertainments and processions of the guilds ever wholly cease, (which goodness forefend!) no privilege or franchise would be lost by their discontinuance. When a guild is held, and the freemen are enjoined to register their claims, it is, however, obligatory upon them to attend to the mandate. The franchise of freedom continues from guild to guild only, and is then surrendered, and if not again renewed, is lost.

The distinguishing characteristic of the guild at Preston is its freedom from excess, and the elegance and refinement of the entertainments. This festival has in it something in common with the carnivals of Italy, and the Saturnalia of the ancients, but it has none of their grossness; and the difference is principally owing to the part which the ladies take in all the amusements of the guild, and to the chastening influence of their presence and example.

Preston, owing to its central situation, is the place from which a large proportion of the legal processes of the county of Lancaster issue. The Court of Chancery of the County Palatine,^a the Court of Common Pleas of the County Palatine,^b the Court of General Annual Sessions,^c the Quarter Sessions of the Peace for three Hundreds of the County, and the Sheriffs County Court,^d are all held here, and have all been already described.

The Coroner's Elections, the General Lieutenancy Meetings, and all public Meetings of the Freeholders and inhabitants of the County, when convened by the High Sheriff or Lord-Lieutenant on any public occasion, are likewise held at the Court in Preston; and the elections for Knights of the Shire have formerly been adjourned from Lancaster to Preston, "upon long poles, for the county's ease, if the contest be not quickly reconciled amongst the gentry."^e

The Wapentake Court of the hundred of Amounderness, for the recovery of small debts under 40s. is held in the Steward's Office, every Wednesday three weeks.

The Borough Court is held in the Town-hall, every Friday three weeks, and has the power first to seize the goods, and finally to attach the body, when the debt has been contracted in the borough, or has been acknowledged within its jurisdiction, if the claim amount to 40s. or upwards.

There are also the Courts Leet, with view of frank-pledge, held twice in the year, at least, for the presentment of nuisances and obstructions, and for the examination of weights and measures; and the Court of Pied-poudre, having unlimited jurisdiction over all contracts arising within the fairs.

The Quarter sessions for the hundreds of Amounderness, Blackburn, and Leyland, have been horetofore held here on Thursday, in the usual sessions week,^f but, by a late arrangement, they are now held on the Wednesday, by adjournment from Lancaster, in which Borough the Sessions for Lonsdale Hundred commence on the Monday. The Sessions for the Borough of Preston are held each quarter, on the Monday next preceding the Sessions for the Hundreds.

The Prothonotary, the Seal-keeper, the Cursitors, the Registrar of the Chancery, the Clerk of the Crown, the Clerk of the Peace for the County Palatine, and the County Treasurer, have their offices here, and the office of the Sheriff, whose deputy is always a professional gentleman in Preston, is also held in this emporium of law.

The public buildings in Preston are not very numerous. The guild-hall was built just before the guild of 1762, and the present town hall just before the guild of 1782; these buildings form a stately pile between Church-street and Fishergate, and are used for the transaction of municipal and other public business. The council chamber is ornamented with fine full-length portraits of George II. (presented by Sir Edward Stanley), and of Daniel Pulteney, and Michael Fazakerley, Esq. (recorder) all by eminent artists. Over the entrance to the town hall is cut in stone, the Paschal Lamb, couchant, with the initials P. P.—Princeps pacis, strangely combined with implements of war. A handsome cupola, built in 1814, graces this edifice. The Town-hall stands on the site of the old hall, the roof of which fell in about six o'clock, in the morning of Saturday the 3d of June, 1780, after a race ball had been held within the walls on the Thursday night preceding, and from which the company had not departed till three o'clock on Friday morning.

The House of Correction for the Hundreds of Amounderness, Blackburn, and Leyland, at the bottom of Church-street, is built on the penitentiary plan, and has the reputation of being one of the best conducted prisons in the kingdom.* This prison is on a very large scale, but the Court-house, which is inconveniently situated in the centre of the building, is not sufficiently commodious, and at the general sessions for the county, held by adjournment on the 9th of September, 1824, the sum of ten thousand pounds was voted by the magistrates, for the erection of a new court-house and record office, which are to be placed outside the walls of the present gaol.

An edifice, much admired for its stately appearance, is the occasional residence of the Earl of Derby in Church-street. This mansion was for many years inhabited by the late Lord Strange; but it was built originally by the Patten family. There are here a number of pictures, which may be seen by visitors, as a matter of favour, and some of which are by eminent masters. The Stanley family has long been closely connected with the town of Preston, in which they have considerable possessions. In the year 1730, Sir Edward Stanley was elected an alderman of this corporation: and in 1731, he was elevated to the civic chair; but on the 2d of September, 1740, he was discharged as an alderman, at his own request, having succeeded to the Earldom.

A new Exchange or Market-house has lately been erected on the west side of Lune-street, which ranks very properly amongst the public edifices of Preston. This building is a plain but handsome structure of brick, three stories high, of an oblong form, inclosing an open area, and is 236 feet long, and 108 feet wide, ornamented with a stone pediment and cornice. The accommodations afforded by it to the trade and commerce of the town are, a corn exchange, and corn market and shambles, with a range of shops for small wares and trinkets, and a spacious woollen cloth-hall, for the use of the clothiers at fairs.

There are two public works in Preston of great importance, the Water Works, at the bottom of Midspritt Wiend, and the Gas Works, in Avenham-lane. The former of these establishments has existed nearly a century. The late Mr. Robert Abbott, sensible of the advantage of an ample supply of fresh water, of its influence upon the domestic comfort of the inhabitants, and of the security it imparts to the town against the ravages of fire, erected the water works in 1729, in company with Mr. Woodcock, and, though from that time to the present the name of "The Folly"* has attached to their labours, time has shown the folly not to have been in the projector, but in those who applied a name of opprobrium to one of the first instances of enterprize and public spirit displayed in modern Preston. The population of the town has outgrown the capacity of the present water-works and whenever they shall be enlarged or superseded by new works, the mode of filtration adopted at Glasgow will, it is hoped, be resorted to.^a The Preston Gas Light Company was the first establishment formed in any provincial town in the kingdom for the supply of coal gas to the inhabitants. The subscription was opened in May, 1815, and the first issue of gas was made in the February following. The works were at first undertaken with a capital of about £2,500, which was afterwards increased to £12,000, and, to bring them to perfection, should be augmented to £20,000. To effect this extension, part of the profits are allowed to accumulate in the hands of the trustees.

The public charities of Preston divide themselves into three classes Charities—religious, medical, and miscellaneous. The auxiliary Bible Society, established in the year 1813, ranks in the first class of these institutions, and the ladies' auxiliary essentially promotes the same purpose. The Church, the Baptist, the Independent, and the Methodist Missionary Societies, each in its sphere, contributes to the spread of the gospel in foreign lands; and a branch of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, and a Religious Tract Society, cast their contributions into the treasury of piety and benevolence. The Catholic Charitable Society is of a mixed character, partly religious, but principally secular, and bears the venerable stamp of age, having been established in 1731, for the relief of the poor of that religious denomination, under the direction of the priests. The Medical Charities are, the Dispensary, in Fishergate, established on the day of Jubilee, Oct. 25, 1809, for the relief of the sick poor; and the House of Recovery, near Trinity Church, established on the 28th of June, 1813, for the cure and prevention of contagious disease. The number of patients admitted from the opening of the Dispensary to the 25th October, 1824, amounts to no fewer than 25,632, and the number admitted the last year, to 2072. The number of patients in the House of Recovery vary materially, as the town is more or less free from fever, but the average of the 12 years since the opening of that institution, has been 88. The Ladies' Charity, held in a room in the Dispensary, and coeval with that establishment, affords medical aid, with the use of bed linen, and other assistance to poor women in child-birth, at their own houses.* The Alms-houses, and the Benevolent Society form the miscellaneous class of charities. In monastic times the alms-houses of Preston were so numerous, that every principal entrance to the town had its eleemosynary dwellings, but they have all disappeared, and two piles of this description of charities now only exist, namely,—The Corporation Alms-houses, consisting of five cottages, built in 1790, on the way to the workhouse, in lieu of those which formerly stood at the bottom of Church-street, and another small pile, built soon after Bartholomew Worthington's almshouses, near Fishergate Bar, were taken down, about twenty years ago. The Benevolent Society was formed in 1812, and administers relief to the poor at their own houses, after their situation has been ascertained by previous visits.

A number of those excellent provident institutions called BENEFIT SOCIETIES, exist in this town, to the honour and the comfort of their members. There is here also a SAVINGS' BANK, in which, on the 20th of November, 1824, five hundred and forty-nine creditors of the bank had deposits amounting, with the interest due thereupon, to £20,305 17s. 5d.

The Parochial concerns of this township are vigilantly administered by a select vestry, and though the inhabitants increase with so much rapidity, the expenditure in this department has for some years been gradually diminishing,—partly owing to an improved system of management, but principally to the prosperous state of trade.

The Press.

The history of the public press of Preston is contained in a narrow compass: In the year of the rebellion of 1745, the first newspaper ever published in this town appeared, under the title of The British Courant, or Preston Journal, published by James Stanley and John Moor; but, from lack of patronage, this Journal was at a subsequent period discontinued. At the breaking out of the revolutionary wars between France and England, when the thirst for news was ardent in the extreme, the late Mr. Thomas Walker established a newspaper, entitled The Preston Review, the first number of which was published in 1793;* after languishing through a few years with indifferent success, this Journal ceased. The next effort to supply the inhabitants with a medium of intelligence and of commercial and professional annunciation, was made with better success, by Mr. Thomas Croft, who issued the first number of his publication on the 7th of February, 1807, under the title of The Preston Journal; and this newspaper is still continued on the Saturday, by Mr. Isaac Wilcockson, under the altered title of The Preston Chronicle, which it took on the 5th of September, 1812. A newspaper, called The Preston Sentinel, was published by Mr. L. Clarke, from Saturday the 7th of April, 1821, to Saturday the 30th of March, 1822, when it was discontinued; but on the 1st of January, 1825, another newspaper was issued from the same office, called The Preston Pilot, which is published on the Saturday. No works of any great note have issued from the press in this town, though several men of literary eminence have received their education here.*

The town of Preston is deeply indebted to an alderman of this borough of the name of Shepherd, a physician of eminence, who died on the 4th of December, 1761, bequeathing, by will, "all and every of his "books, of what nature or kind soever, to his executors, in trust, for the "mayor and aldermen of the borough, or corporation of Preston;"^b and confiding to the said mayor and aldermen, the power to give to any person they should direct, the privilege to read or inspect such books. The testator further bequeathed £200, to be placed out at interest, and to be applied by the mayor and aldermen to the purpose of paying the librarian's salary; and the interest of the residue, being £1000, arising out of his personal estate, he directed to be applied by them in purchasing books for enlarging and increasing the library. Some years ago, a spacious library-room, for the reception of these books, with a private reading room attached, were erected adjoining the Free school in Preston, which is open, at stated hours, for the admission of persons by ticket, from the mayor or any of the aldermen. Important as was this munificent donation, it must be obvious that Dr. Shepherd's library, even if it was open without restriction, would by no means be equal to the literary wants of a town like Preston. Under the influence of this persuasion several meetings of gentlemen desirous of increasing the knowledge and elevating the pursuits of the inhabitants, were held in the early part of the present year, at which it was finally determined, that "a public library should be established in Preston, to be called the "Palatine," which should comprise a reading room, and a library of reference and circulation, and that the members should consist of proprietors and subscribers." Twenty-five proprietors at £20 each and about 70 annual subscribers at one guinea each, have already placed their names on the lists; officers are appointed; several books are purchased, and a room is engaged for their deposit, until a suitable building can be procured.

* It is due to Mr. Whittle to say, that we have been indebted to his History of Preston for a number of recent dates and facts, and that his is a very entertaining book, though somewhat deficient in arrangement and composition, and a little too laudatory in its style. We have also to make our acknowledgments to Mr. Isaac Wilcockson, whose publication on "the Guild Merchant of Preston, in 1829," merits the character it claims of an "authentic record."

A mechanics and apprentices' library has also been projected, but it is to be lamented that a sufficient number of those classes for whose immediate benefit such institutions are formed have not yet shown so strong a desire for the enjoyment of these benefits as to give a fair prospect of success to the undertaking.

There are here two good News-rooms, one called "The Coffee House," in Church-street, and the other "The Guild-hall News-room," adjoining the Town-hall. These institutions prefigure, with some accuracy, ancient and modern Preston; the Coffee-room is the resort of the gentry and men of leisure, and the Guild-hall-room affords its more ample accommodation to commercial gentlemen and tradesmen. The line of demarcation, however, becomes every year less definite, and the amalgamation of manufacturing opulence with family distinction, renders it very difficult, in many cases, to fix the boundary.

News Room.

It may not be improper to mention in this place, that Dr. Benjamin Franklin, the great transatlantic philosopher, twice visited Preston; first in the year 1771, and afterwards in 1775, and that he was closely connected with one of the most respectable families in the place, Mr. Richard Bache, having married his only daughter.

An Agricultural Society for the Hundreds of Amounderness, Leyland, and Blackburn, instituted in 1810, under the auspices of Sir Henry Philip Hoghton, Bart. and called the Preston Agricultural Society, has, by exciting a spirit of emulation, tended essentially to improve the agriculture of Mid-Lancashire.

The Places of Public Amusement in Preston are, The Theatre, at the bottom of Fishergate, built by subscription, in shares, previous to the guild of 1802, and opened with that jubilee; the Assembly-room, within the court of the Bull Inn, erected and fitted up at the cost of the Earl of Derby; and the cockpit, in the lower part of the same court, used at the races for the great mains. There are also billiard-rooms, and two public baths; one of them situated at the foot of a hill called the Spaw-brow, near the Marsh, and the other in a garden below Avenham. In the year 1726 races were established on Preston-moor, but they were discontinued in 1791; and on the 7th of August, in the year 1786, the races on the moor forming part of the ancient forest of Fulwood, and passing over a section of the road called Watling-street, were established by the Earl of Derby.^a These latter races are still continued, under the designation of Preston races, from which town the course is distant only two miles, though it is, by a strange anomaly, within the parish of Lancaster.^b Avenham walk,* situated on the summit of the hill which rises from the banks of the Ribble, is one of the places of public resort for pleasure and exercise, and a more delightful promenade the kingdom scarcely affords. Wood, water, hill, vale, extension, in short every thing that is necessary to adorn a prospect, unite here; and one thing more than is necessary, namely, the vicinity of a steam-engine, and an iron rail-way, erected in an evil hour, instead of an aqueduct over the Ribble, to connect the two branches of the Lancaster canal.

At all seasons of the year the river affords sources of amusement to the young men of Preston—fishing, bathing, skating, and sailing, each in its turn, are resorted to by the votaries of these healthful and innocent pleasures; but a melancholy event, arising out of the incautious use of one of them, is still fresh in the remembrance of the inhabitants, and ought to operate as a perpetual warning against persons venturing in boats upon the water without the requisite skill to manage them. On the 24th of April, in the year 1822, four fine youths, just rising into manhood, two of them sons of Nicholas Grimshaw, Esq. at that time mayor of the borough, and the other two the sons of Henry Hulton, Esq. treasurer of the county, and of Mr. James Kay, manufacturer, embarked in a small sail-boat on an excursion of pleasure; after amusing themselves for some time, a sudden gust of wind upset their boat in the middle of the river, a little below Penwortham Bridge, and they were all drowned before any assistance could be afforded to them. A plain marble monument in the choir of the parish church records this catastrophe, which involved the bereaved families in the deepest grief, and filled all classes of the inhabitants with commiseration.

phe.

The principal market-place of Preston consists of a spacious well-paved square, near the junction of all the main streets of the town, surrounded with handsome shops, and ornamented in the centre by an obelisk of clustered gothic pillars, at the top of which is placed, at an elevation of thirty-six feet from the street, a large glass vase, lighted by night with gas, which illuminates the whole area of about four thousand square yards. Within this square the principal market business of the town was formerly transacted, but since the opening of the new market, in Lune-street, on Wednesday, the 26th of August, 1824, the business has been a good deal divided, to the inconvenience, it is said, of both the seller and the buyer. The principal market day is on Saturday, but markets are also held both on Wednesday and Friday, for fish, butter, and vegetables. A regulation of rather a singular kind prevails here for the government of the markets, the object of which is to prevent regrating and forestalling. At nine o'clock in the morning, a bell rings to announce that the inhabitants of the borough may begin to make their purchases, and till the hour of ten no huckster or non-resident can, according to this regulation,† be allowed to buy any commodity in the market. At ten o'clock the restriction is relaxed, and from that hour all persons are permitted to buy and sell without limitation. There are four annual fairs here, namely, the great horse fair, in the week ending on the first Saturday after Epiphany, which is called "Great Saturday;" the spring fair, of three days, on the 27th, 28th, and 29th of March; the summer fair, of eight days, from the 26th of August to the 2nd of

From the first dawn of commerce in Lancashire to the present time, Port of Preston. Preston has ranked amongst the ports of this county: the official returns of the commerce of the county of Lancaster, contained at page 120 of the first volume of this work, serve to show that neither Preston, nor its dependent ports of Poulton, Lytham, and Freckleton, are at present in the enjoyment of any foreign commerce, except that a few vessels arrive yearly from Russia, and occasionally cargoes of timber come into the Ribble and the Wyer from Canada. The maritime trade of the ports of the Ribble is principally confined to the western coast of England, and to the ports of Ireland, Scotland, and Wales. The custom-house for these ports is at Preston, under the direction of a collector and comptroller, with tide waiters and other revenue officers both at Lytham and Poulton. With the aid of the spring tides, which flow higher than the bridge at Walton, vessels of one hundred and fifty tons burden can navigate the Ribble as far as the quay at Preston Marsh, but the sloops usually employed here do not in general exceed 60 or 70 tons burthen. It appears from the official returns for the port of Preston, between the 30th of September, 1823, and the 30th of September, 1824, now before us, that there are belonging to this port forty-five registered vessels, navigated by one hundred and forty persons, and of the aggregate burthen of 2574 tons. In the year ending the 5th of January, 1824, the number of vessels which entered the port amounted to 488, and the number that cleared outwards to 313.† The Ribble is capable of much improvement, and considerable advantage would arise from the employment of steam vessels to ply daily, during the season, between this place and Lytham and Southport, which might also receive and land passengers at the Naize Point, and at Hesketh Bank.^a

In the year 1806, an act of parliament was passed,^b under the authority of which certain tonnage rates have been levied ever since, by "the company of proprietors of the undertaking for the improvement of the navigation of the river Ribble," but nothing has been done towards the improvement of the navigation, except the fixing of a few buoys at the entrance of the channel, elevating a wooden perch about ten feet high, and setting up a pole near the mill at Lytham, upon which an oil lamp is occasionally hoisted. It requires little skill in nautical affairs, or in modern engineering, to see that this river is capable of great improvement, and that by the combined efforts of the steam dredging machine,^c and a judicious system of embankment, the channel might be confined and deepened, so as to admit vessels capable of navigating the Atlantic ocean up to the quay at Preston Marsh. The saving of land by these operations, added to the existing rates, would probably defray the expense, exclusive of the advantage to be gained from an increase of trade in the river. Had the execution of the measure of improving the navigation been confided to the commercial men with whom the design originated, great public benefit would have been the result; but it unfortunately passed into the hands of the principal land owners on the opposite sides of the river, who employ themselves in throwing out wears and embankments at various places between Penwortham Bridge and the Naize Point, and thus puzzle their own heads, and those of their farming stewards, by torturing the poor unfortunate river, which occasionally revenges itself by sweeping away some acres of their fine alluvial soil. And thus it must proceed, till some practical engineer of comprehensive mind be called in, to lay down a uniform and consistent plan, the expense of which would readily be advanced by the merchants of Preston, if they were allowed to undertake the execution of the works. The example of the Clyde is before them, and it is not improbable that Preston, Freckleton, and Lytham, might be made to rival Glasgow, Port Glasgow, and Grenock, as they are similarly situated with respect to each other. But if the land owners and "the company of proprietors" continue blind to their own interest, and to the interests of the community, it is not improbable that the principal part of the coasting trade, and that now carried on between Preston and Ireland, which employs upwards of forty vessels, averaging about seventy tons each, will be transferred to Glasson Dock, near Lancaster, from whence to the Lancaster canal, at Galgate, a navigable communication is now making, and so far advanced that it will be opened in the course of the present year.*

Much unnecessary danger has arisen to vessels navigating this coast, from the want of a light-house and the erection of some distinctive marks, at the entrance into the Ribble, by which sea-faring men might be able instantly to distinguish between this estuary and that of the Mersey; and it is no uncommon thing for ships bound to Liverpool, which have not taken a pilot on board at the Ormshead, to overshoot the Mersey, when the wind blows fresh from the south, and to sail by mistake up the Ribble. These dangerous mistakes are not to be wondered at, when it is considered that there is not any chart of the Irish Channel that has the least pretensions to accuracy. It is true, that a trigonometrical survey is making by the Board of Ordnance, not only of this but of other parts of England, but though that survey has now been in hand nearly thirty years, it has not yet reached Lancashire, at least the result of the surveyor's labours here is not published. The precautionary measures here recommended should be pressed unceasingly by the undertakers for improving the navigation of the Ribble,^b and by the authorities of the county of Lancaster, upon that department of his majesty's government to whom it belongs, to provide for the safety of mariners, and to watch over the commercial interests of the country.†

Returning from this digression, it may be observed, that Preston, in

* To facilitate the communication between the Ribble and the town of Preston, a company of merchants have obtained a lease from the corporation of a portion of waste lands, at the southern point of the marsh, and have purchased from individuals certain lands adjoining, with the intention of excavating a dock and erecting a new quay, which is to communicate with a spacious road now making through Friar's-lane; and the works will be so constructed, that, in the event of a canal being cut from the Ribble to the basin of the Lancaster Canal, a distance of only 600 yards, the vessels may sail through the new dock.

† The course of the water in the bed of the Ribble is said to be subject to preternatural interruptions; in the annual Register for 1774, it is recorded, that on the 24th of December, in that year, "the River Ribble stood still, and for the length of three miles there was no water except in deep places;" but adds the Chronicle, "in about five hours it came down with a strong current and continued to run as usual." A more addition to its river, enjoys the advantage of a medium of inland navigation afforded by the Lancaster Canal, which will, when completed, open a line of water communication not only between the lime-stone and the coal districts, but also with all the principal trading counties of the kingdom. One important branch of this canal remains yet to be executed, namely, to sweep away the rail-road from the bason at Preston to Clayton-green, and to make the canal continuous in its whole line; when that work is accomplished, and it is manifestly the interest of the canal proprietors to set about it forthwith, an additional source of wealth will open upon this highly-favoured town. In 1794, the late Mr. Rennie made an estimate of the cost of a stone aqueduct over the Ribble, to consist of three arches of 116 feet span each, with an embankment to the full height of the Lancaster level, which together amounted to 94,979*l.*; and Messrs. Jessop and Rennie by their joint report of 1801, recommended that plan to be carried into effect, which they conceived might be accomplished for less than Mr. Rennie's estimate, but the funds were not then forthcoming, and the railway was adopted as a temporary expedient. The consequence has been, that, in addition to the loss, inconvenience, and delay of unloading and re-loading, coal and lime, the carriage of corn and other agricultural produce, as well as of iron work, cotton wool, manufactured goods, and general merchandise is nearly, if not altogether, lost to this canal company, and the advantage of the inland navigation so far lost to the public.

There is in the Ribble a very ancient Fishery belonging to the Fishery borough of Preston within the boundary of its jurisdiction. This river abounds with salmon, of delicious flavour, smelts, plaise, and eels; and every day during the season it affords its supplies. Preston market is also abundantly supplied with fish from Lytham, North Meols and Heysham, and with shell-fish from the sands of the Ribble, Wyre, Lune, Leven, and Duddon. Sometimes herrings and other fish are brought from the Isle of Man; it is, however, a little extraordinary that the direct supply from this quarter is not more abundant, as the towns of Preston, Chorley, and Blackburn, with their populous neighbourhoods, would afford excellent markets for the Manx Fishers, did not a superstitious horror of some imaginary dangers in the navigation of the Ribble disincline them to visit this part of the coast. The quantity of salmon derived from the estuaries of the rivers of Lancashire might be greatly inclosed, if the laws relating to the fisheries were revised, and the stake net, recently adopted in Scotland, made legal.*

Preston is approached from the south by Walton bridge, and from Bridges: the west by Penworthan bridge, both over the Ribble, at a distance of a mile and a half from each other. The ancient County bridge, called Ribble bridge, stood at Walton, about fifty yards below the present site, but owing to its "decayed and dangerous state"^a it was taken down in 1782, and the present handsome, and substantial structure of three arches erected in its stead. Penworthan bridge is not a county bridge, but was built in the year 1759, under the authority of an act of parliament, still in force, which authorizes the commissioners to levy a toll for its repairs. This toll, when enforced, extends to foot passengers as well as to horses and carriages, with the exception of the freemen of the borough of Preston who are exempt. This edifice stands on the site of an ancient bridge, which fell down in the year 1759, and had nearly buried in its ruins the Rev. Randle Andrews, the vicar of Preston, who had just passed over it. From a spirit of misplaced economy, the new bridge instead of passing over the river in a direct line from Fishergate-lane to the foot of Penwortham brow, was placed at a distance of nearly half a mile up the river, and stands directly at right angles to the principal roads; the consequence is, that every person travelling that way towards Liverpool is thrown nearly a mile out of his road, and in rainy seasons, and when high tides prevail the approaches are frequently flooded, and rendered impassable.* A temporary wooden bridge has just been erected over the Ribble, at Brockholes, on the line of the new road from Preston to Blackburn.

* Since this passage was written, a bill has been introduced into parliament "for the more effectual preservation and increase of the breed of salmon throughout Great Britain and Ireland," by which, amongst a number of other salutary provisions, the size of the meshes is placed under new regulations.

Situation.

The situation chosen by our remote ancestors for the erection of Priest's Town, evinces the discriminating eye of a priest, and shows that, whether the monastic orders selected a site for an abbey or for a city, they were equally felicitous in their choice. Placed at a convenient distance from the sea, upon the elevated banks of one of the first rivers in England, with a mild climate, and a dry soil, and commanding a rich assemblage of picturesque views, in one of the most interesting portions of Ribblesdale, the spirit of St. Wilfrid himself, the most accomplished ecclesiastic of his age, must have animated the mind that fixed upon this spot; and the structure of the town, its well-built houses, spacious streets, and handsome approaches, are in unison with the taste of the founder. For many ages Preston took the lead of all the towns of the county, as the resort and residence of persons of birth and polished manners, and the number of professional gentlemen attached to its various courts have always given to this place a character of superior intelligence. A material change has taken place in some of these respects within the last forty years, by the introduction of the manufactures, and the claims of gentility have been materially abated by the presence of an active and enterprising industry, which has served to place Preston more on a level than it formerly stood with the larger towns of the county.

Manners and Morals.

* See Head of this History.

In the year 1780 the number of inhabitants in this place did not exceed 6,000; twenty years afterwards they were swelled to nearly 12,000, and the scale of increase has proceeded in a geometrical progression, till in 1821, they amounted to upwards of 24,000,^a and are now, (May, 1825) upwards of 30,000. This is a ratio of increase scarcely to be equalled even in this county, where men multiply faster than in any other portion of the kingdom. In the notes on the census published by the House of Commons, in 1821, it is stated, that the extension of trade is the cause of these augmented numbers; but the question arises, to what is this extension of trade owing, seeing that Preston is at a distance from the mines which supply the manufactories with fuel, and that no other town in the county has been able to flourish to any great extent, as a manufacturing place under the same disadvantage? A combination of causes have doubtless conspired to produce this effect, but the principal are probably to be found in the central situation of the town, in the united advantages of river and canal navigations; and in the skill, capital, and enterprise of the principal manufacturers.

* This bridge has begun to exhibit symptoms of decay in the foundations of the piers, and is inconveniently narrow and dangerous from the want of foot paths.

ROCHDALE.

ROCHDALE is a market town and parish, in the hundred of Salford, in the deanery of Manchester, and in the archdeaconry of Chester; 5 miles N.N.E. of Middleton, 7 miles N.N.W. of Oldham, 7 miles E.N.E. of Bury, 11 miles N.N.E. of Manchester, and 195 miles from London. This parish, exclusive of Saddleworth, contains nine townships, including three chapelries, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821; and the estimated annual rental of all the lands, messuages, and other buildings of each township in the parish.

There is an ancient division of this parish, called HUNDERSFIELD Divisions, or HONORSFIELD, which comprehends the townships of Wuerdale and Wardle, Wardleworth, Blatchinworth, Calderbrook, Todmorden, and Walsden. The chapelry of Saddleworth is also in the parish of Rochdale, and subject to the ecclesiastical patronage and jurisdiction of the vicar, but a great proportion of that extensive district is in Yorkshire, and in the parliamentary census the number of inhabitants in Saddleworth is returned in the West-Riding of that county, thus—"Rochdale, (part of parish,) Saddleworth with Quick chapelry—number of inhabitants, 13,902: the entire parish of Rochdale contains 61,011 inhabitants."

Rochdale having no township bearing its own name, the town is composed of a part of three townships, namely, Castleton, or Old Town, to the south; Spotland, to the north-west; and Wardleworth to the north-east; as defined on the plan engraved from the survey made for this work.

* Anciently, the chapelry of Butterworth, now the chapelry of Milnrow, in the township of Butterworth.

- Name. The name of this place is doubtless derived from the Roach River, on the banks of which it stands; in the Domesday survey it is called Recedham, and it was anciently a privileged place, held as a manor by one of the numerous thanes of Salford hundred, called Gamel.^a The privileges were probably conferred by the castle, which stood in Castle-ton. The orthography of the name has varied; anciently it was called Rached; afterwards Rachdale, and Rochdale is a modern name, not even so remote as the period of the Commonwealth. The castle which gave name to Castleton, and of which the keep still remains, was one of the twelve Saxon castles of Lancashire, but, as it is not mentioned in the Domesday survey, except by the exemption it then had from duties, the probability is that it had not outlived the destructive contests between the Saxons and the Danes, in the 10th and 11th centuries.* One of the great Roman Roads, in its course from Manchester into Yorkshire, by the way of Littleborough, passes near to Rochdale,^b and towards the close of the last century a number of Roman coins, some of them as early as Claudius, were dug up at Castlemeor, on the line of this iter. About two miles to the north-east, on the same line, which is pretty nearly that taken by the Rochdale canal, the right arm of a silver statue of Victory was discovered in the year 1793, ten inches in length and weighing nearly six ounces: the hand is a cast, and solid, but the arm is hollow. About the wrist there is a loose Armilla, and another united to the arm above the elbow, to the former of which is appended a plate of silver, with this inscription formed by the pointed stroke of a drill:—VICTORIAE LEG VI VIC VAL RVFUS VSLM. Dr. Whitaker conjectures, with much probability, that this has been the arm of a votive statue of Valerius Rufus, broken off and lost by the Roman army in one of their marches from York to Manchester, where the altar of Fortune proves them to have been stationed.

- Charters, &c. Coming down to later times, we find that the parish of Rochdale formed a part of the great fee of Clitheroe, and a certificate under the hand and seal of the treasurer and chancellor of Richard I. in virtue of an inquisition taken at Lancaster, in the 8th year of the reign of that monarch, recognizes the existence of a charter granted to the De Lacys, lords of the fee, for holding a market in their town of "Rotchdale;"¹² and another charter granted 33d Henry III. to Edmund de Laey, chamberlain of the king, confirms the grant for holding a market and fair in the manor of "Rachedall." In 1 Edward I. Henry de Lacy conferred the office of serjeant of this market upon Edward de Balshagh. A Latin M.S. in Dodsworth's Collection,^c sans date, but written after the death of Edmund Crouchback, the youngest son of Henry III. describes the old town as the site of a castle; and in another ancient M.S. written in the reign of Edward III. the district is thus described:—Rachedale, of old called Racheham, is a certain district, more than xii. miles long and more than x. miles broad; it comprehends four rich villages, and many hamlets, with many great wastes in the said villages and hamlets, which are Honorisfield, (now called Hundersfield,) Spoddenland, (now called Spotland,) Buckworth, (now called Butterworth,) and Castleton. - Descrip- tion.

M.S. already quoted from Dodsworth's Collection is more comprehensive in its details, and, beginning at the north-eastern extremity of the present parish, says—"Todmorden, with a great waste, is held of William de Haworth;* William holds it of Thomas de Sayville, and Thomas of our lord the king; and the feoffees are as of the demesne of Lincoln, which indeed held this place in the time of Edmund Earl of Lancaster, who held of the king. Walsden, with a great waste, holds of Robert Holt, and by him of Thomas Sayville. Honorisfield, Wardhull, Wordleworth, Spotland, Whyteworth, Healy, Chadwycke, Holynworke, Butterworth, Clegg, Newbolde and Burdshill (now called Buersal.) Castleton hamlet is the place called Castle-hill, and was formerly, as is believed, the site of a castle, and had twelve burgesses, but is now in decay." In the spirit-stirring times of Queen Elizabeth, much of the waste land in the neighbourhood of Rochdale was reclaimed, and it is recorded, that in the year 1560, Sir John Byron enclosed 260 acres of land on Beurdsell-moor, and that Charles Holt, Esq. enclosed two-thirds of the waste of Castleton-common.†

At the period of the Domesday survey, there was no Church at Church. Rochdale; but Adam de Spotland, about 100 years after that time, gave, "for the fear of God, and the salvation of his immortal soul, and those of his wife, and ancestors and successors, to God, St. Mary, and to all the Saints, and to St. Chadde (Chad,) and the Church of Rach, three acres of land in Woodland-wood, with the houses thereon standing, and two acres at Donymgbothe, and one at Chadwicke, with right of pasture in the vale of the Spod." The same benefactor, feeling probably that he had driven a hard bargain with heaven, for so much retrospective and prospective salvation, further granted six acres of land in Spotland to God and St. Chad, of Rachetham—thus proving that a church had risen up here. At this time Rochdale church was dependent upon the Deans of Whalley, but the Abbey of Stanlaw was held in high estimation by the principal families in Rochdale, and Andrew, son of Alan de Morland, bequeathed all his lands in the village of Spotland "to God, the blessed Mary, and the Monks of Stanlaw, for ever to hold the said lands on a safe tenure." When the Monastery of Stanlaw, which had nearly absorbed all the land of this township, was superseded by Whalley Abbey, in 1296, the possessions in the parish of Rochdale were transferred to the latter house, and from that time to the reformation, the church remained dependent upon Whalley. On the dissolution of the monasteries, the church lands of Spotland were granted to Sir Thomas Holt, of Gristlehurst, in the parish of Middleton, and afterwards sold by Thomas Posthumus Holt to various purchasers. Henry VIII. partly in exchange for the manor park of Mayfield, and partly as a matter of royal bounty, gave the rectorial tithes of Rochdale, Whalley, and Blackburn to Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury; and from that time to the early part of the present century, they have been vested in the primate for the time being, but, in the year 1813, they were sold by the Archbishop, under the authority of an act of parliament, and principally purchased by the owners of the titheable estates for the sum of £63,426.

† Nuttall's M.S.

The living of Rochdale is a vicarage in the gift of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Rev. Wm. Robert Hay, rector of Ackworth, is the incumbent. In the Liber Regis the annual revenue of this vicarage is valued at only 11*l.* 4*s.* 9½*d.* but its actual value at present exceeds two thousand pounds a year, and it has the reputation of being the richest vicarial benefice in the kingdom. The glebe land extends more than a mile along the left bank of the Roach; it consists of upwards of 200 acres, on which have been erected a great number of houses and other buildings, under the authority of an act of parliament, authorising the vicar of Rochdale to grant leases for 99 years. The patronage of the living of Rochdale is also considerable, comprehending the churches of St. Mary* and St. James†, in Rochdale, the chapels of Saddleworth, Friernmeer,‡ Dobcross,§ and Lidyate,|| in Saddleworth; and Littlebro', Milnrow, and Todmorden, in the Lancashire part of the parish. The parish church, which is a handsome Gothic building, with a square tower, exhibits indications of considerable antiquity. The columns and arches resemble those in the choir of the cathedral of Canterbury, and are as ancient as the original structure. The choir, with its richly ramified windows, is of the age of Edward III. and perhaps a little earlier, and the architecture of the steeple is about the period of the reformation. This edifice is dedicated to St. Chad, and commands, from its elevated situation, a fine view, stretching beyond its own ample possessions along the densely inhabited district of the vale of Roach. A new cemetery, planted round with elms, and intersected with gravel walks, was added to the burial ground of this church in 1813, during the incumbency of the late Rev. Thomas Drake, D.D. in which his parishioners have erected an elegant monument, as a tribute of veneration and regard to the memory of a beloved pastor, who, after having for nine and twenty years faithfully discharged the duties of his ministerial office as vicar of this parish, died on the 19th of September, 1819.

In the parish of Rochdale, as in almost all the other parishes of Lancashire, the rise of dissenters is to be dated from the passing of the act of uniformity in the reign of Charles II.^b On this occasion, the Rev. Robert Bath, vicar of Rochdale, a nephew by marriage of Archbishop Laud, was ejected from the church, when, after holding his living 30 years, he retired from the lofty vicarage to an humble cottage, at Deepleech, in Castleton, and frequently preached to crowded congregations, up to the period of his death, which took place eleven years after his expulsion. This divine was a member of the second presbyterial classis in the time of the commonwealth, and represented the parish of Rochdale, along with Edward Butterworth, Esq. of Belfield, and several other laymen of the parish.^c The Rev. Zachariah Taylor was the curate of Mr. Bath, and was ejected in 1662, at the same time as his vicar. He afterwards taught a school, first at Rochdale, and then at Bolton, being the first master of the school erected there by Mr. Robert Lever, citizen and clothier of London; from thence he removed to the Free Grammar-school at Kirkham in the Fylde, where he died in 1692. This learned divine was father of Mr. Zachariah Taylor, who wrote the Lancashire Levite.^e

From the parliamentary inquisition, made in the year 1650, it appears that the value of the glebe land, &c. in Rochdale was then but 160*l.* per annum, and the tithes of Castleton worth 50*l.*; and that Hundersfield had at that time two chapels, namely, Littleborough and Todmorden, both of which the commissioners recommended should be made parish churches. The tithes of Hundersfield were then worth 100*l.* a year, out of which Mr. Thomas Bradshaw, the minister of Littleborough, had his maintenance, and Mr. Francis Core, the minister of Todmorden, "a well qualified minister, but of scandalous life and conversation," had 20*l.* a year, and a house worth 6*s.* 8*d.* per annum. In Spotland there was one chapel called Whitworth, the great tithes attached to which were worth about 26*l.* per annum, independent of the sequestered tithes, which were worth about 65*l.* per annum. In Butterworth, there was one chapel called Milnrow; the minister, Mr. John Pollett, received 50*l.* out of the sequestered tithes, together with 4*l.* 10*s.* given out of the same by the late Sir John Byron; and Butterworth was fit to be made a parish, the value of the tithes being 66*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

There are at present in the town of Rochdale eight places of worship Chapels. dedicated to the use of dissenters, namely, the Presbyterian Chapel in Blackwater-street;* the Baptist Chapels, in the Town Meadows,† and in the North-street;‡ the Methodist Meeting-house, in Union-street;§ the Independent Chapel, in High-street;|| St. Stephen's Church, in St. Stephen's-street, used by the Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion;¶ the Friends' Meeting-house, in Garden-lane; the Unitarian Chapel, at the top of St. Mary's gate;†† and the Chapel of the New Methodist Connexion, called Zion Chapel, in College-street.‡‡ In addition to which places of worship the Roman Catholics assemble for divine service in a room over a dwelling-house at the top of Blackwater-street; and the Primitive Methodists have a room appropriated to the same purpose in Packer-meadow.

It has already been seen that anciently Rochdale was a part of the great fee of Clitheroe, under the Lacys, by whom it was granted in the 12th century to the Ellands, and from them passed to the Saviles.^a In 39 Eliz. Sir John Biron, lord of the manor of Clayton, held the manor of Rochdale. Subsequently it was held by the Ramsays, by grant, at the request of John, Earl of Holderness, but in 13 Charles I. it was re-conveyed to Sir John Biron, knight. The Byron family is more ancient than the conquest. Gospatrick held lands of Erneis de Buron, in the county of York, as appears from Domesday survey. The Burons held also possessions at that time in the counties of Nottingham, Derby, and Leicester. But it was not till towards the end of the 12th century that they became connected with the county of Lancaster, when Robert de Byron having married Cecilia Clayton, the daughter and heir of the lord of Clayton, in the hundred of Salford, became possessed of the manor, and seated at the Hall. Failsworth, and the whole township of Droylesden, were soon after added to their Lancashire estates. Sir John de Byron, in the reign of Edward I. on his marriage with the Lady Joan, daughter of Sir Baldwin Teutonic, or Tyas, relict of Sir Robert Hol-land, knight, became possessed of lands in Butterworth; and by a charter from Edward II. dated at York, in the first year of his reign, Sir Richard de Byron had grants to him and his heirs, of free warren over all their demesne lands in Clayton. the county of Lancaster. Sir John Byron fought in the battle of Bosworth Field, on the side of Henry VII. and was knighted on the field. In the reign of Henry VIII. on the dissolution of the monasteries, the priory of Newstead Abbey was granted to Sir John Byron; and this ancient religious house continued the principal seat of the Byrons till it was sold in the year 1823, by the late Lord Byron, to James Dearden, Esq. of Rochdale. Sir Nicholas Byron distinguished himself in the civil wars between Charles I. and his parliament, and in consequence of his zeal in the royal cause, his manor of Rochdale was sequestered and held for several years by Sir Thomas Alcock. After the restoration, it reverted to the Byron family. During these wars Sir John Byron was created a peer of the realm,^a by the style and title of Baron Byron, of Rochdale, in the county of Lancaster. The devotion of this noble baron to the cause of the king was so conspicuous, that himself and the Earl of Derby were two of the seven persons excepted from the clemency of the government in the act of oblivion passed by parliament on the execution of the unfortunate Charles.^b This nobleman fought with Duke Hamilton against Oliver Cromwell, on the 16th of August, 1648, in the disastrous battle of Preston. His Lordship had not the consolation to live to see the restoration of the Stuarts, but, dying without issue, in 1652, was succeeded by his brother Richard, the second lord; who was succeeded by his eldest son William, in 1679; whose successor, in 1695, was his son William; who was succeeded, in 1736, by his son William, the fifth Lord Byron. This nobleman had the misfortune to kill William Chaworth, Esq. in a duel, on the 28th of January, 1765, under circumstances which led to his impeachment on a charge of murder, before the house of peers, in Westminster-hall, on the 16th of April following; the result of the trial was, that he was found guilty of manslaughter, upon which he claimed the benefit of the statute of Edward VI. and was discharged.* His lordship survived his impeachment 33 years, and died on the 19th of May, 1798, without issue. Admiral John Byron, the brother of this Baron, sailed in his youth with Commodore Anson, the circumnavigator, and was cast away on an uninhabited island in the Pacific Ocean, where, for five years, he endured hardships almost unexampled, except in the pages of romance. On his return to England he distinguished himself in his profession, and attained the rank of Vice-admiral, leaving, at his death, which took place in 1786, two sons, John and George Anson. John married Catharine Gordon, lineally descended from the Earl of Huntley and the Princess Jane Stuart; the issue of this marriage was George Gordon, the late Lord Byron, the illustrious poet, who died of a fever at Missolonghi, on

* A dispute had arisen at a tavern dinner between Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth, upon that fruitful subject of quarrel and litigation—the preservation of game. There were no witnesses of the duel; but the account given of it by the dying man was this: The altercation in the club-room had subsided, and seemed scarcely to be remembered by either party, but when Mr. Chaworth was going down stairs, about an hour afterwards, Lord Byron called him aside, and said he wished to speak to him, upon which they went into an unoccupied room together, and, while Mr. Chaworth stepped towards the door to shut it, Lord Byron bid him draw. On turning round to obey this command, he saw his lordship's sword half out of the scabbard, upon which he whipped out his own sword as quick as possible to give his lordship the point, and having made a lunge at him, he asked how Lord Byron was, whether he was mortally wounded, as he thought he was about the breast? His lordship, without making any reply, shortened his sword, and ran his antagonist through the body, thereby inflicting a mortal wound, of which he died the next morning.

the 19th of April, 1824, lamented by the whole Greek nation, to whose glorious cause he had devoted his fortune, his talents, and his life. His lordship having left an only daughter (without male issue) by his lady Anne Isabella, daughter of Sir Ralph Noel, (late Milbank) Bart. was succeeded in his title by his cousin George Anson, the present Baron Byron, of Rochdale. In the year 1823, the late Lord Byron sold the manor and estate of Rochdale to James Dearden, Esq. by whom they are now possessed, after having been in the noble family of Byron for nearly three centuries. These manorial rights extend over 45,000 acres of land, with the privilege of court leet and court baron in all the townships of the parish, including Saddleworth. Present Lord.

The parish of Rochdale has contributed its full share to the gentry of Lancashire, and, in addition to the Ellands, the Cleggs, and the Savilles in the early period of its history, we have the names of Butterworth, of Butterworth; Buckley, of Buckley; Chadwick, of Healy; Halliwell, of Pike-House; Wolstenholme, of Wolstenholme; Hamer, of Hamer; Healy, of Healy; and the Holts, of Butterworth, of Castle-ton (Bolderstone), of Stubley, and of Whitwell; the Oakdons, of Healy and Butterworth; and the Radcliffes, of Todmorden; all which families are extinct or departed; leaving only of the ancient gentry of the parish, now resident, the Crossleys, of Scaitcliffe;* and the Entwistles, of Foxholes. The Byrons, though large proprietors in the hundred of Salford, have resided chiefly at Newstead Abbey ever since the Reformation. Gentry of the Parish.

Originally the market at Rochdale was held on Tuesday, but it is now held at the beginning and end of every week, namely, on Monday and Saturday, the former principally for the sale of wool, woollens, oil, dyewares, and grain, and the latter for shambles meat, vegetables, &c. The fairs, of which there are three annually, are held on the 14th of May on Whit-Tuesday, and on the 7th of November, all of them for cattle, horses, and pedlery. Market and Fairs.

There are here several public schools, of which the Free Grammar School, from its antiquity, claims the precedence. This institution was founded by Dr. Matthew Parker, the second Protestant Archbishop of Canterbury, in the 7th of Elizabeth, on a site near the church, presented by the Rev. Richard Midgley, vicar of the parish. The endowment of Rochdale Grammar School, amounting to seventeen pounds a year, like those of several other free schools in the county of Lancaster, was fixed, instead of being contingent upon the value of corn or of land, and the stipend of the master was made payable out of the archbishop's tithes, of which Sir John Byron and his son were at that time the lessees. When the tithes were sold in 1813, the purchasers of the Castleton portion of them were made liable to this annual payment. The school is open to all the boys of the parish; but, owing to the limited income, a very restricted construction is put upon the will of the founder. Every boy is required to pay six guineas a year for tuition, without any extra charge for Latin, which in that sense, and in no other, is free. The number of pupils is generally about forty-five. This school has no direct presentations to the Universities; but Dr. Samuel Radcliffe, in the year 1648, bequeathed forty pounds a year in lands, in

The original endowment provides two pounds a-year for an usher, equal in value to about forty pounds of our money, making the original stipend of the head-master, at the time it was fixed, equal to one hundred and fifty pounds^b in the present day, upon the same scale of increase.

In the year 1769, Mrs. Jane Hardman, of this place, an opulent manufacturer, endowed the school in the Vicar's Moss with two small estates, of the value of forty pounds a year, which endowment has improved in the hands of the trustees so much as to yield an income of one hundred pounds a year, with which sum forty boys and twenty girls are educated. The National School was erected in 1804, by subscription, at a cost of 1287*l.* and in this institution instruction is at present afforded (June, 1825) to 173 children, of whom 107 are boys, and 66 girls.

There are also Sunday schools attached to each of the different places of religious worship, which afford instruction to nearly four thousand children, namely:—Church, 500; Methodists, 1000; Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion, 700; Independents, 500; Methodist New Connexion, 300; Baptists (Town Meadows), 240; Unitarians, 200; Primitive Methodists, 200; Presbyterians, 80.

Certain pious benefactors have, at various times, left donations to the poor of Rochdale, and in the 26th year of his late Majesty's reign, a return was made of them (conformable to the provisions of the 26th George III.), of which return the following is the substance:—

In 1712, James Holt left the interest of £100 (now in land), to teach six poor boys:

In 1718, Dorothy Holt left the interest of £120. for books of devotion, and for teaching and clothing six poor girls.

In 1740, Samuel Taylor & Robert Jaques left £6 a-year for teaching 20 poor children.

The other charitable institutions are, the "Rochdale Branch Bible Society,"^c and the "Rochdale Ladies' Bible Association;"^d the "Ladies' Charity,"^e for supplying poor married women with linen during their confinement in child-birth, and for defraying the charge of the accoucheur. The produce of the rents of the King's Head and Red Lion Inn, is appropriated to the purpose of purchasing linen cloth, which is distributed every Christmas day to the necessitous poor, and a guinea is paid annually out of this charity to the clergyman of Todmorden, for preaching a sermon on New Year's Day.

Places of Amusement. The places of public amusement in Rochdale are a Play House, and two Assembly Rooms, with two Billiard Rooms.

The mercantile class, and the manufacturers of Rochdale, have attained to a considerable degree of opulence, the appropriate reward of judicious enterprise, persevering industry, and commercial integrity. The manufactures of this place are more famed for their worth and durability than for their show or splendour. They consist principally of baize, flannels, coatings, and broad cloth, in woollens; and of calicoes and strong goods, in cottons; but the woollen fabrics form the staple trade of this frontier parish. As early as the time of Queen Elizabeth, Rochdale was famous for its manufactures, and the queen's Aulneger had a deputy here, for the stamping of woollen cloth, under the authority of the act passed in the 8th year of her Majesty's reign. The minerals of the parish, consisting of coal, stone, and slate, contribute essentially to the prosperity of the place; and the canal navigation, which opens a water communication between the eastern and the western seas, as well as with the principal seats of trade in the counties of York and Lancaster,^a serves to place the trade of Rochdale on a footing of equality with the most favoured towns of these great manufacturing counties.

Benefit Societies have, almost from their earliest institution, prevailed in this place, and for such of the "industrious classes" of society as have the power and the inclination to make a still further provision for sickness and old age, a Savings' Bank was established in Rochdale, on the 1st of January, 1818, in which six hundred and forty-two depositors had invested, on the 31st of December, 1824, the sum of £16,645.

The register of the parish church exhibits strong evidence that the population of Rochdale was quadrupled during the last century,* and at the present rate of increase, as stated at the head of this chapter, the probability is, that at the end of the present century the numbers will be four times as many as they were at the beginning of it. John Hampson, clerk of the parish of Rochdale, in an issue between Archbishop Parker and Sir John Bird, Knight, 3rd Elizabeth, deposed that there were then "5000 houseing people" in this parish, by which term Dr. Whitaker imagines that communicants are meant, and thence infers that there must have been 10,000 inhabitants at least. This conjecture, or rather double supposition, for both the clerk and the doctor must speak without any specific datum, may not be very remote from the truth, especially as Saddleworth comes into the calculation, but the probability, we think, is, that the numbers did not at that time exceed 8000; at present they may be estimated at 64,000, making the increase during nearly three centuries eight-fold.

lation.

Formerly the bread chiefly eaten by the labouring classes in this parish was oat cake, and the same kind of food was in pretty general use in the manufacturing parts of Yorkshire. In the districts where this peculiarity prevailed, the people were proud of the distinction, and a regiment of soldiers, raised in the east of Lancashire and the west of Yorkshire, at the beginning of the last war, took the name of the "Haver Cake Lads," assuming as their badge an Oat Cake, which was placed for the purpose of attraction on the point of the recruiting serjeant's sword. Oat bread is still eaten here, and in other parts of Lancashire, chiefly in the mountainous regions, but its use is by no means so general as it was half a century ago.

Tim Bobbins.

John Collier, a man of original genius, and the deservedly popular author of "The Lancashire Dialect," resided for fifty-seven years at Miln-row, in the township of Butterworth, in the humble capacity of a village schoolmaster, and is identified with the parish of Rochdale. His biographers are divided as to the place of his birth, but it was doubtless at Urmston, in the parish of Flixton,* as is proved by the attested baptismal register in the margin.* His father was a clergyman of the Established Church, and our author was destined for the same profession, had not the infirmities of his parent, who became blind in the meridian of life, obliged him to apprentice his son John to a Dutch loom-weaver, on Newton-moor, in the parish of Mottram. "Hating slavery," says he, "in all its steps, I, by Divine providence (preferring my old scull cap to mitres) commenced schoolmaster at Milnrow, on the 19th of November, 1729, first as an assistant, and afterwards as the principal." Here he lived all his future life, with the exception of about a year which he spent in Yorkshire, as a clerk in the counting-house of Mr. Richard Hill, of Kebroyd.

Tim Bobbin, by which name he wished to be called, was a poet, a musician, and a painter, but it was chiefly as a prose writer, and a caricaturist, that he excelled. His pictures procured him both fame and profit, chiefly for their broad humour, and the striking delineation of the passions; but his "Dialogue between Tummus O'Williams, O'Margit O'Roaph's, and Meary O'Dick's, O'Tummy O'Peggy's" was his chef d'œuvre. This production exhibits with inimitable drollery the style and manners of a native swain in the parish of the author's adoption, and serves, unwittingly, to show that the best existing model of the language of our Saxon ancestors is to be found in the vulgar tongue of the county of Lancaster. Mr. Collier closed a merry life at the advanced age of 77 years, on the 14th of July, 1786, by writing in the hour of death, the following characteristic epitaph upon himself, and his "Crooked rib," as he was wont to call his wife :—

Here lies John and with him Mary,
Cheek by jowl and never vary;
No wonder they so well agree,
John wants no punch and Moll no tea.

Butterworth.

The township of Butterworth, one of the principal divisions of the parish of Rochdale, has afforded possessions in successive ages to the Teutonicks, the Butterworths, the Hollands, the Ellands, and the Byrons. Belfield house constituted part of the inheritance of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, till the dissolution of that order, when it passed to the Butterworths, and afterwards to a younger branch of the Townleys, of Royle, by which family it is still possessed. Clegg hall, in this township, the early residence of the ancient family of the Cleggs, and the subsequent possession of the Ashtons, still retains its local name. The chapel of Milnrow was founded not long before the dissolution of Chuntries, and sold to the principal inhabitants of the township, by Richard Bold, and other commissioners, for divine service, in the reign of Edward VI.^a This chapel, after standing two hundred and fifty years, was re-built at the end of the last century, and the new erection was consecrated by the Bishop of Chester, in 1799.

* "John Collier, son of John Collier, of Urmston, baptized January the 8th, 1709." "I hereby certify this to be a true extract from the parish register of Flixton, as witness my hand, this 30th day of November, 1824, THOMAS HARPER, parish clerk."

Foxholes, the seat of the Entwises, is in the township of Wardleworth. Sir Bertyne Entwistle, Viscount and Baron of Bryboke, in Normandy, one of the early ancestors of this family, distinguished himself in the battle of Agincourt; and in the following reign fought and fell in the battle of St. Alban's, while maintaining the cause of the House of Lancaster. It appears from the Familia Lancastriensis^b MS. in the possession of the author, that the Entwises were originally seated at Entwisle hall, in the parish of Bolton, which house in Camden's time was "a neat and elegant mansion." Towards the close of the 17th century they came into possession of Foxholes. About a century afterwards John Markland Entwisle, Esq. grandson of Mr. John Markland, of Wigan, (who married Ellen, daughter of Bertie Entwisle, vice-chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster) succeeded to the Foxhole estates, and re-built the present mansion, on the site of the old hall, in 1792. His son, John Entwisle, Esq. high sheriff of the county palatine of Lancaster in the year 1824, now enjoys the possession, and occupies the hall.

Spotland stands on the banks of the Spodden, and takes its name from that rivulet. The Holts, the Healys, the De Merlands, the Oakdens, and the Butterworths, were the successive proprietors here. John Chadwick, a descendant of Nicholas de Chadwick, married Alice, daughter of Edward Butterworth, in 1581, and in 1618, he re-built the mansion at Healy. This hall was again re-edified by John Chadwick, Esq. in 1744, and is now occupied by Messrs. Leach and Tweedall, manufacturers. Whitworth chapel, built in the reign of Henry VIII. is in this township. Spotland, like Butterworth, was thought worthy by the parliamentary commissioners to be made a parish, taking for its boundaries a line "from Hades down to Clough-house, after the water called Know Sike, past Stid, between Stid and Ridings to Haslerode, to Smallshaye, to Sikebanke, to Nadin Head, to Trough Yate, to Ugghshute, and to Hades again." The chapel of Whitworth, having fallen into decay, was re-built, and a burial-ground consecrated in 1795. The "Whitworth Doctors" have exercised their skill in this village for three generations, and right reverend prelates have been found in the crowds which have pressed to this modern Bethesda in search of health. The practice of the Whitworth Doctors is comprehensive enough to embrace both dogs and horses, as well as men; the setting of fractured limbs is their fort, but they are also famed for the cure of cancerous complaints, and tumours of the joints, called white swellings, principally by the agency of a powerful external application, to which they give the very appropriate name of keen.

Whitworth Doctors.

The chapels of Littleborough and Todmorden are in the Hundersfield division of this parish. Of the latter we shall have occasion to speak in another place.^c According to Dr. Whitaker, Littleborough chapel was licensed for mass, by the Abbey and convent of Whalley, in 1476. In the year 1815, this venerable edifice was taken down; and it is now re-placed by a neat modern erection, of gothic architecture, with a small spire steeple. The commissioners appointed under the act of 1649 report, that Littleborough chapel is three miles and a half from Rochdale, and "that they think fit that the said chapel should be made a parish church." Littleborough was a small Roman station, and the Roman road from Manchester to York skirts the village. The castrum stood about half a mile to the east: and several antiquities, as already described, indicating the residence of the conquerors of the world, have been found in the neighbourhood. This place is pleasantly situated at the western foot of that lofty spinal ridge, called Blackstone Edge, which, branching to the north and to the south, forms almost a continuous chain of mountains from Inverness in the Highlands of Scotland, to the Bay of Cardigan, in the principality of Wales, a distance of 500 miles.

Public
Improvements.

* Opened in May, 1824.

Stubble-house, an early residence of the Holts in the township of Wuerdale and Wardle, is at a short distance from Littleborough, and was originally built by Nicholas de Stubble. Up to the period of the reformation, the houses of the gentry of Lancashire were constructed of timber on foundations of stone,^b and Stubble-hall was one of the first specimens of an entire structure of stone or brick in this part of the country. The name of Holt has for centuries been associated with dignity and opulence in this parish: and we find in the Calendarium Inquisitorium post Mortem, taken in the 3d Edward III. John de Holt returned as holding possession of the castle and honour of Clitheroe.

The spirit of public improvement in the town of Rochdale was never more active than at present; several of the narrow streets, of which for many ages there was reason to complain, have within the last year been made wide and handsome; a new market place has just been completed, suitable to the rising consequence of the town, and other essential improvements are in progress, under the sanction of a legislative enactment of the present year. Four ample reservoirs, situated in the township of Castleton, afford to the town a spontaneous, supply of water, through the medium of public works, established by act of parliament, in the 49th of George III.; and a company of proprietors dispense from their works, below Castle-hill,^c a never-failing supply of coal gas, which will soon be made applicable to lighting the public streets, for which the recently obtained improvement act makes provision. Within the last four years, a new bridge, has been erected over the Roach, by which the communication between the opposite parts of the town has been facilitated, and the entrance from the west considerably improved.*

Eight thousand pieces of flannel are manufactured in this town and neighbourhood weekly. There are, within the same limits, 57 steam engines, employed in the various branches of trade and manufacture, which may be thus analyzed;

	Engines.	Horse Power.
Steam Engines used in the manufacture of Cotton and Woollen..	40	684
Grinding Corn	4	64
Machine-making and Foundries	5	18
Dyeing and Bleaching	2	16

Of which 420 horse power is employed in the spinning of cotton yarn, principally from 30 to 50 hanks to the pound,—yielding weekly an aggregate amount of about 84,000lbs.

* On the 8th of November, in the year 1820, the battlement of the old bridge was partially thrown down by a great concourse of people, who pressed to witness a bull bait, in the bed of the river, by which fatal accident eleven persons lost their lives.

ST. HELEN'S.

ST. HELEN'S is a well built thriving town in the parish of Prescott, and in the hundred of West Derby; 4 miles E.N.E. of Prescott, 10 miles N.W. of Warrington, 10 miles S.W. of Wigan, 12 miles E.N.E. of Liverpool, and 196 miles from London. It is described in the parliamentary census as being in the township of Windle, under which head the population is returned; in 1801 the number of inhabitants amounted to 3252; in 1811 they had increased to 4294; and in 1821 to 4820. The annual rental of the lands, messuages, and other buildings in the township, is estimated at £11,986.

This place has within the last half century risen from the rank of a small village to a neat and populous town. Its increase is owing to the various works established in the neighbourhood, and their establishment here has arisen partly from the cheap and excellent coal which abounds in this parish,† and partly from the vicinity of the place to the port of Liverpool. In the year 1773, a commercial company was established called the British Plate Glass Company, who were incorporated by act of parliament, and erected their manufactory at Ravenhead, in the township of Sutton, near to St. Helen's. This establishment occupies nearly 30 acres of land, and is inclosed by a wall, round which are placed the houses of the workmen, which renders it a sort of distinct colony; the buildings cost at that time £40,000,^a and about 300 work-people are constantly employed in these works, which are the largest of the kind in the kingdom. The manufacture was introduced by workmen from France, and is brought to great perfection. Plates of glass are cast of the dimensions of 140 by 72 inches, and concave and convex mirrors made of 36 inches diameter. The glass is as brilliant in colour and as perfect in every respect, as the French or Venetian plates, and is finished in such a manner as to render it perfectly free from that mistiness to which the foreign fabrics are subject. The casting of glass is performed here with great skill and dexterity; and the plates are of more than double the dimensions of those made in the Venetian way of blowing, with the further advantage of all kinds of borders and mouldings.

Near to St. Helen's, in the townships of Sutton and Eccleston, there are three other manufactories for crown and flint glass, and black glass bottles, as well as several black earthen and stoneware potteries, and a large cotton mill; there are also two large breweries, viz. one at Denton's green, and one at St. Helen's. About 45 years ago, an extensive copper work was erected here by the proprietors of the Paris Mine in Anglesea, Messrs. Hughes, Williams, & Co. for the purpose of smelting and refining copper ore; and the same company had a branch of their works upon the Sankey canal. The Ravenhead works manufactured 30 tons weekly of small copper bars, not exceeding in weight seven ounces Troy each: these ingots were made for the East India Company, and exported to China, where they are said to have passed for coin. The copper works were discontinued in the year 1815, but without producing any material interruption to the progressive prosperity of St. Helen's, the mining and manufacturing operations of which have arisen to such a magnitude that there are at present (May, 1825) no fewer than 69 steam

The Market is held every Saturday by custom: and there are two annual fairs, the first on the Monday and Tuesday after Easter week; and the second, the first Friday and Saturday after the 8th of September. St. Helen's is a perpetual curacy, of which the Rev. Thomas Pigot, A.M. of Sutton, is the incumbent. The chapel was originally dedicated to St. Helen, but on its enlargement in 1816, the patroness was changed to St. Mary. There is also here a Friends' meeting-house, one of the most ancient in the county, endowed with a considerable property, the interest of which is applied to charitable purposes. As early as the year 1710, an Independent chapel was erected, and in 1800 a Methodist meeting-house was opened. A Catholic chapel, bearing the stamp of antiquity formerly stood at Windleshaw, about two miles N. of St. Helen's, but it has crumbled to its foundations, and all that remains of the building is the square tower, with an ancient cross; the cemetery is, however, preserved, and still used as a burial place. A Catholic chapel, of modern date, was opened on the 1st of September, 1793, at Lowehouse, for which the congregation is indebted to the munificence of Mrs. Eccleston, of Cowley-hill.

St. Helen's enjoys the advantage of an endowed Free School, where 40 children are instructed in reading, writing, and arithmetic; the appointment of a master and the administration of the revenue is vested in trustees, who are also patrons of the church living. In addition to this school, 30 children are educated from the charity of Sarah Cowley, who, in the year 1714, bequeathed an estate in Parr—the rents to be appropriated to the future instruction of the children of poor parents belonging to Windle. The funds of this charity some years ago suffered a severe shock from the bankruptcy of an individual then in trust. At present the trusteeship is in the Independents, but a suit is existing in the High Court of Chancery, the object of which is, to transfer the trust to members of the Establishment. The property consists in coal mines and the trustees are accumulating a fund to perpetuate the school when the mines are exhausted. Here is also a Free School for the instruction of poor children of Catholic parentage, in which there are 45 pupils. Eleven hundred and seventy children are educated at the different Sunday Schools, viz. at the Church Sunday school, 800; by the Independents, 200; by the Catholics, 100; and by the Methodists, 70.

The other charitable Institutions of St. Helen's are:—the Ladies' Charity, established in May, 1823, for the relief of poor women in childbirth, or widows whose husbands have died during their pregnancy, the funds of which are derived from annual subscriptions, voluntary donations, and a general ball given yearly; a Branch Bible Society established in 1814, auxiliary to the Liverpool Society; and a Church Missionary Association, established in Oct. 1823. The Savings' Bank, established in 1819, has already received deposits to the amount of £25,449, from which the sum of £7,749 has been withdrawn, leaving a balance in favour of the depositors of £17,700.

Sir William Gerard is the lord of the manor of Windle, under whose authority a Court Leet and Court Baron is held in the month of November yearly, at which the peace-officers for the government of this flourishing district are chosen.

SOUTHPORT.

SOUTHPORT is a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of North Meols, 9 miles N.W. of Ormskirk; 22 miles S.W. of Preston; 20 miles W.N.W. of Wigan; 22 miles N. of Liverpool; 31 miles N.W. of Warrington; and 41 miles N.W. of Manchester, situated on the coast of the Irish Sea opposite to Lytham, at the mouth of the Ribble. Southport, which is a modern name, is included in the district of Southhawes, the name formerly given to a few straggling cottages which stood here. The foundation of the prosperity of this village as a sea bathing place, was laid by Mr. Sutton, of North Meols, who duly appreciating its local advantages, built the first Inn, called the Royal Hotel, in the year 1792. Of this speculation the people expressed their opinion by calling it "Duke's Folly," in allusion to a name given to the proprietor. The experience of six years seemed to justify the popular censure, but in 1798 symptoms of prosperity began to appear, and a few cottages enclosing distinct areas were built in the vicinity of the hotel, on sites considerably elevated above the level of the sea. Since that time Southport has continued to rise in importance; and no doubt, owes its present celebrity to the combined influence of fashion, easy communication with some of the principal towns of the county, and a salubrious air from which invalids every year derive essential benefit. The village consists of one main street, 88 yards wide, composed of handsome brick houses with large gardens in front, and two back streets running parallel to the principal street are now rapidly forming. Meols, or Sand hills, as the Saxon word imports, present themselves on every side resembling small tumuli, from whence the ancient name of the parish is probably derived. At present there are about 200 houses and cottages, of which number one-half at least have been erected during the last four years. Several of the cottages are furnished and fitted up in a handsome style for the reception of families, and are let at from two to eight guineas a week, according to the number of beds, half-a-guinea being generally charged for each, without any separate charge being made for furniture, parlour, &c. There are also many respectable boarding and lodging houses, and three large and commodious hotels, the Royal Hotel, the Union Hotel, and the Hesketh Arms. The visitors have thus the choice of accommodation and take up their residence either at a furnished cottage, a boarding house, or at one of the hotels as best suits their health or inclination. The terms are—at the hotels, board and lodging, exclusive of wine, 6s. per day; at the respectable boarding houses 5s.; and at those of an inferior class 4s. per day. During the season coaches run every day from Liverpool and Manchester, and three times a week from Bolton, Chorley, Warrington, and St. Helen's. To such as are more disposed to economise money than time, the canal packets offer a cheap conveyance from Liverpool and Manchester as well as on the whole line of the intermediate country to Scarisbrick Bridge, where a number of handsome carriages are stationed to convey passengers to this place of fashionable resort, being a distance of about five miles. The amusements of the place are those afforded by the theatre, the news-rooms and libraries, the billiard-rooms, the repositories, and the assemblies. The bathing machines used at Southport, of which there are at present forty,^a are on a superior construction, being mounted on four wheels and made to return to the shore without turning in the water : from these causes they conduce as much to the comfort and security of the bathers as the rules and regulations enforced upon the shore do to the maintenance of order and decorum. The parishes of North Meols and Hesketh with Bectonsall, would be much benefited by a bridge over the Douglas near Hesketh church ; for many ages the poor fishermen, on their way to the markets of Amounderness and Blackburn hundred, have stood in need of this accommodation, but the rising consequence of Southport has now rendered another passage over that river indispensable.

A Church, or rather Chapel of Ease, and several benevolent institutions have risen up in Southport with the increase of numbers and wealth. This chapel is called "CHRIST'S CHURCH," and is a neat, unostentatious structure ; it was erected in the year 1820, chiefly through the exertions of the Rev. William Docker, the present incumbent, and the agents of the late Robert Hesketh, Esq. of Rossall-hall, and the late Princess Sapieha, of Bold-hall, the lord and lady of the manor. The patronage was vested in Mr. Hesketh, in consequence of his advancing a certain sum of money towards the endowment, and undertaking further to improve the living. Though this church will accommodate from six to seven hundred persons, it is already in contemplation to enlarge it, by building two new galleries, one exclusively for strangers, and the other for the scholars of the Sunday-schools. The population of the parish of North Meols, in 1801, was 2,096 ; in 1811—2,887 ; in 1821—3,177 ; and in 1824, when the census was taken by the resident clergyman, 3,920, the increase being principally occasioned by the prosperity of Southport, and about one-half the whole number is comprised in that village. It is estimated that the average number of visitors at Southport during the bathing season is from 1,200 to 1,400. The Sunday-school attached to the church contains from 200 to 300 scholars, and since the erection of the church the Sabbath, which formerly was almost disregarded, has been observed with exemplary solemnity. The erection of an Independent chapel in 1823, and of a Methodist Meeting-house in 1824, each of which is capable of accommodating a congregation of from 400 to 500 persons, has tended to promote this salutary change. In this village there is a seminary for students preparing for either of the Universities or for the Church, under the superintendence of the Rev. William Docker, the term of which are 100 guineas per annum.

The benevolent institutions of Southport are "The Strangers' Charity," for the relief of the sick poor to whose recovery sea air or bathing may be conducive, and the allowance dispensed is seven shillings a week to each of the objects, all of whom are required to be recommended by a subscriber. The revenue amounts to about four hundred pounds a year, and the institution has the honour to rank amongst its patrons a considerable number of persons of distinction. A neat pile of buildings for a Dispensary, Baths, &c. was erected in the year 1823, at a cost of 449*l.* 5*s.* 11*d.* where medicines are dispensed gratuitously to the poor, and where, when their state of health requires it, they have the advantage of warm sea water baths. Similar benefits are afforded to the resident poor by the North Meols Local Dispensary in this place. The Marine Fund provides rewards for such fishermen and others as venture, at the hazard of their own lives, to save the lives of mariners wrecked on this coast.

STAYLEY BRIDGE.

STAYLEY BRIDGE is one of the great manufacturing villages on the confines of Lancashire and Cheshire, which has been swelled into importance by the advantages of its local situation. It is one mile E.S.E. of Ashton, 6 miles S.E. of Oldham, 8 miles N.E. of Stockport, and the same distance E. of Manchester. Placed on the banks of the Tame, the parent as it may be called of the Mersey, near to an ample supply of fuel, and enjoying, through the medium of the Huddersfield canal, the advantages of inland navigation, this place seems marked out as one of the favourite resorts of the manufacturers. The scenery of the neighbourhood is bold and impressive, but those enemies to the picturesque—pit coal and steam-engines, have diminished the natural beauties, and substituted in their place employment for the poor, and increased opulence for the wealthy. The views from the summit of "The Wild Bank," elevated as it is thirteen hundred feet above the level of the sea, are very extensive, and, though the axe of the woodman has prostrated the stately oaks, which in the time of the Staveleighs, and for several ages afterwards clothed the neighbouring valleys, yet there is still here much of grandeur and beauty. The ancient mansion of the de Staveleighs, with its cinq-gabled front, still exists, near the line of the Roman road, but the manorial rights have passed successively, by marriage, to the Asshetons and the Booths, and are now vested in the Earl of Stamford and Warrington.* The early name of this manor and township was Stave-^{Ormerod's Cheshire.} key, or Stayley, and Bridge is a modern appendage, arising from a bridge having been thrown over the ancient ford, to connect the two palatine counties.* The localities and parochial connexion of Stayley Bridge are singular: it is partly in the hundred of Macclesfield, in the county of Chester, but principally in the hundred of Salford, in the county of Lancaster; one-eighth part of the inhabitants residing in Longendale, and the remaining seven-eighths in the division of Hartshead, in the parishes of Ashton and Stockport.

The growth of this place, both in population and trade, has been extremely rapid. In the year 1748, the number of houses it contained amounted only to 34, and the number of inhabitants to 140. Spinning of worsted yarn for the Nottinghamshire hosiers was then their principal employment, but the cotton trade prevailed also to a small extent.† The first cotton mill was erected by a person of the name of Hall, in the year 1776, in which carding was performed by water power, and spinning by hand, and about 20 years afterwards, the first steam-engine (of 6 horse power) was introduced into the same mill. The introduction of the improved machinery into the manufacture of cotton had here to encounter a violent opposition, and to such a pitch were the threats of the populace, and the apprehensions of the mill-owner carried, that the doors were locked by day as well as by night, and the mill resembled a garrison. Time served to dissipate these alarms, and to reconcile the people to the progress of mechanical improvements, and in the year 1801, Messrs. Lees, Cheetham, & Co. erected an engine of 40 horse power. No branch of the cotton trade has perhaps been so uniformly successful as the spinning, and it is to this circumstance principally that Stayley Bridge owes its wealth and numbers, since it is a principle in political economy almost as unerring as the descent of water in physics, that population follows prosperous trade, and hence the inhabitants of this place have, within the last 70 years, increased from 140 to 12,000 souls. The Directory subjoined to this topographical sketch will serve to convey some idea of the consequence to which this once obscure village has attained, and the extent of its manufacturing concerns will be inferred from the fact, that it contains twenty-two spinning factories, worked by twenty-nine steam-engines, (and by six water wheels), of the aggregate amount of 862 horse power, giving motion to 354,580 spindles, and to 2,470 power looms. To show that the prosperity of the place is still rapidly on the advance, it is only necessary to add, that from the 1st of December, 1824, to the 1st of June, 1825, an increase of 77,080 spindles took place, and that new mills are now erecting here which will, when completed, add 100,000 spindles to those already in motion. A corresponding increase of dwellings must of course have taken place, and hence we find that, within the last two years, there have been built on the Dukinfield, the Mottram, and the Ashton sides of Stayley Bridge from seven to eight hundred new houses.

* The old bridge has been lately superseded by a substantial new structure, built at a cost of £4000, and approached on the Lancashire side by an excellent new line of road, which has greatly improved the appearance of the place.

† At this time one dyer performed all the business of the place in his line, with the assistance of two mastiff dogs, who were made to grind the wares, by turning a sort of canine tread-mill, similar in construction to those in which squirrels are sometimes placed, and to which a piece of grinding machinery was attached.

The places of public worship have also increased rapidly within the present century. The most handsome and striking public building in the place is the octagon-formed Chapel, dedicated to St. George, under the rector of Ashton, and in the patronage of the Earl of Stamford and Warrington, of which the Rev. J. N. France is the incumbent. The elevated site on which this chapel stands, renders it a fine object when viewed from the vale of the Tame; and, from its peculiar form, the interior of the building is remarkably light and elegant. The other places of worship are, the chapel of the Methodist New Connexion, in Chapel-street, built in 1802; the Wesleyan Methodist Chapel, in Caroline-street, built in 1805; the General Baptist Chapel, at Rossbottom, built in 1819; and the Particular Baptist Chapel, Bowling-green, built in 1824. To each of these chapels a sunday-school is attached, and they are all associated by an union, for the support of which the sum of 200*l.* was last year contributed. The number of scholars and teachers on the publication of the last report stood thus:—

In Union.	{	Methodist New Connexion	548	Scholars.	63	Teachers.
		Old Connexion.....	480	100
		General Baptists	200	48
		Particular Baptists	180	34
		Heyrod School (Methodists)	238	80
		Hyde's School (New Connexion)	100	44
		Established Church Sunday-School	160	26
			1906	395

There is at present (June, 1825), a new school-room erecting at Dukinfield by the Wesleyan Methodists, at a cost of 890*l.* calculated to accommodate 1000 children.

"A society for mutual instruction" has lately been established here, under which modest designation the germ of a literary and philosophical institution may be discovered; already a considerable stock of philosophical and scientific apparatus has been accumulated, and a library is attached for the use of the members. A news-room, well furnished with London and provincial journals, has been added to the public institutions of this rising place: a Masonic Society, and communities of Foresters, Druids, &c. have been formed, and numerous Benefit Societies, in which provision is made for sickness and old age, do honour to their founders and supporters. The government of Stayley Bridge is confided to the old constitutional authority of the constable, which has lately been strengthened by the erection of a place of temporary confinement,^a called a "Lock-up," within which there is a very necessary and highly beneficial establishment, consisting of two fire-engines, under proper regulations, for the use of subscribers, and the preservation of the property of the inhabitants in general.

STONYHURST.

THE interesting establishment at this place, being one of the principal Roman Catholic Colleges in England, claims a distinct and separate notice in a popular History of Lancashire. Stonyhurst was, for many successions, occupied by the knightly family of the Sherburnes. This family trace their progenitors to the time of John Earl of Morton, afterwards King of England, who made a grant of six carucates of land to the Sherburnes at Hackensall and Preesall, in the parish of Lancaster. Their connexion with Stonyhurst is as early as the beginning of the 14th century, and originated in an alliance with the family of Jordan de Bayley, of the neighbouring township. Sir John de Sherburne attended Edward III. at the siege of Calais, and Sir Richard Sherburne, one of his descendants, received the honour of knighthood for his bravery in the battle of Leith. This Sir Richard was a great favourite of Queen Elizabeth, notwithstanding his adherence to the Catholic faith, and was allowed by her majesty, as a special favour, to have his chapel and his priest at Stonyhurst. Under his munificent hand, the splendid mansion rose upon the site of the ancient edifice, but death overtook him before he had completed his labours. The noble west front, and one wing, together with half the quadrangular court, are standing as he left them in 1628. The cupolas of the towers were added by Sir Nicholas Sherburne, and were built at a cost of 40*l*.! as is shown by the deed of contract still existing at Stonyhurst. Sir Nicholas was a travelled scholar; under his direction the gardens and grounds were laid out in the French taste; and he was preparing to complete the half-finished building, when he lost his only son Richard Francis, who died in the year 1702, at the age of nine years. This severe domestic bereavement so affected him, that he abandoned his design. His only daughter, Maria Winifreda Francisca, married Thomas the eighth Duke of Norfolk, and died without issue, in the year 1754. The family possessions now passed to the children of Elizabeth, sister of Sir Nicholas, who had married William, son and heir of Sir John Weld, of Lulworth Castle, in the county of Dorset; and Thos. Weld, Esq. of Lulworth Castle, son of the late Thomas Weld, Esq. is the present proprietor of Stonyhurst. In the reign of Elizabeth, and for several ages afterwards, the Stonyhurst family was all powerful in this neighbourhood; the marriage of Roger Sherburne, of Wolfhouse, with Isabel Knowles, the heiress of the ancient family of that name, transmitted to the Sherburnes the manor and possessions of Chipping; and Robert Sherburne, a lawyer, reader to the honourable society of Gray's Inn, became possessed of Little Mitton, by marriage, in the 9th of Eliz. with Dorothy, the daughter and coheir of Thomas Catteral, of Catteral and Mitton.

THE COLLEGE.

The heads of the college now resident at Stonyhurst having been driven from their establishment at Liege in 1794, by the horrors of war and the proscriptions of the French revolution, were induced in consequence of the mitigation of the penal enactments against Catholic education, to seek an asylum in their native country, and Stonyhurst was fixed upon as the seat of a Roman Catholic College. A long lease was accordingly obtained of the house and of the college farm, on moderate terms, from the late Thomas Weld, Esq. The mansion they found much dilapidated from time and neglect, but it is now in a state of complete repair, and they have raised, at a great expense, a large and handsome new building, with a south-east aspect, forming a house admirably adapted for the purposes of education.

In the upper stories are the dormitories, where each student has his little apartment. The next story consists of the apartments for the professors and teachers. Below are the chambers of the president and other directors, with the hall of study, and philosophical room; the former, of the dimensions of 78 feet by 20 feet, is fitted up with benches and desks for 220 scholars, but they do not at present amount to that number. A high throne or pulpit for the prefect, who has the charge of the young gentlemen at their studies, stands against the wall in a central part of the room, so as to command a view of each student. This place is devoted to study exclusively. Not a word is exchanged between the students during the hours allotted to study. The philosophical apparatus room is 48 feet long by 33 broad; it is ornamented with a rich deep frieze, and the instruments, which are used in the illustration of the different branches of natural philosophy, are deposited in this room. A fine painting, by Annibal Caracci, of the taking down of our Saviour from the cross, hangs over the fire-place. The exhibition room is connected with this apartment by large sliding doors; this room is admirably adapted for classical or philosophical exhibitions, and such exhibitions are frequent in the college.

On the ground floor are the seven school or class rooms, where the respective scholars of each class recite to their several masters the lessons which they have learnt in the study, and receive lectures. The play rooms, lavatory, drawing room, music room, and dancing gallery are also on this floor. Every duty has its own fixed time, place, and superintendent. The library is a handsome, but small room. It contains amongst other valuable works, some highly illuminated manuscripts, the prayer-book of the Queen of Henry VII. and the office in honour of the blessed Virgin, which belonged to the persecuted Queen of Scots; there are also here two or three vellum missals, and several black-letter books, a copy of St. John's Gospel, a manuscript of the seventh century, found in the tomb of St. Cuthbert; with two sculptures in ivory, and a painted crucifixion, all three by Michael Angelo; as also a chest of coins and medals, medallions of the Popes, &c.

The museum is between the western towers, and contains, among many other interesting subjects, the private seals of James II. and Fenelon, the embroidered cap of Sir Thomas More, his seal when under-treasurer, and his original George,* when Lord Chancellor, with this inscription—"O Passi graviora dabit his quoque finem;" several venerable vases, pixes, and crosses; with a number of transatlantic curiosities, presented by C. Waterton, Esq. of Walton-hall, in the county of York; a good collection of minerals and shells; bronze casts of the Cæsars, and plaster casts of the martyrdoms of the apostles: and the cabinet of the learned Queen Christina of Sweden. The merits and promise of this museum are not known, or we should find here more monuments of

Roman antiquity from Ribchester. A Roman altar, dedicated to the mother goddesses, by a Captain of the Asturians, has, however, been lately rescued from the rubbish of a neighbouring farm yard, and now stands on more classical ground in the garden of Stonyhurst. This rare piece of antiquity proves to be the identical altar which the venerable Camden, in 1603, saw near Ribchester. The altar is 33 inches high, by 22 inches broad, and the inscription at length, may be read thus :—

" ALE ASTURUM SUSCEPTUM SOLVIT LIBENS LUBENS MERITO."

The recreation hall of the professors is a magnificent gallery, 90 feet by 20, in the old house, running parallel with the study; the grand tapestry of which room was removed by the Duke of Norfolk. The refectory was the hall of the Sherburnes, 60 feet by 30. Here their visitors were received in state; it was never completed, but its ceiling, frieze, and floor are magnificent. The new building is 300 feet long, and fronts the extensive play grounds and gardens. The public rooms in the new, as well as in the old building, are constructed on a noble scale. The area of the house, play grounds, and gardens, comprises a space equal about to that on which stood Roman Ribchester—from nine to ten acres.

Such is the College, in which the sons of many of the Catholic nobility and gentry of this country are educated. Here they are taught to respect and cherish the laws and constitution of their country; and to place a due estimate upon the advantages of polite and classical education. During the course of their studies, all the more difficult and celebrated authors in Greek, Latin, and French are read; and daily exercises in composition, as well in the learned languages, as in French and English, are assigned to each class. A quarterly examination, and report, enable the superiors and parents to ascertain the progress of the pupils; and rewards assigned to such as distinguish themselves, serve to stimulate exertion. Algebra, and the higher branches of the mathematics are held in the same estimation as classical learning; Playfair's Euclid and course of philosophy are taught here; and arithmetic, and writing are by no means neglected. No branch of scholastic learning is too high, nor is any too humble to be disregarded. The elegant accomplishments have their proper place, and dancing, music, and drawing are taught by approved masters, not resident in the College. The laboratory and botanic garden are open to the students of chemistry and and botany; and the scholars who wish to be linguists have the opportunity of learning Spanish, Portuguese, and Italian. The character of the population, like that of the lands round the College is much improved during the last thirty years, and many of the poor of the neighbourhood are fed and clothed by the institution. The political importance of large Catholic establishments of this kind is well known to the legislature, and wise was that monarch and that parliament which relaxed the severity of the penal laws, and invited the Catholic exiles from foreign countries and colleges to spend their fortunes, and their lives in their own country.

The stately pile of Stonyhurst, with its towers and grounds, forms a magnificent object to the whole of the surrounding country; and the prospects it commands are bold, rich, and beautiful. Its geographical situation is in the parish of Mitton, and the township of Aighton, ten miles to the north of Blackburn, the post town of the establishment, and it is equi-distant from Clitheroe, Whalley, and Ribchester.

TODMORDEN, a small but thriving town, situated on the eastern confines of the county, partly in the parish of Rochdale, and hundred of Salford; and partly in the parish of Halifax, in the West-Riding of the county of York; 9 miles N.N.E. of Rochdale, 12 miles W.S.W. of Halifax, and 20 miles N.N.E. of Manchester, in one of the most picturesque valleys in the north of England, which, taking its name from this place, is called The Vale of Todmorden. The ancient orthography of the place was Todmaredene—the valley of the Fox mere or lake.

A branch of the family of Radcliffe, of Radcliffe Tower, was established here as early as the time of Edward III. and continued to reside at Todmorden and Merlay alternately for nearly four centuries, till Elizabeth, the only child of Joshua Radcliffe, of Todmorden, Esq. married Roger Mainwaring, of Kerringham, in the county of Chester, who dissipated the possessions,* and about the year 1700 sold the Todmorden estates.

Radcliffe.

History of Whalley, page 232.

The church is pleasantly situated on an eminence about the centre of the town. The date of the erection is not ascertained, but it is presumed to be as early at least as the Reformation. The land for the erection of the church, as well as for the cemetery and old parsonage house, was given by the Radcliffes, of Todmorden Hall; at the end of two centuries the ancient edifice having fallen into decay, it was re-built by subscription, under the superintendence of Anthony Crossley, of Scaitcliffe, gentleman, at a cost of 606*l.* to which he was himself a large contributor. Recently a new parsonage house and sacristy have been erected, and an additional cemetery* has been made by the parishioners, aided by a handsome grant from his Majesty's commissioners for building churches. The parishioners are indebted for the site of these additions to the church accommodation to Mr. Samuel Greenwood, of Stones, in this township, a member of the society of Friends. The chancel is adorned with monuments of the two principal families of the township—the Radcliffes and the Crossleys, and a monument of recent date, erected by John Crossley, Esq. of Scaitcliffe, records the meritorious service of the Rev. Joseph Atkinson, who, after forty-five years of faithful labour in this chapelry, died on the 20th of August, 1819. In the reign of Henry VIII. the living of this chapel, which was then, as now, in the patronage of the vicar of Rochdale, was valued at two pounds per annum. An inquisition, taken in the time of the Commonwealth, returns the tithes of the chapelry of Todmorden as of the yearly value of twenty pounds, and the parsonage house as of the annual value of six shillings and eight pence. The commissioners recommended that the chapel should be made a parish church, and that the boundaries of the parish to be created should be from Salter-rake to the Rokeing-stone, to Dove-haw stones, to Hallowe-Pen, to Annenden-Sike, to Sheble-Crosse, to Goodhill, to the Old-ditch, on the east side of Uggshute, to Shorney

* The first interment took place in the new burial ground on Monday the 25th of April, 1825, when the mortal remains of Mr. John Stansfield, of Ewood, in Todmorden, were committed to the grave under the officiating ministry of the Rev. Joseph Cowell.

Ford, to Healden, to Willowing Coats, thence following the water to Todmorden, and thence by Lower Swine's Head to Salter Rake again.^a Nearly two centuries have wrought such changes that many of these names are now forgotten, but sufficient remains to show that the boundaries of this intended parish took a south-eastern direction along the division line of the county to the first reservoir on Blackstone Edge; that then, turning westward, it skirted Whitworth, and passed up the east side of Cowpe Moor to the neighbourhood of Baccup Booth, when, taking an easterly direction to Scaitcliffe, and descending southward by Swine's Head, it came to Salter Rake, the point at which the line commenced.

School.

The Free School, which adjoins the church-yard, was endowed by the Rev. Richard Clegg, vicar of Kirkham, a native of this township, in 1713, at a cost of £100 contributed by himself, and £50 which he collected from others, the interest to repair the school, and the remainder to the master, who has the gratuitous use of the school house. The appointment of the schoolmaster is with the majority of the freeholders of the township, with a power to make the trust perpetual by the existing trustees appointing others. A Church Sunday School, for one hundred girls, is taught here, to which it is intended to add the same number of boys, who are to receive instruction in the new sacristy. There are no fewer than seven moderate sized places of worship in this town and its immediate neighbourhood, namely, the Friends' Meeting-house, built originally in the year 1750, in Langfield, and re-built in 1807, at Shrewbroad Bank; the Methodist chapel, at Zion hill; * Rehoboth Baptist chapel, at Millwood, in Stansfield; † Bethel Baptist chapel, at Linchholme, in Stansfield; ‡ the Independent Inghamite chapel, at New Chapel, in Stansfield; ¶ the chapel of the Methodist New Connexion, on the Burnley road; § and the Unitarian Meeting-house, at Cockpit hill, in Langfield. || To each of these places of worship Sunday schools are attached, except to the Quakers'; and it is to the honour of that community, that all their children, however humble may be the circumstances of their parents, receive such a degree of instruction in day schools as to render Sunday school instruction to them unnecessary. A Free School for one hundred poor children, belonging to the parents of all religious denominations, from four years of age till the time they are sent to work in the manufactories, will be opened here in the school-room of the Unitarian chapel, after the midsummer vacation of 1825.

The Crossleys
parish,^b reside at Scaitcliffe. This family trace their origin to Saxon times, and a stained square of glass in the hall bears the following inscription upon the margin enclosing the family arms:—

“ The Kyngdome of East Saxons ; ”

Probably of the East Angles, as another ancient crest of arms, on stained glass, marked with the initials E. A. is supposed to indicate. The first member of this family mentioned in existing records is “ Adam del Croslegh de Todmardene in Vill de Honerresfeld in the county palatine of Lancaster,” and Matilda his wife, but this document is without date, and seems to be of an age before dates or deeds were in general use, it cannot, however, be earlier than the reign of Edward III. when the county was first made palatine. The next is John del Croslegh, of Todmordene, 30 Edward III. A.D. 1365. Of this family, John Crossley,

* Built in 1783; ¶ in 1797; † in 1808; ‡ in 1818; § in 1816; || in 1824.

Esq. of Scaitcliffe, is the representative, and of all the ancient families in the parish of Rochdale, he alone is the only resident in strict male lineal descent. The present worthy occupant of Foxholes also represents one of the ancient families of this parish, but he is of the female line, being a descendant of Ellen, daughter of Bertie Entwistle, vice-chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. The Scaitcliffe armoury or Museum. museum contains a great variety of antiquities and modern curiosities, principally illustrative of the family history; they are arranged in the residence of John Crossley, Esq. at Rochdale, and the freedom with which they are exhibited by the owner greatly enhances their worth to the public.

The three great requisites for manufacturing prosperity are found in the vale of Todmorden in perfection—building materials, coal, and water communication. The Calder winds its way through the valley, and the Rochdale canal, on the line to Sowerby Bridge, skirts the south side of the town, bringing the raw materials to the door of the inhabitants, and conveying the manufactured fabrics, which are principally cotton, to the markets, opening out, by the aid of other navigations, an uninterrupted water communication between the eastern and western seas. It will not be thought extraordinary, under circumstances so favourable, that Todmorden has become a place of considerable importance as a manufacturing station. In addition to the numerous water mills, there are in the town and neighbourhood no fewer than twelve steam-engines, of the aggregate power of about one hundred and fifty horses, exclusive of one which is about to be erected,* of sixty horse power, intended to give motion to eight hundred steam looms in one room. At present about 60,000lbs. of cotton yarn are spun in this township and its immediate vicinity weekly, and 7000 pieces of calico are produced, exclusive of several hundred pieces of fustians, satteens, and velveteens: and about ten packs of wool are consumed weekly in the manufacture of lastings and other worsted fabrics.

Trade.

* By Messrs. Fielden.

The market day is on Thursday; there is also a fair for cattle, held on the first Thursday in every month; and two annual fairs for cattle and general traffic, the first held on the Thursday before Easter, and the other on Michaelmas day, the 27th of September, where more business is transacted than at the fairs of most of the towns in the kingdom. The progress of population is here very rapid; within the last twenty years it has nearly doubled; in 1801 the number of the inhabitants in the township of Todmorden and Walsden amounted to 2515; in 1811 to 3652; and in 1821, when the last census was taken, to 4985. Wealth has happily increased as fast as men; unlike large towns, there is here room for expansion, and the valley of Todmorden is studded with cheerful habitations, equally distant from splendor on the one hand and penury on the other.

ULVERSTONE.

ULVERSTONE, or ULVERSTON, is a market town and parish in the hundred of Lonsdale (North of the Sands) in the deanery of Furness and Cartmel, and in the archdeaconry of Richmond; 5 miles N.E. of Dalton, 7 miles W. of Cartmel, 15 miles S.S.W. of Hawkshead, 22 miles N.W. of Lancaster, and 271 miles from London. This parish contains six chapeltries, and four other townships, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821, and the estimated annual rental of each township in the parish:—

Charter to Furness Abbey.

The ancient orthography of this place is Olvestonam,^a and the popular pronunciation is Owston. This name is supposed to be derived from a Saxon Lord—Ulpha, and to import the town of Ulpha. In the early part of the 12th century, this lordship passed into the possession of Stephen Earl of Boulogne, afterwards King of England, and on the erection of Furness-abbey, in 1127, it was presented by him to the monks as a part of the endowment of that foundation. William de Lancaster, the first of that name, (a descendant of Ivo de Taillebois^b) and who was the first Baron of Kendal, had large domains in Furness, and Helewise, the heiress of this Norman family, having married Gilbert, the son of Roger Fitz-Reinfred, the possessions and honours centred in him. In the 7th year of the reign of Richard I. the Abbot of Furness granted to this Gilbert and Helewise his wife, the vill of Ulverstone, with the inhabitants, who were at that time in a state of the most abject vassalage—transferable like beasts of burthen. The baron seems to have been a man of enlarged views, and his first care was to enfranchise the people and raise them to the degree of free burgesses. This charter,

which was confirmed by Henry IV. invested them with a freehold property in their houses, and laid the foundation of their future comfort and elevation. Edward I. granted a charter to Ulverstone for a free market and fair, which was confirmed by Richard II. In 1342 William de Coucy, into whose possession a moiety of the lordship had come, dying without heir, it was escheated to the Abbot of Furness as chief lord. But Edward III. suspended this escheat in favour of John de Coupland, the gallant soldier who captured David II. King of Scotland, in the battle of Durham. After the death of Sir John Coupland and Johanna his wife, this possession reverted to the abbey, and continued vested in that religious house till the dissolution, in the 31st of Henry VIII.^a when it was surrendered, together with the other estates ^{a West.} of the monastery, to the king. The other moiety of the manor of Ulverstone, which had descended from John de Harrington to his heirs through successive generations, came to Henry Grey, Duke of Suffolk, the father of Lady Jane, and was forfeited to the crown by his attainder, in 1553. Up to the year 1609, the manor remained in the crown, when one moiety of it was granted to Salter and Williams, and three years afterwards the other moiety was granted to Whitmor and Verdon. After passing through the hands of a number of other individuals, money-lenders and money-borrowers, both Jews and Gentiles, it was conveyed in the year 1736, for the sum of £490, to the Duke of Montague, and the manorial rights are now possessed by the ducal family of Buccleuch. The profits arising to the lord of the manor accrue from various small, free, customary, greenhew, sheaving, moss, and salt-coal rents; from what is called the town term, held every seventh year; from fines and amerciaments; from two court leets, and a court baron;* from the profits of one of the fairs; and from free fishing on Thurston Water.

The origin of the church of Ulverstone is involved in considerable obscurity; it was probably coeval, at least, with the early ages of the monastic institutions in the district of Furness, and the rectory was appropriated to the priory of Conishead by the founder, William de Lancaster. According to the Coucher Book of Furness, the parish of Ulverstone was originally part and parcel of the parish of Dalton, as was Urswick, from which Ulverstone was separated. This edifice stands at the distance of a few hundred yards from the town, at the bottom of an abrupt eminence, which is covered with tomb-stones and monuments. In the reign of Henry VIII. the ancient building gave place to a new fabric, which in its turn was completely re-edified in the beginning of the present century.^b This is one of the handsomest churches in the ^{b In 1804.} county; it consists of a nave, chancel, and three aisles, and is adorned with several elegant, and some sumptuous monuments, particularly those to the memory of the Doddings and Braddylls. The east window is of beautiful stained glass, representing the Four Evangelists, and Christ rising from the sepulchre, after Rubens. The altar-piece of Christ taken from the cross, attended by Faith, Hope, and Charity, is after

* The Court Baron of the liberty of Furness, under the Duchess of Buccleuch, for the recovery of debts below 40s. is held at Ulverstone every Saturday three weeks; a Court Leet and Court Baron of the same lady for the manor of Ulverstone, on the last Monday in October, at the same place; and a Court Baron, under the Earl of Derby, for the manor of Bolton with Adgarley, is also held at Ulverstone annually, but at no fixed period.

Sir Joshua Reynolds, by T. R. G. Braddyll, Esq. St. Mary is the patron saint of this church; the living of which is in the gift of Thomas Richmund Gale Braddyll, Esq. who is the lay rector, and the Rev. John Sunderland, M.A. is the perpetual curate. As early as the period of the reformation, this was a valuable living, and in the Liber Regis it is registered at £28 18s.

This district has contributed its full share to the eminent men of the county of Lancaster, and it has the honour to rank amongst its worthies Edwin Sandys, Archbishop of York; George Sandys, his son, a distinguished poet, and traveller; Richard Ulverston, a celebrated antiquary, who flourished in the reign of Henry VI.; John Barrow, Esq. the Eastern traveller; and George Romney, the painter.

Ulverstone may now be considered as the capital of Furness; while the Abbey, the great centre of attraction, flourished, Dalton was not merely the feudal, but the actual head of the whole district. This place had, indeed, its charter for a fair and market,^a but that document was then a dead letter. The dissolution of the monastery brought the two towns into fair competition; the advantages of the situation of Ulverstone soon decided the preference, and constituted that place the emporium of Furness. The market is held on Thursday, and is well supplied with grain, and all kinds of provision. The annual fairs, of which there are five, are held on the 9th of March, the 29th of April, Holy Thursday, the 7th of October, and the first Thursday after the 23d of October, for cattle and horses; the chartered fair, appointed to be held in the second week of September, has become obsolete. The town, though ancient, consists principally of modern well-built stone houses, rough cast, and white washed. There are four spacious principal streets, namely, King-street, Queen-street, Duke-street, and Market-street, and the smaller streets are kept clean and in good repair. A modern cross of cast iron, erected in 1821, stands in the old part of the town, and intersects two of the principal streets. Ulverstone is sheltered from the north and the west by gentle eminences, and in the distance by the Fells. A clear rivulet of excellent water flows through a part of the town, and tends to increase the advantages which this place enjoys over its ancient rival. Strictly Ulverstone is not now a sea-port, but a creek of the port of Lancaster; there is, however, here a considerable coasting trade, as appears from the following

The estuary of the Leven seems to have receded from Ulverstone, and placed it at a distance of about a mile from the bay. To remedy this inconvenience, a canal, about a mile and a quarter in length, capable of affording navigation to vessels of 200 tons burthen, was cut in the year, 1794-5,* under the direction of the late eminent engineer, J. Rennie, Esq., and extends from the channel of the Leven to the town, where the vessels are safely moored in a capacious basin.

The foreign trade of Ulverstone is very circumscribed, as will be seen from the official return of the British and foreign vessels that entered inwards, and cleared out from the ports of Lancashire, inserted at page 120 of the first volume of this work. The principal trade and commerce here is in iron ore, pig and bar iron, lime stone, blue slate, hoops, and grain. The iron mines of the district are situated at White-ridge, Lindal moor, and Cross gates, as already described.^a The manufactures carried on here are linens, checks, sail canvass, ropes, hats, and home-spun woollen yarn, which is rapidly giving place to the cotton manufacture in its various branches.

v. i. p. 89.

The improvement in the trade and appearance of the town within the last fifty years has been very striking, and it will be seen from the population returns placed at the head of this history, that within the last ten years the population has increased one fourth, which is a scale of augmentation equal in proportion to that of the most thriving towns in the kingdom. Owing to the fine salubrious climate, and healthy situation, the inhabitants are rather long-lived, particularly the females, but, by the ordination of providence, and the common laws of our nature, which have a great tendency to equalize the sum of human happiness, and the duration of human life, the effects produced by these causes are less powerful than is generally supposed.† Besides the parish church, there are here three other places of public worship, an Independent chapel, a Roman Catholic chapel, and a Methodist meeting-house, exclusive of a Quakers' meeting-house, which stands on the margin of Swart moor, at about a mile from the town, and was built under the direction of the venerable George Fox, being the first place of religious worship erected for the use of that community.

The public institutions are, two good libraries, one clerical, and the other general, an assembly room, and a small theatre. There is also here a Savings Bank, established on the 21st of May, 1816, in which there was invested, at the end of the year 1824, the sum of 11,569*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* by 458 depositors.

Notwithstanding its many recommendations, Ulverstone labours under the disadvantage of an ineligible, and somewhat dangerous communication, both with the south-east part of this county, and with the county of Cumberland to the west. The sands, however, may be traversed with perfect safety under the pilotage of a guide, and no traveller should attempt to cross them without one of these very necessary auxiliaries.‡

CONISHEAD PRIORY, now the seat of the ancient family of the Braddylls, is in this parish. The priory was founded by William de Lancaster, or rather by Gabriel de Pennington, who erected an hospital

* The first sod was cut by Thomas Sunderland, Esq. of Little Croft, on the 1st of June, 1793; and the second by Edward Banks, then a labourer, but whose talents have since that time shone forth with so much splendour in the erection of the Breakwater and other public works, that he has attained an eminent rank as an engineer, and has been honoured with the distinction of knighthood.

† The fatal visitation of the plague, in the year 1631, mentioned in the Dalton history, extended also to Ulverstone, and very much reduced the population of the town and district.

‡ There is a mounted guide at the ford, paid by government, whose duty it is to attend passengers over the sands from sun rise to sun set.

here by the consent of William the lord, for the relief of poor, decrepit, indigent persons, and lepers. The pious founder endowed the hospital, which he gave to God and St. Mary, with all the lands on both sides of the road which leads from Bardsea to Ulverstone, and from the great road to Trinkeld to the sea banks; and the priests, in the benevolence of their dispositions, converted the hospital into a priory, and took charge both of the land and of the poor. The church of Ulverstone, with its chapels, and appurtenances, together with forty acres of land in Ulverstone, and a salt work between Conishead and Ulverstone pule, with divers other possessions and immunities, also belonged to the foundation, all which the canons of St. Augustine saw proper to appropriate. Henry VIII. whose right to these possessions was little inferior to that of the canons, swept away the endowment, with the smaller religious houses, in the 27th year of his reign.^a The priory itself was at the same time dismantled, and the lead, timber, and other effects sold for £333 6s. 3½d. Not a vestige of the priory now appears to a common observer, but Dr. Whitaker says, that, by a very diligent investigation of the inner walls of the present splendid mansion, called Conishead priory, occupied by the Braddyll family, he discovered a few fragments of the old groud work, and there is in reality more of the ancient building existing than Dr. Whitaker describes. In the year 1823, the site of the church was accidentally discovered on the lawn to the south of the present mansion-house, and it appears, from the remains of several pillars, and other fragments, to have been of considerable magnitude. Within the south wall a range of vaults was opened, and to the right of the high cellar was a cemetery, which had been enclosed with iron railing: from the remains of coffin plates of gilt copper, and the bodies deposited there, which were those of children, as well as adults, this may be presumed to have been the burial place of some family of distinction in the neighbourhood, perhaps one of the benefactors to the monastery.

v. i. p. 44.

This house, with all its demesnes, was, after the dissolution, first leased to Thomas Stanley, the second Lord Monteagle, and the father of the Lord of this name, to whom the letter which led to the discovery of the gunpowder plot was addressed. The manor and estate afterwards became the property of the Pagets, who under royal licence disposed of it to the Machells, by whom the premises were re-sold to Wm. Sandys, whose son Francis devised the estates to his sisters, Margaret and Barbara—Margaret married to Myles Dodding, and Barbara to Myles Philipson. In the 6th Charles I. the latter sold their moiety to the Doddings, whose heir general carried it by marriage to the Braddylls, of Portfield, in the parish of Whalley, in the year 1680, by which ancient family the manor and estate are at present enjoyed. The priory having fallen into decay, it was re-edified about the middle of the eighteenth century; but a few years were sufficient to prove that the dilapidations made by time were beyond the reach of partial repair, and about four years ago, the present worthy proprietor was compelled to take down the whole pile, which will now speedily be restored to its original character, under the direction of P. Wyatt, Esq.

WARRINGTON.

WARRINGTON is a market town and parish in the hundred of West Derby, in the deanery of Warrington, and in the archdeaconry of Chester, 10 miles E.S.E. of Prescot, 12 miles S. of Wigan, 18 miles E. of Liverpool, 18 miles W.S.W. of Manchester, and 182 miles from London. This parish contains five townships, including two chapelries, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821; and the estimated annual rental of each township in the parish:—

WARRINGTON, (Parish.)	POPULATION.					Estimated Annual Value.
	1801 Persons.	1811 Persons.	Houses.	1821. Families.	Persons.
Burtonwood .. Chapelry.	773	868	152	163	911	£6,344
Poulton-with- Fearnhead .. Township.	417	560	122	117	631	3,450
Rixton-with- Glazebrook or Hollinfare .. Chapelry.	881	886	152	162	990	4,097
Warrington .. Township.	10,567	11,738	2832	2929	13,570	29,069
Woolston-with Martinscroft Township.	542	562	106	111	596	2,812
Total.....	13,180	14,614	3364	3482	16,698	45,772

Warrington is unquestionably one of the most ancient towns in the county of Lancaster, and without adopting all the conjectures of Mr. Whitaker, it must be admitted, that there are many concurrent facts to bear out his assertions—that this was a Roman station, established by Agricola, about the year A.D. 79, and called by the Chronography of Ravennas, Veratinum or Vera-tin;* that during the four hundred years which the Romans occupied Britain it maintained its rank; and that soon after the invasion of the Saxons it fell under the sway of these new conquerors. The Roman roads from Manchester and Chester, pointing towards the ford of the Mersey opposite Warrington church,^a the circular knoll opposite to Latchford—(the opening ford,) and the marks of a fosse and castrum visible in the early part of the last century, serve to support this conclusion: it is true, indeed, that few Roman remains have been found in this neighbourhood, but even this testimony is not altogether wanting, Roman coins having been found on both sides of the river, opposite to the old ford; and in the year 1734, there was found on Risley-moss, three miles from Warrington, a brazen metope of an ox, on a bed of white sand, five yards below the surface;^b not to mention the oblong pieces of lead, some of them said to bear Roman inscriptions, discovered a few miles from hence on the south side of the river.

* The very common substitution of a W for a V readily converts Vera-tin into Warrington. Another etymological conjecture derives the name of Warrington, (the frontier town of the kingdom of Northumbria at its separation from Mercia) from a Saxon fort—Waring signifying a rampart or fortification, and tun, a town—hence Warrington.

But quitting altogether the regions of conjecture, and coming to the evidence of authentic history, we find that, at the period of the Norman survey, in 1080, when the record called the Domesday book was compiled, that Warrington, no doubt from its consequence, gave name to one of the hundreds between the Mersey and the Ribble;^a and we also learn from the Valor Beneficiorum of Pope Nicholas IV. that as early as 1291, and probably several centuries before, this was the head of a deanery.^b When the hundreds of Warrington and Newton merged in the gigantic division of West Derby is a point not accurately ascertained, but up to the present day, the ecclesiastical jurisdiction remains undisturbed.

This place is described by Camden as remarkable for its lords, surnamed Butler or Boteler, of Bewsey. Like the Butlers of Amounderness, the name was derived from their office, Robert le Pincerna having discharged the duties of that station under Ranulph de Gernons,^c Earl of Chester, in 1158, and having hence taken the name. Almeric Butler married Beatrice, daughter and coheir of Matthew Villiers, Lord of Warrington, and thus became possessed of the barony. Sir William, son of Almeric, filled the office of sheriff of Lancashire, in 43 Henry III. and was governor of the castle of Lancaster, but, taking part with the barons, the family estates were confiscated, and not restored till after the battle of Evesham. In the 5th Edward I. "William de Boteler" obtained the charter for a market at his "Manor of Werington" weekly on the Friday, and for a fair annually on the eve of the feast of St. Andrew, and nine successive days.^d In the 13th year of the same reign he obtained another grant to change the market to Wednesday, and for another fair on the eve, day, and morrow of St. Thomas the martyr's translation, and the seven days next ensuing. He also obtained a grant of free warren over the manors of "Werington, Sankye, Penketh, and Laton," in the county of Lancaster, and over those of Crophill, Eccleshall, Folkishall, and Smearcote, in the county of Warwick.^e In the return of the barons of Lancashire, made by the duchy court in 1311, "William Boteler, of Werington," stands at the head of the list, and is returned as holding "Werington, Sonky, Penketh, Rixton, Glasebrooke, Culcheth, Tildesley, Penyngton, Atherton, Halsall, Ince Blundell, Lydiate, Egargarth, Windhull, and part of Barton and Thornton, by homage service to the king, on certain annual payments. For a succession of ages this family was summoned to parliament among the barons of the realm, by the style and title of "Baron Butler of Bewsey." A tradition prevails that Sir Thomas Butler was murdered in his own house in the 13th Henry VII. by a band of assassins, who, having crossed the moat in leathern boats, perpetrated their villany through the treachery of one of his servants, and in defiance of a gallant resistance made by another.*

* This tragical affair is involved in a good deal of obscurity and contradiction; one account averring that the person murdered was Sir John and not Sir Thomas; and another, that both the knight and his lady fell under the stroke of the assassins. A manuscript in the Bodleian Library gives the following version of the event, on which we may observe, in passing, that Sir Piers Legh died in Paris soon after the battle of Agincourt, and that Sir John Butler, the father of Sir Thomas, was probably dead before Henry VII. ascended the throne:—"Sir John Butler, Knt." says the MS. "was slaine in his bedde by the procurement of the Lord Standley, Sir Piers Leigh and Mister William Savage joining with him in that action, (corrupting his servants,) his porter setting a light in a window to give knowledge upon the water that was about his house at Bewsey, (where your way to * comes.) They came over the moate in lether boats, and so to his cham-

The Butlers continued to occupy Bewsey till the year 1603, when Edward Butler sold the estate to the Irelands of the Hutt and Hale, whose representative, John Blackburne, Esq. is knight of the shire for the county of Lancaster. The Bewsey estate passed from the Irelands to the Athertons, and is now enjoyed by Thomas Powis, Lord Lilford, of Lilford, in Northamptonshire, in virtue of the marriage of his father the late Lord Lilford,* in the year 1797, with Henrietta Maria, daughter and heiress of Robert Vernon Atherton, of Atherton-hall, Esq. The Butlers, it is conjectured, were the patrons of the priory of the hermit friars of St. Augustine, founded before 1379, which stood near the bridge. In 32 Henry VIII. this institution was dissolved, and its possessions granted to the great monastic grantee, Thomas Holcroft.^a About forty ^{Tanner's} ^{Not. Mon.} years ago the remains of a gateway of the priory stood on Friar's-green, and some years afterwards a stone coffin was dug up near the same place, which is now in the possession of Mr. Tinsley.

sey was passed at Warrington by a ford; but Thomas the first Earl of Derby, as a compliment to his royal relative Henry VII. on his visit to Latham and Knowsley, in 1496, built the bridge at Warrington, and by this munificent act, conferred a benefit upon the two Palatine counties, the value of which it is not easy to estimate. In the time of William, the sixth Earl of Derby, a question arose between the counties of Lancaster and Chester on the one side, and the Stanley family on the other, touching the expense attendant on keeping the bridge at Warrington in repair, the bridge being much out of order, and the Earl having peremptorily refused his assistance to repair it. Upon which, says the historian of the house of Stanley, an inquiry was instituted whether any lands or tenements had been settled or appropriated by any of the noble family of Derby for the maintenance and support thereof, and upon the report of the inquiry made to the Judges, it appeared that nothing had been settled. A meeting in consequence took place of the gentlemen of the two counties, in which it was determined, that for the future, one county should repair one-half of the said bridge and the other county the other half.^b This representation of the issue of the inquiry is not consistent with a passage in Kuerden's MS.^c from which it ap- ^{Seacombe} ^{p. 71.} ^{fo. 607.}

The occasion of this murder, as stated in the MS. was a request on the part of the Earl of Derby that Sir John should swell the number of the Earl's retinue during the visit of Henry VII. which his high-spirited lady thought an indignity, and hence a quarrel arose, which terminated in blood.

On the approach of the rebels in 1745, the middle arch of this bridge was cut down; and in that state it remained till 1747, when it was rebuilt, with a watch house in the middle, at the expense of parliament;^a but the structure having become ruinous, the stone bridge was taken down in the year 1812, and the present wooden bridge, resting on stone piers, substituted for it, at the joint cost of the county of Chester and the hundred of West Derby in Lancashire. As a timber bridge this structure does credit to the architect, Mr. Harrison, of Chester, but indications are already visible of the insufficiency of the material, and the impolicy of the counsels which could, at this time of day, prefer timber to stone, will soon be made manifest by the necessity for a new erection.

Leland's
Descrip.

When Leland, the royal itinerant, visited Warrington in the reign of Henry VIII. he found it more flourishing than Manchester, and his description of the town is conveyed in these quaint but comprehensive terms—"Warrington (a pavid town) one bridge ende. The town is of "a prety bygnes. the parochie chirch is at the tayle of al the towne. It "is a better market than Manchestre. "Thelwaul," he adds, "sum- "time a havenet and little cite, as it apperith by the kinges records. "Now fische garthes marre the haven, and the old towne now a poor "village. It standith a ii miles upward from Warrington." Thelwall is not strictly within the scope of this history, but it may be remarked of it that this decayed city was built in the year 920 by Edward king of the West Saxons, at the time when he "revivified" Manchester.^b

Civil

The horrors of civil war were repeatedly felt by the inhabitants of Warrington in the disturbed times of Charles I. This town, taking its tone from the Earl of Derby, embraced the royal cause.^c After the first shock of the contest had passed, and the soldiers of the parliament had become the assailants, the Manchesterians, as they were called, commanded by Colonel Ashton and aided by Colonel Rosworm, the German engineer, marched to Warrington, which is described as a place of good strength and a great resort of the cavaliers. "Having sat down before the place on Easter Monday 1643, they besieged it in form. The royalists under Colonel Norris, the governor of Warrington, immediately fled to the church and steeple, and exceeding boldly and resolutely defended themselves for some time; but the brave Manchesterians environed them on every side, raised a battery against the church, and obliged the enemy to surrender this key of the county after a siege of five days."^c The number of royalist troops in the town, horse and foot, amounted to about 1600, of which the greatest part escaped, leaving only about 300, who were taken along with a considerable supply of arms and ammunition, and ten pieces of ordnance. Burghall, in his "Providence Improved," says, that the Earl of Derby was present at the siege, and, on perceiving that the parliamentary forces were likely to carry the place, he "set the middle of the town on fire, protesting that he would burn it all ere they should have it; which the parliament forces perceiving (seeing the fire increase) to save it from desolation, withdrew their forces after they had been there three days, and so departed for that time." Early in the month of June, in the same year, the Manchesterians once more marched against Warrington, and stormed and carried the town, taking 600 prisoners and eight pieces of cannon.^a From this period till the year 1648, no military operations appear to have taken place in Warrington, but after the battle of Ribblesdale, Oliver Cromwell pursued the remnant of Duke Hamilton's army to Warrington, on the 18th of August, where the division of the royal army under General Bailey, to the amount of 4000 men, sued for a capitulation, and became prisoners of war upon the sole terms of quarter for life.^b After the death of Cromwell, and when the Commonwealth was on the eve of its dissolution, Sir George Booth, formerly a strenuous supporter of the cause of parliament, and knight of the shire for Lancashire, being, as he himself declared, very much dissatisfied with the conduct of public affairs, invited the gentry in these parts of the country to several meetings, in which he declared that his wish was to see a free parliament with a single head. The result was, that a considerable force was collected under the command of Sir George, and, after an engagement fought on the 19th of August, 1659, at Winnington bridge, near Delamere forest, Sir George was put to route by the army under Lord Lambert, and a part of his troops, which retreated to Warrington, arrested in their progress by the parliamentary garrison at that place, consisting of four companies of foot and a troop of horse.^c

Booths.

The services of Sir George Booth at the restoration procured him the rank and title of Baron Delamere of Dunham Massey. His son Henry, the second Lord, became obnoxious to the ill fated James II. and was tried on a charge of high treason, of which he was acquitted by the unanimous voice of his Judges.^d This peer distinguished himself at the revolution in 1688, in support of the cause of the Prince of Orange, and two years afterwards was created Earl of Warrington. His son George Booth dying without male issue, the title became extinct. Mary, the only daughter and heir of the second Earl, married Harry Grey, the fourth Earl of Stamford,^e in whose family the Earldom of Warrington was revived in 1796, and is now inherited by his descendant George Harry Grey, Earl of Stamford and Warrington.^f

Between the period of the restoration and the revolution, this place is thus described by Blome, the topographer:—"Warrington," says he, "is seated on the river Mersey, over which there is a curious stone-bridge, which leadeth to Cheshire. It is a very fine and large town, which hath a considerable market on Wednesdays for linnen cloth, corn, cattle, provisions, and fish, being much resorted to by the Welsh-men; and is of note for its lampres."

Descrip.

As a military station, this place has ever since the erection of the bridge over the Mersey been generally considered as the key to the county of Lancaster, and when the career of the rebels was arrested at Preston, in 1715, they were preparing to march to Manchester and Warrington.^h In the rebellion of 1745, on the approach of the army of Prince Charles Edward from Manchester, the bridge at Warrington was cut down^g by the Liverpool Blues, who captured part of a detachment of the rebels, and committed them for safe custody to Chester castle.

* In MR. ORMEROD'S excellent History of Cheshire, it is stated, that Warrington Bridge was cut down on the 24th of June, 1745, but, as the young Chevalier did not land in Scotland till the 19th of August in that year, and as his army did not march into Lancashire till the 24th of November, this date is probably erroneous, and November should be read for June. In confirmation of this conjecture, Whitworth's Manchester Magazine of the 20th of December, 1745, may be quoted, in which it is announced, "That a ferry boat is stationed near the late bridge at Warrington, to carry "over the river Mersey, people, horses and goods at reasonable prices,"

The parish church of Warrington is of Saxon origin, and existed at the period of the Conquest. It was then the church of the hundred, dedicated to St. Elfin,^a and had the usual endowment of one carucate of land. Subsequently it has undergone great alterations, and the patron has been changed to St. Helen, but the ancient site remains unaltered. This living is a rectory, valued in the Liber Regis at £40. The church patronage is in Lord Lilford, and the Rev. Robert Atherton Rawstorne, M.A. is the incumbent. Two of the ancient chapels belonging to this church remain, those of the Massys* and the Butlers. A small monument to the memory of the last of the Massys stood in the chapel bearing their name for many years, but it is now removed, and this chapel contains several monuments to the memory of the Patten family, one of them exhibiting an exquisite specimen of Italian sculpture in memory of Thomas Wilson Patten, who died at Naples in 1819. In the opposite chapel is a magnificent tomb of Sir Thomas Boteler and his lady, with their effigies hand in hand, he in armour, she in a remarkable mitre shaped cap, surrounded by various sculptured saints† and intercessors, but without inscription. Anciently there were three figures on the painted glass in the windows, probably benefactors, consisting of Thomas Earl of Lancaster, of a Bannister, and of a Holland.‡ The other places of religious worship of the established church are Trinity-chapel, in Sankey-street, and St. James's church, (parish of Grappenhall, county of Chester) built in 1776.

Chapels.

‡ Holme's MSS. in British Museum.

Sir Richard Taylor, Clerk, filled the situation of head master, has probably always been liberal, and at present it amounts to from six to eight hundred pounds a year. This excellent institution, which ought to be of essential benefit to the town, in every successive age, has been a subject of much dissention and litigation between the master and the inhabitants, to so great an extent that the interference of the Court of Chancery has been found necessary. By a decree of that Court, of the date of 1820, it is ordered that the head master shall have paid to him, by the trustees, three hundred pounds a-year, with the gratuitous use of the school-house, garden, and lands adjoining, with a power on the part of the trustees to increase the salary when the number of scholars exceeds thirty. The same decree directs that from sixty to 100 pounds a-year shall be paid to the usher; and from forty to sixty pounds a-year to the writing master. No boy is to be admitted to the school till he has attained the age of seven years, and can read English, and then he is to be taught freely, without fee or reward, except "four pennies" to be paid annually, as directed in the foundation deed. At present the number of scholars is about thirty. Several men of talent have received their early education here, and amongst the number George Tierney, Esq. M. P. for Knaresborough. Lord Lilford is the patron of the school, and the Rev. William Bordman, A. M. is the head master.

The Blue Coat School, in Winwick-street, established at least a century and a half ago,* has long been a favourite institution with the piously disposed inhabitants of Warrington, and hence we find no fewer than seventy-three benefactors to that establishment, who have bequeathed legacies to the collective amount of 1396*l.* and presented benefactions to the amount of 935*l.* which sums have been laid out by the trustees, in lands, at West Leigh and Warrington, in Lancashire, and at Hatton, in Cheshire, yielding about two hundred pounds a-year, exclusive of the rent of a field in Latchford, the gift of Mrs. Dannett. The school has also the reversion of an estate in Sankey, estimated at the value of six thousand pounds, which property was bequeathed by John Watkins, Esq. in 1797, and on the demise of Mr. Norman, the present possessor, will come into the hands of the trustees. Certain rent charges were also demised to the same school, by Arthur Borron, Esq. in 1685, chargeable on an estate in Bedford, which property comes ultimately to the charity.^a At present fourteen boys and ten girls are clothed and educated here, on the system of Dr. Bell, exclusive of one hundred and twenty boys and thirty girls, who also receive instruction, but are not clothed.

There is also, in Winwick-street, a Female Charity School, established in the year 1814, where 150 girls are taught to read and sew.

About the middle of the last century, a Collegiate Establishment, Academy intended to prepare young men for the ministry, and to afford to the sons of Protestant Dissenters the advantages of an university education, was formed in this place,^b of which the celebrated Dr. Priestley^b In 1757. became tutor in the languages and Belles Lettres, and had for his coadjutors, Dr. John Taylor, author of the Hebrew concordance; Dr. John Aikin, the elder; Dr. Reinhold Forster, the naturalist; Dr. Enfield, Dr. Walker, and the Rev. Gilbert Wakefield, all resident in Warrington.* This constellation of talent was not sufficient to sustain the institution; "though all the tutors in my time," says Dr. Priestley, "lived in the most perfect harmony, though we all exerted ourselves to the utmost, and though there was no complaint of want of discipline, the academy did not flourish." Disagreements arose between Dr. Taylor and the trustees, many of the patrons of the academy became lukewarm, and in the year 1783 the institution was dissolved. Three years afterwards a similar establishment was begun at Manchester, and continued in that place till 1803, when it was removed to York, where it still continues under the designation of "THE YORK COLLEGE."

In the best days of the academy, the General Subscription Library
 * In 1760. at Warrington was established,^a without any distinction of sects or parties; and the public press in this place had the honour to issue the celebrated work of John Howard, the philanthropist, "On Prisons," the author residing in the town while it passed through the press, under the literary revision of Dr. Aikin. Mrs. Barbauld's works, and that in particular which stamped her character with the world, her poem of "CORSIKA," were printed in this town; the amiable and highly-gifted Roscoe, also made his literary debut from the Warrington press, his poem of "MOUNT PLEASANT" having been printed by the late Mr. Eyres; and from the same press, under the direction of Messrs. Had-dock, have issued the works of Dr. Ferriar, Mr. Gibson, and others. It is also a fact not unworthy of mention, as connected with the literary history of this place, that Mr. Mc'Gowan lived in Bridge-street, Warrington, where he carried on the business of a baker, while he was composing his pungent satires of "The Shaver," and "The Dialogues of Devils." Litherland, the inventor of the lever watch, was a native of this place; and John Harrison, the maker of the time keeper, commonly called Longitude Harrison, a native of Fouldby, in the county of York, was long an inhabitant of Warrington. At present there is no newspaper published in Warrington, though the first public journal, as well as the first stage coach in the county, issued from this town.

Subjects of literature and science point so strongly at the classical Orford ground of Orford Hall, in this township, the residence of the Evelyn Hall. of his day, as to allow of a little extension beyond the limits of the town of Warrington itself. This mansion is celebrated as the residence of the venerable John Blackburne, Esq. who, after a life of scientific pursuits, principally in the departments of botany and natural history, died in 1796, at the advanced age of ninety-six years. It is recorded of this amiable man, that he was the second gentleman in England who cultivated the pine-apple, and he was probably the first to cultivate the cotton plant to any practical purpose, having raised in his garden at Orford, a supply of British cotton, from four ounces of which was made a muslin dress for his lady, with the intention to appear at Court in it on the King's birth day, in 1793, but a change of dress, occasioned by the death of a near relative, prevented it. Miss Blackburne inherited her father's taste for botany, and added to it a still stronger love for natural history. Her house, in the immediate vicinity of Warrington, was a perfect museum, and had to boast some of the finest transatlantic

* The late Dr. Percival, of Manchester, a native of Warrington, was a pupil in this Academy. specimens in this kingdom.* On the death of this lady, her collection was removed to Hale, where it is still preserved.

An Institution, originating in the monthly meetings of a few literary and scientific gentlemen in the town and neighbourhood of Warrington, was formed in 1812, "for the cultivation of science, literature, and the arts." The meetings took place in the large room of the museum of natural history, then recently established in Warrington by Mr. Greening, and lectures were delivered every alternate Friday. To promote the objects of the society, books were purchased, and papers and communications on subjects of literature and science were received and read. This society, after continuing to prosecute the objects of its beneficial pursuits for some years, under the presidency of John Blackburne, Esq. M. P. became dormant in 1820, but it is still in existence, and is likely to be soon revived.

The soil in the neighbourhood of Warrington is in general deep and fertile; for horticultural purposes it is much esteemed, and Manchester, and the other large towns in the hundreds of Salford and Blackburn, are greatly indebted to it for an early supply of vegetables and roots, particularly for cabbages, gooseberries, and cucumbers, and for the favourite root of the county—the potatoe. Formerly a large quantity of potatoes was exported from hence to the ports of the Mediterranean, but the home consumption, from our increased population, has now become so large, that this branch of foreign traffic is no longer prosecuted; at least, not to any great extent.

Warrington, though not strictly a port, enjoys, through the medium of the Mersey and Irwell navigation, many of the advantages of commerce. At the time of the spring tides, the Mersey rises from ten to twelve feet at Warrington bridge, and vessels from seventy to one hundred tons burden can navigate the river to this point. The communication between Manchester and Liverpool, by means of this navigation, is incessant, and the brick-dust coloured sails of the barges are seen every hour of the day on their passage, flickering in the wind. In primitive times there was a valuable fishery in the Mersey, which Roger of Poitou gave, on the Lancashire side, to the Abbot of Shrewsbury, while that on the Cheshire side, was conferred by William, the third baron of Halton, on the prior of Norton. After passing through the hands of various proprietors, it was purchased by Robert Pickering, barrister-at-law, and now belongs, on the Lancashire side, to John Arthur Borron and Edward Pemberton, Esqrs. As late as the year 1763, the value of this fishery was estimated at four hundred pounds a-year, but the perpetual disturbance and depredations to which the fry is subject have greatly reduced the number of salmon,† and the fine-flavoured smelts or sparlings, which annually in spring came up the river in shoals, are now so greatly diminished both in number and size, as to render the fishery much less an object of economy and luxury to the inhabitants of modern, than it was to those of ancient Warrington.

* Among other obligations received from Dr. Kendrick, of Warrington, we are indebted to that gentleman for a correction in page 142, vol. I. The Dr. says, it is true Mrs. Anna Blackburne was the correspondent of Linneus, but the genus not the species was named after her, and not by him, but by Reinhold Forster, the celebrated naturalist, who accompanied Captain Cook in his second voyage, in testimony of her great acquirements in natural history, and her kindness to him during his abode in Warrington.

The poor-rate at present is lower than the same impost was ten years ago, by upwards of 1000*l.* a-year, notwithstanding the increase of population within that period. The sum collected from the inhabitants of this township, in the year ending the 30th of April, 1825, amounted to 3863*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.* of which sum 809*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* was paid for county-rate and constable-rate, leaving 3053*l.* 18*s.* 11*d.* applicable to the maintenance of the poor.

and Fairs.

The chartered market of Warrington is held on the Wednesday, when considerable business is transacted in grain, butchers' meat, vegetables, &c. There is also an inferior market on Saturday. The fairs, of which there are two annually, are chartered; the first commences on the 18th of July, and the second on the 30th of November, and they are each of ten days' continuance, for the sale of woollen cloth, horses, horned cattle, sheep, pigs, and pedlery. There is also a fortnight fair held on the Wednesday, for the sale of fat and lean cattle, as well as for sheep and swine, which for some years was discontinued, but has been revived with success within the present year.

Institutions.

The inhabitants of this place have the honour to afford their support to a number of valuable institutions, religious and secular, the first class of which consists of the Warrington Auxiliary Bible Society, established in 1811; the Ladies' Branch of the Auxiliary Bible Society, established in 1818; the Warrington Church Missionary Association, established in 1822; and the Warrington Branch of the Wesleyan Methodist Auxiliary Missionary Society, for the Liverpool district, established in 1816. There is also here a district committee of the Society for promoting Christian knowledge, established on the 15th of November, 1824, the object of which is to supply the poor with Bibles, Testaments, Common Prayer Books, and religious tracts gratuitously, or at reduced prices. No report has yet been published of this institution, but the funds amounted in April 1825, to upwards of £400.

A Society, venerable for its age, and highly exemplary in its object, was established here as early as the beginning of the last century, for the purpose of affording relief to the widows and orphans of clergymen in the archdeaconry of Chester; the meetings of which society are held annually in this place, under the patronage of the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of the diocese. The relief dispensed by this institution amounts to about one thousand pounds a year, which fund is supplied by annual subscriptions and donations, principally within the archdeaconry, and from interest of money invested by the society in government securities, aided by the proceeds of an annual collection made in the parish church of Warrington.

The Warrington Dispensary was opened on the 12th of April, 1810, in a building rented by the Committee, in the Market-place, but in the year 1818, a neat and commodious erection was built for the permanent use of this valuable establishment, at a cost of £1030, in Butter Market-street, where about 1000 persons yearly partake of its benefits. Still further to increase the public advantage from the Dispensary, an establishment, with proper apparatus, kept in the house, has been united to it on the principle of the London Royal Humane Society,* for the recovery of drowned persons, &c. and provision made for dispensing rewards to those who assist in rescuing others from the perils of drowning, or in their recovery when animation is suspended. The Ladies' Charity, established in 1819, affords relief to poor women in child-birth, and with a fund of about £100 a year, judiciously administered by a committee of ladies, serves to mitigate the pressure of poverty at a period when the objects of its bounty stand most in need.

In the year 1813, an act of parliament was passed, "For paving and improving the town of Warrington, and for building a new Bridewell in the said town." Under the authority of which act commissioners have been appointed, whose duty it is to attend to the internal regulation and improvement of the town, and by whom a temporary place of confinement has been erected, called a Bridewell.

Public

The other public buildings are a Town-hall, a Market-hall, two Cloth-halls, Assembly-rooms, and a Theatre. The Town-hall or Sessions-house, built in the year 1820, by the inhabitants, at a cost of £2800, is situated in Irlam-street. The Market-hall, used on the market days for the sale of corn, and let during the fairs to a number of persons as joint tenants for the sale of flannels, is in the Market-place; and a handsome suite of rooms are built over it for the purpose of holding assemblies, which formerly were well attended here, but of late years have fallen almost into disuse. Adjoining to the Market-hall, to the north, there is a Cloth-hall, forming three sides of a square, the ground floor of which is divided into shops for the sale of fustians, hardware, linen drapery and trinkets, during the fair, and on the market days, and the upper part is used as a Cloth-hall. There is also a Cloth-hall in Butter market-street and Bank-street, built in 1817, with a range of shops on the ground floor, and a room for the Cloth-hall, extending the whole length of the building, 84 yards long by 6 yards wide.

The Gas works, in Mersey-street, consist of very extensive premises, containing two gasometers, each of a capacity to receive 20,000 cubic feet. The town was first lighted with gas in March 1821, and the act incorporating the company passed on the 15th of May, 1822. The property is held in £20 shares, and the cost of the works amounted to about £15,000.

A very flourishing Savings Bank was established here, in 1818, into which the sum of 95,837*l.* 19*s.* had been paid on the 20th of November, 1824, and 37,561*l.* 19*s.* 10*d.* withdrawn, leaving a balance in favour of the depositors, at that time, of 58,275*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*

In the year 1817, a florist society was established in Warrington, and in the year 1824, its plans were extended to horticulture, for which productions the neighbourhood is deservedly celebrated. The meetings of this society are held three times in the year, and its benefits cannot fail to be considerable.

Florists.

Some advances have been made towards the establishment of a Mechanics' Institute; and if that class of society for whose benefit it is intended, manifest the requisite degree of zeal in the cause, the object of its public-spirited promoters will assuredly be accomplished. A public meeting, convened by the Constables, and over which the Rector of the parish presided, was held in the New Assembly-rooms, on the 6th of June, 1825, at which it was resolved, that, for the purpose of affording Mechanics the means of obtaining a knowledge of the principles of the arts and sciences, connected with their occupations, there be established a "Warrington Mechanics' Institution, and Library, comprising works on useful subjects, except in religion and politics."

The government of the town, like that of Manchester, is vested in the constables, and these officers act under the superintendence and direction of the magistrates of the Warrington division of the hundred of West Derby. The constables, and other local officers are chosen yearly, in the month of October, at the court leet of the lord of the manor, John Blackburne, Esq. M.P.* when all other business relating to the manorial rights, and its jurisdiction is transacted. The tolls of the market belong to the lord of the manor, but are at present in lease to Mr. Pickmere.

lation.

The population of this place has been slowly progressive during the present century, as will be seen from the head of this chapter; and the following returns from the bills of mortality, exhibiting a contrast at a distance of thirty years, will serve to show, that the increase of inhabitants has only been about 25 per cent within that period :—

Warrington ranks amongst the earliest manufacturing towns in the county of Lancaster, but its fabrics have been subject to considerable changes: coarse linens and checks formed the first manufactures of this place; they gave way to a species of table linen, called huckaback: which was succeeded by strong sail cloth, (poldavy) of which Warrington is represented to have made as much at one time as supplied half the British navy; this trade, partly owing to the cessation of war, has declined, and the principal manufacture at present is cotton yarn, velveteens, calicoes, and muslins. There are in this town and neighbourhood now at work, (June, 1825) seventeen steam engines, with an aggregate power of 334 horses; of these engines, six are employed in spinning cotton, and two in weaving by power; three are used in the glass works; one in wire drawing; one in a tannery; and four in the grinding of corn. The refining of sugar, formerly carried on to a considerable extent, no longer prevails here; and the copper works are discontinued.

The glass manufacture, however, continues to flourish; the fabrication of flint and glass bottles was among the early trades of the place, and crown glass works have recently been added. The pin trade exists to a considerable extent, and "Lancashire files," and other artisan tools are made in large numbers. The brewers still produce fine Warrington ale from malt, for which this place has been long celebrated; and the continual intercourse by land and water between Liverpool and Manchester, as well as from the south serves to enrich the town. Between sixty and seventy coaches on an average pass through Warrington every day, and the principal streets are kept by them in a state of perpetual animation.

* The manor of Warrington was purchased by the grandfather of the present possessor, from the Booth's family, Earls of Warrington, about sixty years ago.

Of the 7019 families in this parish, 563 are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 6241 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft; the remaining 215 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed.

Church.

The parish church, a fine stately building, is dedicated to All Saints; the living is a rectory, valued in the Liber Regis at £80 13s. 4d. yearly, of which the Earl of Bradford is the patron, and his lordship's brother, the Honourable and Rev. George Bridgeman, M.A. the incumbent. The rector of the parish, in virtue of his ecclesiastical office, is lord of the manor; the living ranks amongst the most valuable in Lancashire, and a rectory house and glebe lands‡ are attached to it. The church is ancient beyond any accounts written or traditionary, and has four chapels under its jurisdiction and patronage, three of them in the chapelries already enumerated, and the fourth within the town, called St. George's church, erected in 1781, and of which the Rev. Benjamin Powell is the incumbent.

v. i. p. 20.

The present parish church is a handsome and substantial structure, composed of a nave, a spacious chancel, (more modern than the body of the church,) and two side aisles. There is here an ancient monument to the memory of Sir William and Lady Mabel Bradshaigh, who died in the reign of Edward III. and another to Sir Roger Bradshaigh, Bart. one of his descendants, a gallant supporter of the cause of Charles I. The history of Sir William and his lady is remarkable and well authenticated: In those ages, when husbands left their wives to go a crusading, Sir William Bradshaigh set out to the Holy Land in quest of adventures, leaving his fair spouse at home to pray for his success. After an absence of some years the dame grew weary of her widowed state, and, listening to the suit of Sir Osmund Nevil, a Welsh Knight, gave him her hand in marriage. At the end of ten years Sir William returned, in the garb of a pilgrim; when his fair Mabel, recognizing his features, under his disguise, acknowledged her lawful lord and returned to her allegiance. On the discovery being made, Sir Osmund fled to Newton-park, whither he was pursued, and fell under the sword of the enraged husband. The lady, being considered not wholly blameless, was condemned to expiate her offence by a penance during her life, and was doomed to walk bare-foot and bare-legged once every week from the chapel in Haigh-hall, two miles distant, to a cross at the top of Standishgate, which still bears the name of Mab's Cross. It is presumed, that this ancient pair were fully reconciled before their death, as it appears from their monument, formerly in a small chapel at the south side of the church, but now removed to a less eligible situation, that they have lain here for five centuries harmoniously mingling their kindred dust. The monument consists of two prostrate figures—he in an antique coat of mail, cross-legged, unsheathing his sword, and she in a long robe veiled, her hands elevated and conjoined in a praying posture.*

In Wigan, as in many other parts of Lancashire, the Roman Catholics are a numerous body, and they have here two large and elegant chapels, the higher chapel dedicated to St. Mary, built in 1818, at a cost of about £6000; and the lower chapel, dedicated to St. John, completed in July, 1819, at a cost of upwards of £8000, both of them built of stone, and both situated in Standishgate. In addition to these chapels, there are five places of religious worship here appropriated to the use of Protestant Dissenters, namely,

The Methodist Chapel,^b in Wallgate,

The Presbyterian Chapel,^c in Chapel-lane,

The Independent Chapel,^d (St. Paul's) in Standishgate,

The Baptist Chapel,^e in Lord-street, and

The Independent Chapel, in Hope-street, built in 1818, and enlarged in 1820.

* On a grave stone in the church yard, there is an antique cross, with the inscription OL 1186, the date of which has puzzled the curious; some contending for 1186, others for 1586, and others again for 1686. Underneath on the same stone there is written in modern letters—R. Leigh. A beautifully carved stone font, evidently of other times, is placed on the south side of the church, for the humble purpose of receiving rain water from a spout.

In the Sunday School of All Saints, 600 children are instructed, and in that of St. George's, 400; the two Catholic Schools contain 900, there being 450 in each;* the Independent Schools instruct 230, consisting of 150 at Hope-street Chapel, and 80 at the chapel in Standishgate; in the Baptist Chapel there are 140 Sunday scholars, and at the Methodist Chapel 100.

The river Douglas, which glides past Wigan, is renowned in the early history of Britain, as the scene of king Arthur's most splendid achievements. On the banks of this river, according to Ninnius, that gallant monarch fought four of the most memorable of his battles against the Saxon invaders. About eighty years ago, a large collection of horse and human bones, and an amazing quantity of horse shoes, scattered over a large extent of ground, and exhibiting evidence of sanguinary military operations, were found near this place.^a

Though the clergy are generally amongst the warmest supporters of loyalty, yet, when the barons warred against Edward II. and his favourites, the De Spencers, Robert de Childerhow, the parson of this parish, sent to the assistance of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, his son, Adam de Childerhow, and John, the son of John de Knolle, with arms and horses, together with four other men; for this offence he was brought to trial, two years after the execution of the Earl of Lancaster at Pontefract, charged also with the further crime of publicly preaching sedition in the church at Wigan, and offering absolution to such as would join the standard of the barons. Of these charges he was found guilty, and condemned to be publicly executed, but his life was saved by a judicious application of the contents of his purse.

Etymology.

Camden surmises, that the ancient name of this town was Wi-biggin, of which name, he says, he has nothing to observe, but that Biggin is a Lancashire word for houses, any more than of the town, but that it is neat and populous, and a corporation consisting of mayor and burgesses, and the rector of the church was, as he had been told, the lord of the town. On the etymology of the place there are various hypotheses: one, in conformity with Camden's, is, that it was originally called Wee-biggin, or Little Buildings; another, that as Wig signifies a fight in Saxon, and as Wig-en is only its plural, the name has reference to the repeated conflicts in the neighbourhood, between the ancient Britons and the Saxons; a third conjecture is, that as in all the charters, as well as in the Valor Beneficiorum, it is called Wygan or Wyggan, the name is to be traced to the old English Wye—a place of safety, and gan to go to. As to the rector being lord of the town, it is so far correct, that the first charter was granted to John Marshall, parson of Wigan church,^a and his ecclesiastical successors are still lords of the manor. The first patent for paving the town of Wigan and erecting a bridge over the Douglas was granted 7 Edward III.

past, in common with Lancaster, Preston, and Liverpool, had many beautiful houses, they were then falling into ruin.

Wigan had the honour of giving birth to a writer of considerable eminence of the name of John Leland, in 1691, who in his sixth year was deprived of his understanding and memory by the small pox, which expunged all his former ideas. In this deplorable state he continued near a year, when his faculties seemed to spring up anew, and, though he did not retain the least trace of any impression made upon him before the distemper, his apprehension was afterwards quick and his memory strong. At mature age he became a pastor of a congregation of Protestant Dissenters, in Dublin, and his luminous works, entitled, "A View of the Deistical Writers, &c." and, the "Advantage and necessity of the Christian Religion," place him in the first rank of the defenders of that faith, to which by his life he was an ornament.*

Fuller, in his Worthies, says—"About Wiggin and elsewhere in this county, men go a fishing with spades, and mathooks, more likely one would think to catch moles than fishes with such instruments.* First, they pierce the turfie ground, and under it meet with a black and deadish water, and in it small fishes do swim." Old Michael Drayton, twenty years before had said, —"those that toll for turfee with peating spades do find

"Fish living in the earth, contrary to their kind."

The Reformation was hailed by a large body of the inhabitants of Wigan as a great deliverance from ecclesiastical domination and papal superstition, and the Rev. Edward Fleetwoodde, rector of the parish, ranked amongst the most zealous supporters of the reformed faith.† The professors of the ancient creed, were then, as now, very numerous, and the neighbouring priory of Benedictine monks at Upholland, was one of the most favourite seats of monastic power and influence in the county.

During the civil war, in the reign of Charles I.† Wigan, like Warrington, was strenuously devoted to the royal cause, and, if any town in Lancashire could with propriety be called the head-quarters of the Earl of Derby, Wigan was that town. Hither he repaired on all great emergencies, and his principal battles were fought in this place, or in its immediate neighbourhood. Early in the year 1643, Sir John Smeaton, Major-general of the parliamentary force, having obtained possession of Preston and Lancaster, marched to Wigan, where the Earl of Derby was strongly entrenched, and which town was known to be a deposit for the treasure and ammunition of the loyalists. On the arrival of the parliamentary force before the town, supported by a large body of club-men, a desperate battle took place, which was well contested on both sides, but victory at length declared in favour of the assailants. The number of prisoners made on this occasion by the Major-general amounted to about 800 men, with a thousand stand of arms, and 2000*l.* in treasure.‡ The Earl of Derby, who had withdrawn from the town at the close of the battle, soon after re-possessioned himself of this place, when it was again attacked in the month of March, by Colonel Ashton, at the head of 2000 horse and foot. The struggle on this occasion was less resolute than in the former month, the principal part of the garrison having withdrawn to Latham-house, but a body of sharpshooters retired to the church steeple, and kept up an incessant fire, by which more of the assailants were killed, than had fallen in taking the town.^a On the threat of Colonel Roseworm, to blow up the church, if the troops in the steeple did not desist from firing, they were obliged to surrender, and their whole number, amounting to 86, became prisoners. Finding that the inhabitants were warmly attached to the royal cause, Colonel Ashton ordered the outworks and the fortifications of the town to be demolished, and the gates and posts placed in aid of the works were pulled up.

From the period of the active campaign of 1643, to the year 1648, this place remained tranquil, but when Oliver Cromwell had driven the Scotch army, under the Duke of Hamilton, from Preston, he pursued the fugitives through Wigan, and overthrew them at the pass of Winwick. Three years afterwards, when the hopes of the Royalists were once more revived by the appearance of Charles II. in the field, despatches were sent by that Prince to the Earl of Derby, summoning him from the Isle of Man, to join the royal standard. Having landed at the mouth of the Wyre, in the Fylde, at the head of 300 troops, his lordship marched to Preston, whence he sent precepts, requiring the inhabitants of the county to join him at that place in arms. This call was but feebly obeyed; and when his Lordship marched from Preston to the south, the number of his troops did not exceed six hundred. Manchester was at that time occupied by the Cheshire and Lancashire militia, and Colonel Lilburn, who had arrived from York with ten troops of dragoons, to join the army of Cromwell, which was daily expected from Scotland, advanced at the head of his forces to Wigan, for the purpose of intercepting the march of the Earl of Derby. Having posted his horse in Wigan-lane, and lined the hedges with his infantry, the Earl of Derby on his approach was saluted with a galling fire of musketry. Astonished, but not dismayed by this reception, the Earl halted, and dividing his small force into two bodies of three hundred each, he took upon himself the command of the van, giving the rear to Sir Thomas Tildesly. A charge was then sounded, and this gallant little band twice cut their way through the main body of the enemy, but, attempting it a third time, and being environed and oppressed by unequal numbers, the Lord Widdrington, Sir Thomas Tildesly, and many other brave and worthy men were slain. Sir Robert Throgmorton, Knight Marshal, was left also for dead upon the field, but, being taken up by a poor woman, and consigned to the care of Sir Roger Bradshaw, he recovered. After displaying prodigies of valour, the Earl of Derby took refuge in a house, in the Market-place, at Wigan, from whence he escaped the same night, and pursued his route towards Worcester, attended by three faithful followers. His lordship, on his departure, left behind him a brass plate with the Arms of Man, encircled by the garter, and this plate remained in the same house (the Dog Inn) till the year 1824, when it was sold to the present Earl of Derby by a descendant of the family that afforded refuge to his noble ancestor. The battle of Worcester was little less disastrous than that of Wigan, and soon afterwards, the Earl having fallen into the hands of his enemies, was brought to trial at Chester, on a charge of high treason against the Commonwealth, and executed at Bolton, on Wednesday, the 15th of October, 1657.^b A monumental pillar, erected in spot where Sir Thomas Tildesly fell, conveys to posterity the memory of that gallant officer, and records his attachment to the royal house, to whose service he devoted his fortune and his life.

In the civil war of 1715, to restore the house of Stuart, the rebel force from the north did not advance further than Preston. At that place they suffered a signal overthrow, and five of their number, namely, James Blundell, James Finch, John Macillewray, Wm. Whalley, and James Burn, were brought to Wigan, and executed in this place, on the 10th of February, in the following year. In the year 1745, Prince Charles Edward marched through Wigan, at the head of his troops, from Preston to Manchester, but no military operation occurred in this place.

Wigan is governed by a corporation, consisting of a Mayor,* Recorder, twelve Aldermen, and two Bailiffs, with a sword and mace bearer. The charters of incorporation, under which the borough is governed, are of the date of the 27th of Elizabeth, and the 18th Charles II. but the corporation has the honour to possess no fewer than nine royal charters, namely:—Of the 30 Henry III.; 7 Edward II.; 24 Edward III.; 2 Richard II.; 1 Henry IV.; 1 Henry V.; 27 Elizabeth; 14 Charles I.; 18 Charles II.; exclusive of a charter of confirmation granted by James II. in the first year of his reign.

The right of the borough to return members to parliament is prescriptive; the first return was made as early as the 23d of Edward I. and twelve years afterwards another return was made, but from that time to the sixteenth century, comprehending a period of upwards of 200 years, the privilege was suffered to remain dormant. The representative history of Wigan shows, that at the time when this borough resumed its ancient privilege, it was the practice of the constituent to pay for the services of the representative body, and it is recorded that “Raufe Markland, of the Meadows,” was the last member for Wigan who received the wages of independence. Though there is no decision of parliament upon the subject, the right of election is vested in the free burgesses by custom, and the number of voters amounts to about 100. The mayor and the bailiffs are the returning officers; and the borough is at present represented by Lieutenant-Colonel James Lindsay, of the Balcarres family; and by James Alexander Hodson, Esq. of Up-Holland Grove. The corporation have a power of admitting non-resident and honorary burgesses to vote at elections without limitation, and this power has been sometimes greatly abused. Many very expensive contests have happened in this borough. The patronage of the corporation was contested between the Duke of Portland and the late Lord Lonsdale, of electioneering memory; Gen. Byng, Esq. being supported by the former, and Sir Fletcher Norton by the latter. The Duke of Portland succeeded at an expense of 20,000*l.* and retained the patronage from 1768 till 1802, the mayor and corporation having, in the year 1801, made about one hundred burgesses. At the election in 1802, Robert Holt Leigh, Esq. of Hindley Hall, and Whitley, near Wigan, since created a Baronet, and John Hodson, Esq. of Ellerbeck, were elected members for this borough, an honour which they both enjoyed for five successive parliaments, and which they voluntarily resigned at the general election in 1820.

* The Mayor, by prescription, used to create two honorary burgesses, now the privilege is confined to one. The election of burgesses is in the Jury, and Court Leet. The Mayor, in virtue of his office, is always a Justice of the Peace, which function he continues to possess for one whole year after the expiration of his term of office.

Town

The Corporation are accommodated with a handsome Town-hall, the history of which is conveyed in its inscription :—This Town-hall was “ re-built at the joint expense of the Right Honourable the Earl of Barrymore, and Sir Roger Bradshaigh, then members of parliament “ for this Borough, A. D. 1720.”

Public
Institutions.Free School.

Wigan has to boast of a number of public institutions, which reflect credit on the town, and some of which improve the character, and enlarge the minds of the inhabitants. Of this description is the Free Grammar School of the borough, founded prior to the 16th of James I. by whom is not known ; but it is presumed, that a small cottage, standing upon “ The Old School Common ” was the original school ; and Mr. James Leigh, gentleman, who, in the year 1619, gave an annual rent charge of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* to the school, was amongst the original benefactors. In the 16th Charles II. several messuages and lands in Aspull and Wigan, and an annuity of 20*l.* a year, issuing out of certain estates in London, were conveyed to Sir Roger Bradshaigh, and the other trustees, for the use of the school. The revenues of this school were further augmented by a messuage and croft, containing about half an acre, called “ Cockerham’s House and Croft,” situated in “ the Mill-gate,” conveyed by an indenture, bearing date the 22d of January, 1723, upon which the trustees soon after erected the present handsome school-house of stone. A few years before, Mrs. Welles, who died in the year 1717, presented to the trustees the dwelling-house now belonging to the school. To give permanency and increased advantage to this grammar school, an act of incorporation was obtained by the governors, on the 9th of June, 1812, by which act it was directed, that the school should henceforth be called, “ the Free Grammar School of the Borough of Wigan ;” ten governors were appointed out of the members of the corporation, to have perpetual succession, and a common seal ; and the power was given to augment their number to fifteen. The governors are invested with the power to elect masters to teach and instruct the children, not only in grammar, and classical learning, but also in the modern languages, writing, arithmetic, geography, and mathematics, and in such, and in so many of the other branches of literature, and education, as shall, in the judgment of the governors, be proper and necessary to render this foundation of the most general use and benefit, and as the state of the revenues of the school will admit. It is “ nevertheless directed, that there shall be always one head master, and one usher, at least,” who are to be paid such annual stipends as to the governors shall seem meet, so that the salary of the head master be not less than 100*l.* per annum, clear of all deductions ; and that the usher’s be not less than 40*l.* per annum, clear of all deductions. At present, a quarterage of 10*s.* 6*d.* is paid by each youth for instruction in writing and arithmetic ; and 7*s.* per quarter for writing only. The act of incorporation also vests the governors with power to make statutes and bye laws. In virtue of the powers given by the act, the governors have sold the property at Aspull, and purchased an estate of eighteen acres of land, called, “ Dennon,” in the township of Appleton, in the county of Chester. There was originally no limitation to the number of scholars, but the trustees have found it necessary to restrict it to eighty. They are admitted at any age, provided they can read in the English testament, and they are allowed to remain till their parents or guardians think proper to remove them from the school. There are no exhibitions, or other University advantages belonging to this school. The head master is Mr. Thomas Collett; and the usher, Mr. George Spry.

A school of an humble description, established in the year 1773, by BlueCoat School. voluntary subscriptions, and called "The Blue Coat School of Wigan," affords instruction in English, writing, and arithmetic to forty poor children, who are clothed as well as educated. The children are allowed to remain in the school four years, and are afterwards, with the assistance of the charity funds, of which there are several in Wigan for that purpose, apprenticed to respectable masters. Arrangements are now making to unite this school with the National School, and, when they are completed, 260 other boys, exclusive of the blue coat boys, will be taught reading, writing, and arithmetic, and instruction will also be afforded to a certain number of girls.^a New school rooms are erecting in Hallgate-street for this purpose, towards the expense of which the National School Society in London have, by two grants, contributed £350, and liberal subscriptions have been entered into by the principal inhabitants of Wigan.

^a Annual Report.

The School of Industry, established in 1823, is an excellent insti-School of Industry tution, having for its object the education of girls for domestic servants, and, in due time, for notable housewives. The funds of this institution are obtained partly by annual subscriptions and partly by collections after sermons, but they are principally derived from the profits of the Bazaar, in which the products of the children's industry are sold to their patrons, the ladies of the town and neighbourhood. The number of scholars at present (June, 1825) is twenty-six. This school is attached to St. George's Church, as the Blue Coat School is to the Parish Church.

Mural Tablets in the Parish Church record a number of other bene-Charities factions from the date of 1613 to 1758, which now yield, collectively, an income of about 300*l.* a year, applicable to the various pious uses therein specified.

One of the modern charities of Wigan is called the Indigent Cloth-Clothing Society. ing Society—the society for clothing the indigent. This institution, established in the year 1817, affords warm clothing and beds and bedding to the objects of their bounty, during the four winter months; child-bed linen is also lent to poor women. The funds are supplied principally by subscriptions, in aid of which there is an annual charity ball.

Wigan, like all the principal towns of Lancashire, has its Auxiliary Bible Society; Bible this institution was established in 1820, and has attached Society. to it a Ladies' Association. These societies are sufficiently flourishing to be enabled to afford efficient assistance to the parent stock, and in the year 1824, the sum of 80*l.* was remitted to the British and Foreign Bible Society, in London, 10*l.* of which was on behalf the Ladies' Association.

The Wigan Dispensary, established in the year 1798, is supported Dispensary. principally by annual subscriptions and charitable bequests. The building applied to this benevolent purpose is a stone erection situated in King-street, and built in the year 1801. The poor, under the sanction of a subscriber's recommendation, receive advice and medicine as well as surgical aid, when it is required, gratuitously. In this house of mercy the children of the poor are vaccinated free of expense to their parents. During the year ending the 31st of December, 1824, 559 patients were admitted to the benefits of the Dispensary, and 95 children were vaccinated. The total number of patients admitted since the house was opened to the commencement of the year 1825, is 18,474. To increase the benefit of this institution, a resident house surgeon has been added to the establishment, by whom the poor requiring his attendance are visited at their own houses.

Savings Bank.

The Savings Bank, in Commercial-court, was established in the year 1821, and contained on the publication of the last report, in Nov. 1824, the sum of 22,750*l.* 8*s.* 0½*d.*, invested by 477 depositors.

Mechanics' Institute.

A Mechanics' Institute and Library was formed here in the early part of the year 1825, and within the first six months it has to boast no fewer than 170 members. A good stock of useful books are accumulating in the library-room, in Manks' Arms Court, and the prospects of the institution are held to be extremely encouraging.

Public Works.

The public works of the town are Water Works and Gas Works. The former were established in the year 1761 by the authority of parliament, and afford a constant supply of fine fresh water, conveyed from the springs at Whitley, through iron pipes, to the dwellings of the inhabitants. The Gas Works, situated in Chapel-lane, were established in 1823, and by means of two gasometers, each containing 17,000 cubic feet, the consumers are supplied with excellent gas at the rate of 12*s.* 6*d.* for each thousand feet.

Commercial Hall.

An ancient building, called the Old Cloth-hall, near the Market-place, was formerly the only cloth mart, used at the fairs, but it is now nearly deserted, and it has been in a great degree superseded by the Commercial-hall, in the Market-place,—a commodious brick structure, built in the year 1816, the area of which is 34 yards by 22. The apartments on the first and second floors consist of 48 shops, and the third floor of a cloth-hall, appropriated to the use of the clothiers and their customers. A spacious room at the front of the building is used as a news-room, except on the days of the fair, when it is appropriated to the sale of flannels.

Parochial Affairs.

The parochial affairs of the township are well administered, and the poor-house, built expressly for the purpose, affords a comfortable asylum for the two extremes of human life—young orphan children, and aged paupers. The parish officers here do what persons entrusted with the expenditure of the public money ought to do in all parishes and townships—that is, they make an annual publication of their accounts, showing how much money is collected, and how it is laid out. From the published account of the year 1824, it appears that the receipts of the overseers amounted to 4752*l.* 10*s.* and their disbursements to 4748*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.* including the contribution to the county rate, &c. The average number of paupers in the workhouse is stated at 115, and the cost of their maintenance at 1010*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.*, being at the rate of 3*s.* 4½*d.* per head weekly; it appears, however, that their earnings amount to 464*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.* which reduces the actual cost to about 1*s.* 9¾*d.* each, including clothing.

Description.

Wigan is not a handsome town, the streets being too irregular to consist with beauty, and pit-coal too plentiful for any remarkable degree of cleanliness; but the houses in the principal streets are substantial and well-built, and the streets which have lately been opened, combined with the vicinity of the Douglas, impart to it as free a ventilation, and as much neatness, as are generally to be found in ancient places where manufactures prevail.

Manufactures.

This has long been a manufacturing place of some celebrity. Its principal fabrics are coarse home-made linens, checks, calicoes, fustians, and other cotton goods; there is also a considerable quantity of cotton yarn spun in the neighbourhood, and several extensive brass, pewter, and iron works. The number of steam-engines at work here, giving motion to other machinery, is thirty-two, whose aggregate amount of power is equal to the strength of 597 horses.

The late noble proprietor of Haigh rendered productive the iron and coal strata of his estate, by commencing a foundry upon it in the year 1787, and, after contending with many difficulties, he at length succeeded in establishing works for the construction of steam and other mechanical engines, upon an extensive scale. These works give employment to a great number of the population in the immediate vicinity, and furnish also facilities to the surrounding manufacturers, in the construction of their machines for the spinning of cotton, in which they now rival the most successful of their competitors. About sixteen years ago the smelting of iron ore at these works was discontinued, on account of the low price of metal, but, from the recent advance in the price of iron, the intention is said to exist of re-erecting smelting furnaces at Haigh.

The prosperity of Wigan has been materially advanced by its inland navigation. As early as the year 1720, an act of parliament was obtained for making the Douglas navigable from Wigan to the Ribble, at the point where it empties itself into the sea. This undertaking, great and uncommon as it was at the time, was executed almost at the sole expense of one public-spirited individual, Alex. Leigh, Esq. of Hindley Hall, grandfather of Sir Robert Holt Leigh, Bart. In this way a water communication was opened to the very centre of Lancashire, and an extensive market was at once found for the coal of Wigan, and a means of obtaining lime for the cultivation of the land from under which the coal had been taken. The advantages have been since much augmented by that great public work called the Leeds and Liverpool Canal, which extended the inland navigation from hence to Liverpool on the one hand, and to the German Ocean on the other; the Lancaster Canal has added Westmoreland to the other markets before open, for the coal and canal of this district, and the branch communication with the Worsley canal, at Leigh, gives water carriage from hence to the South and West of England. In this, as many other cases, the merit and reward have been separated; the former was unquestionably Mr. Leigh's, the latter is enjoyed by the proprietors of the Leeds and Liverpool Canal, who, at a comparatively small cost, possessed themselves of the Douglas navigation, and have incorporated it with their own undertaking.

Inland Navigation.

Wigan has two markets weekly; the first on Monday, and the latter on Friday. It has also three annual fairs; the first on Holy Thursday, the second on the 27th of June,* and the other on the 28th of October. It will be seen, from the population return, presented above, that the inhabitants of this place are increasing rapidly, and are now swelled to above 20,000, constituting this the sixth town in point of numbers in the county. The bills of mortality collected from the registers of the Rectory, and of St. George's Church, exhibit evidence on this point equally conclusive.

The above returns are exclusive of the Baptisms and Burials at the Roman Catholic Chapels, and at the Protestant Dissenters' Chapels, which amounted in the year 1824, to—Baptisms, 354—Burials, 131.

Soil. The soil in this parish is various; it is frequently a sandy loam, in some parts more strong and tenacious, but towards the south inclining to black peat.

Springs. The springs in the neighbourhood of Wigan are numerous. A few years ago, a medical spring was discovered near Scholes Bridge, the water of which was strongly impregnated with sulphur, and which, from its resemblance to the celebrated Yorkshire spa, obtained the name of “New Harrogate.” The quantity of saline matter contained in this water was not so considerable as in the Harrogate waters, but it was used with good effect in cutaneous and scorbutic disorders, and patients frequently obtained a perfect cure from the use of it. For the accommodation of visitors, a handsome building was erected, with conveniences for drinking the water, and administering it as a bath when required; but this establishment has now ceased to exist, and the waters, having lost their medicinal virtue, owing to the admixture from the neighbouring coal-pits, are little used.

Burning Well. There is, at Hindley, in this parish, near the seat of Sir Robt. Holt Leigh, Bart. a phenomenon of great rarity, called, by the inhabitants, the “Burning Well.”* As might be expected, this well attracts great numbers of visitors. On applying a lighted candle to the surface of the water, there is suddenly a large flame produced, which burns vigorously; the water will not, however, burn detached from the well, for on taking up a dishful, and holding a lighted candle to it, the flame goes out. The water in the well boils and rises up, like water in a pot upon the fire, though, on immersing the hand in the liquid, no warmth is communicated, but a strong breath of wind bears upon the hand while over the place whence the flame issues. On drawing off the water, and applying a light to the surface of the earth at that point, the fumes take fire, and the cone of the flame ascends a foot and a half from the earth, with a basis of about 14 inches in diameter. The flame itself is so hot, that an egg may be, and sometimes is, boiled in a small vessel over it.† At Petoa Mala, near Fierenzota, in Italy, there is a well similar to the burning well of Wigan, with this difference, that the Italian spring sends up an incessant flame, except in heavy rains, and when they are over a spontaneous ignition takes place. Another difference may be observed between the English and Italian "Burning Wells;"—the inflammable principle of the former consists of carbonated hydrogen, produced by the decomposition of water acting upon ores and sulphate of iron, while that of the latter consists of a sulphuric gas, formerly called brimstone effluvia.

HAIGH.—This is one of the most interesting amongst the numerous Haigh. townships in the parish of Wigan, and the increase of its inhabitants is proceeding with a rapidity which sufficiently indicates its prosperity, for the influence of the moon is scarcely more certain upon the tides of the ocean, than the influence of prosperity is upon the tide of population. Haigh has long been celebrated for its cannel pits—a species of coal which takes that name probably because it serves for candle as well as for fire. It is found in beds about three feet in thickness, with a black bass below and above, and the declination or dip of the cannel is one yard in twenty. The fires made by it are chearful and cleanly, and the coal itself of this kind is so clean, that at Haigh Hall, a summer-house is made of it, which the ladies, with their delicate drapery, visit with impunity.* Toys of various kinds are also made from cannel, and when formed into plates, boxes, &c. it receives a polish as fine as black marble. On an eminence in this township stands Haigh Hall, the seat of the Earl of Balcarres, an ancient edifice, built at several times, and inhabited, through a long succession of ages by a family of Saxon origin. The chapel is supposed to be of the age of Edward II., and in front are the Stanley arms, with those of the Bradshaighs. The hall stands delightfully, and is considered one of the best situations in Lancashire, in the vicinity of a manufacturing town. From a large mount in the park are seen, on a clear day, thirteen counties of England and Wales, together with the Isle of Man; and yet, so well are the gardens and pleasure grounds sheltered, that vegetation here puts on her richest and most luxuriant garb. After the conquest, Sir John Bradshaw, or Bradshaigh, was restored to his possessions by William the Norman, and his posterity, for five and twenty generations, remained Lords of Haigh. Of this family, eleven in lineal descent were knighted; and amongst that number was Sir William Bradshaigh, whose remains lie buried in Wigan church, with Lady Mabel, his spouse, as already related. On failure of male issue, the estate descended, in the female line, in the person of Elizabeth Bradshaigh, daughter of the Rev. Sir Thomas Bradshaigh, to John Edwin, Esq. whose only daughter Elizabeth, married Charles Dalrymple, Esq. whose only daughter and sole heir to the estates of Haigh, married her relative, Alexander Lindsay, sixth Earl of Balcarres, a Scotch representative peer, who died at his seat at Haigh Hall, on the 27th of March, 1825, and was succeeded in his title and estates by James, Lord Lindsay, his eldest son. In addition to the exterior beauties of Haigh Hall, the interior is ornamented with a fine collection of portraits and other paintings by eminent masters.

Ashurst Beacon is in this parish, near to Dalton, and, in the time of Ashurst. the revolutionary wars, when the danger of French invasion was proclaimed by the prime minister to be so near that we were not to calculate the time of the enemy's arrival by months and weeks, but by days and hours, it was prepared with combustible matter, and men were placed day and night upon the watch-tower, to announce the landing of the invaders. Fortunately the torch was never lighted, and the women of England, who for seven centuries have never seen the smoke of the enemy's camp, were not doomed to see the light even of their own beacon. This building is formed of strong masonry, with the entire absence of any material in its composition that is inflammable. Ashhurst Hall, formerly the property and residence of the family of that name, was sold about fifty years ago, by Sir William Ashhurst, one of the justices of the Court of King's Bench, to Sir Thomas Bootle, of Latham; but it is now tenanted by a farmer.

Ince. The Manor House of Ince, near Wigan, is now the property of Captain John Walmsley, of Bath, by whose father it was purchased from the late Thomas Gerard, Esq. of Brym, after having remained in the knightly family of Ince and Gerard for upwards of seven centuries.

Winstanley. Winstanley is chiefly distinguished for the ancient Lancashire family of that name, by whom the hall was occupied as early as Henry III.^a This venerable and delightful mansion is at present the seat of Meyrick Bankes, Esq. who served the office of high sheriff for this county in 45 Geo. III., and which dignified station his ancestors held in 16 Geo. II., and 24 Geo. III.

Hindley. Hindley and Whitley Hall, both in this parish, are occupied by Sir Robert Holt Leigh, Bart. the representative of the Holts and the Leighs—families of great antiquity in this county, and whose ancestor, Robert Holt, Esq. was high sheriff of Lancashire in 16 Charles I.

Up-Holland. Up-Holland, four miles to the west of Wigan, is rendered memorable by its monastery, and by the ill-fated family who derive their descent and name from this place. In the reign of Edward I. Sir Robt. de Holland obtained, by marriage, with the daughter and heir of Allen Colembiers, the manor of Hale, to which was soon after added the manor of Childwall. In the third Edward II. this knight and his wife

Priory. Maud, founded, in the chapel of St. Thomas the martyr, a college or chantry, consisting of a dean and 12 secular priests, which was changed in 1318,* by Walter, Lord Bishop of Coventry and Litchfield, on the petition of Sir Robert de Holland, knight, into a priory of twelve Benedictine monks.† At the time of the sequestrations of the church possessions in the reign of Henry VIII. there were in this house five ecclesiastics, and twenty-six servants; and the valuation, according to Dugdale, was £61. 3s. 4d. per annum. The priory was sold in 1546, to John Holcroft, for £344. 12s. At a subsequent period it passed into the possession of the Bisphams, and in the year 1701 to the Owens, by marriage of Thomas Owen with Margaret Bispham, the heiress of Up-Holland. Thomas Owen, and Margaret his wife, left two daughters co-heirs, the younger of whom was married to Holt Leigh, Esq. of Whitley, and the elder to his brother, Edward Leigh, Esq. of London, of which family is Sir Robert Holt Leigh, Bart. the present proprietor of Up-Holland Abbey. Of the ancient structure little now remains, except the church, which is used as a chapel of ease, and of which the Rev. John Bird, M. A. is the incumbent. The posterity of the founder rose to the greatest honours during several of the following reigns; but they were of the number of those who set public opinion at defiance, and their fate may serve as an instructive lesson to court favourites: Sir Robert, the founder of the monastery, was secretary to Thomas of Woodstock, Earl of Lancaster, and, after betraying his master, he lost his head by the rage of the people, in the beginning of the reign of Edward III. Thomas de Holland, second son of Robert, became Earl of Kent, and fell a victim to popular indignation at Cirencester, in an attempt to restore his master, Richard II. His brother John, Duke of Exeter, and Earl of Huntingdon, shared the same fate from the hands of the populace at Plessy. And his grandson, Henry, Duke of Exeter, experienced a fate as various as it was calamitous; though he had more power during the reign of Henry VI. than any other subject, yet Comines relates, that, during the first deposition of his unfortunate sovereign, he was seen a fugitive in Flanders, running barefoot after the Duke of Burgundy's coach, to beg alms; after having made an unsuccessful attempt, in the battle of Barnet, to reinstate his master on the throne, he became dependent upon a faithful domestic, and his dead body was afterwards, from some unknown cause, found floating on the sea in the Straits of Dover; and thus ends the melancholy history of this branch of the Hollands of Up-Holland, the most powerful of subjects, and the most unfortunate of men.

From this rapid but faithful sketch of the history of the parish of Wigan, it will appear that this is a district abounding with subjects of interest. The noble struggle for independence made against a powerful and perfidious invader, has rendered the banks of the Douglas for ever memorable in the early annals of Britain; and each successive age has produced families, or individuals, who have distinguished themselves in arts or in arms. The mines, with which the district abounds, afford an invaluable and inexhaustible treasure, both for domestic and manufacturing purposes; and the rising consequence of the place, in trade and in population, serves to rank Wigan amongst the principal towns in this great manufacturing and commercial county.

HUNDRED OF AMOUNDERNESS.

GAZETTEER

OF THE TOWNSHIPS, VILLAGES AND HAMLETS ARRANGED ALPHABETICALLY UNDER THE HEADS OF THEIR RESPECTIVE PARISHES, WITH LISTS OF THE CLERGY, GENTRY, MANUFACTURERS, AND OTHER PRINCIPAL INHABITANTS IN EACH PARISH.

The bearings and distances from the nearest Market Town are taken from the situation of the Village or Hamlet giving name to the Township.

 All the Places mentioned in the following Gazetteer are Villages and Townships, unless otherwise expressed.—The Population of each Township and the estimated annual value of the Lands and Buildings therein, will be seen from the return at the head of the Parish.

Contractions are used occasionally, they are chiefly as follows—Gt. for great; ham. for Hamlet; Lile. for little; mls. for miles; twp. for township; upr. for upper; vill. for village, Inns and Public Houses are indicated by inverted Commas (‘’). Any others will be readily understood.

The Hundred of Amounderness contains Seven Parishes, namely—

BISPHAM PARISH.

BISPHAM is a Village, Township, and Parish in the Hundred and Deaury of Amounderness, and in the Archdeaconry of Richmond; 2 miles W. of Poulton-in-the-Fylde. This parish contains two townships, and the following is the return of the number of inhabitants in each, in 1801, 1811, and 1821, with the estimated annual rental of all the lands, messuages, and other buildings:—

BISPHAM, (Parish.)		POPULATION.					Estimated Annual Value.
		1801. Persons.	1811. Persons.	Houses.	1821. Families.	Persons.
Bispham with Norbreck,	Township	254	297	65	63	323	£3177
Total,		834	770	213	193	1072	7637

LAYTON, a vill. & joint twp. with Warbreck; 2½ miles SW. of Poulton.—BLACKPOOL is in this parish and township—(see vol. i. p. 526.)

WARBRECK; 2½ miles WSW. of Poulton.

ST. MICHAEL'S PARISH.

ST. MICHAEL LE WYRE is a village and parish (without a township bearing its own name) in the deanery of Amounderness, and in the archdeaconry of Richmond; 4 mls. SSW. of Garstang, and 10 mls. NW. of Preston. This parish contains six townships, including one chapelry, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821; and the estimated annual rental of all the land, messuages, and other buildings of each township in the parish:—

ST. MICHAEL, (Parish.)		POPULATION.					Estimated Annual Value.

Of the 850 families in this parish, 397 of them are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 392 in trade, manufacture or handicraft, the remaining 61 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed. This parish is of as high antiquity as the heptarchy, and its church is one of the three sacred edifices erected in Amounderness, soon after the introduction of Christianity into the North of England, Preston and Kirkham churches being the other two. The present church has no remains of its Saxon origin; it is a neat simple structure, built in the time of Henry VIII. of which the Rev. Hugh Hornby, is the patron and incumbent. By an act passed in the 56 Geo. III. the tithes and dues of the vicar of this parish are commuted on the principle of a corn rent for the sum of £700 per annum, subject to certain averages. The Wyre, from which this parish takes its distinctive name has been already described.* The natural basin, called Wyre Water, near the mouth of the river, forms a fine harbour, proverbial for its safety, and it was here that the unfortunate James Earl of Derby, landed with his 300 followers on his return from the Isle of Man, in the year 1651, to aid in the restoration of the Stuarts.—The following are the Villages and Townships in this Parish :—

BASTELL, a ham. in the township of Wood Plumpton; 3½ miles NW. of Preston.

CATFORTH, a hamlet in Wood Plumpton township; 6 miles NW. of Preston.

EAVES, a hamlet in the township of Wood Plumpton; 6½ miles NNW. of Preston.

ECCLESTON (GL.); 6 mls. SW. of Garstang. Three fairs are held here annually, namely, on the 14th of April, the first Monday after Trinity Sunday, and the 4th of Nov. Rushes form the staple commodity of this place, and a considerable number of persons are employed in cutting and dressing them for the rush light makers.

ELSWICK; 4 miles N. of Kirkham.

RAWCLIFFE (Out); 4½ mls. NE. of Poulton. RAWCLIFFE (Upper); 4 miles SW. of Garstang: the village of St. Michael's is situated in this township.

SOWERBY; 4 miles SSW. of Garstang.

TARNICAR; 4 miles WSW. of Garstang.

WOOD PLUMPTON; 4 mls. NW. of Preston.

* * * Bleasdale, Fulwood, Myerseough, Preesall-with-Hackensall, and Stalmine-with-Stainall, though all in the Amounderness hundred are townships in the parish of Lancaster, in the hundred of Lonsdale; and the townships of Forton and Cleveley are partly in Cockerham parish, which is also in Lonsdale hundred. The township of Alston-with-Hothersall is in Ribchester parish, in Blackburn hundred.

[For a description of the limits of the hundred of Amounderness, and a list of the Gentry in this hundred in the 16th century—(see vol. I. p. 144 and 147.)]

CHIPPING PARISH.

CHIPPING is a village, township, and parish, in the hundred of Blackburn, in the deanery of Amounderness, and in the archdeaconry of Richmond; 9 miles W. of Clitheroe; and 12 miles NNE. of Preston. This parish contains two townships, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821, and the estimated annual rental of the lands, messuages, and other buildings in each township:—

CHIPPING, (Parish.)		POPULATION.					Estimated Annual Value.
		1801. Persons.	1811. Persons.	1821. Houses.	1821. Families.	1821. Persons.
Chipping,.....	Township	827	1007	203	223	1229	£4,450

Richard de Chepin, Lord of Chepin, held the manor of this place, soon after the conquest; it subsequently passed to the Knolles, and afterwards to the knightly family of the Sherburnes, and is now held by Thomas Weld, Esq. of Lulworth Castle, in Dorset, whose ancestor, William, son and heir of Sir John Weld, married Elizabeth, sister and heir of Sir Nicholas Sherburne, of Stonyhurst. Leagram-hall, the seat of George Weld, Esq. is near Chipping, but in the parish of Whalley. This mansion and manor were granted by Queen Elizabeth to Dudley, Earl of Leicester, of whom it was purchased by Sir Richard Sherburne; the present proprietor has lately enlarged and beautified the place. The parish church of Chipping is dedicated to St. Bartholomew; the living is a discharged vicarage, valued in the Liber Regis, at £36 13s. 4d. in the patronage of the Bishop of Chester, and the incumbency of the Rev. Edward Wilkinson.

THORNLEY-WITH-WHEATLEY, in this parish; is $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. of Clitheroe.

MITTON PARISH.

MITTON is a village, township, and parish, in the hundred of Blackburn, in Lancashire, and in the wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewecross, in Yorkshire; 3 miles SW. of Clitheroe. This parish contains four townships, and two chapelries, one of which townships is situated in Lancashire; and the following forms the enumeration of its inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821; with the estimated annual rental of the lands, messuages, and other buildings:—

MITTON (Parish) (Lancashire Part of.)*		POPULATION.					Estimated Annual Value.
		1801.	1811.	1821.
		Persons.	Persons.	Houses.	Families.	Persons.
Aighton, Bailey, & Chaigley	Township	1260	1296	245	260	1487	£5085

Of the 265 families in this portion of the parish, 90 of them are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 171 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft; the remaining 4 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed.

* The other part of the parish of Mitton is situated in the West Riding of the County of York, and of course not within the limits of this Work.

The parish of Mitton is situated at the confluence of the three eastern rivers of Lancashire, and hence the popular wet-weather distich of—

“The Hodder, the Calder, the Ribble and rain,

“All meet in a point on Mitton's domain.”

The church stands near the point of junction on the precipitous banks of the Ribble, and the views in this and several other parts of the parish are delightfully picturesque. The rich scenery of the valleys is crowned by the stupendous piles of Pendle and Longridge, and Pennygant and Whernside, the giant mountains of the north, are seen in the distance, soaring to the clouds. From a MS. in the College of Mous, it appears that a monument of a much more early date, for one of the Sherburnes, existed at Mitton in the last century, bearing this inscription:—“Orate pro animâ Ric: de Sherbourn, et pro animâ—Hamerton uxoris suæ, A. M. CCCXXI. Obiit præfatus Ric: et erat hic tumulus in die Assensionis Dni nostri Jesu Christi cujus animæ propitiatur Deus, Amen!”

The living of Mitton is a discharged vicarage, valued in the Liber Regis at £14 7s. 8½d. in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. John Wilson. The church is dedicated to St. Michael or All Saints. This edifice is of the age of Edward III. and is principally remarkable as the burying place of the Knightly family of the Sherburnes, of Stonyhurst. The chantry of St. Nicholas, in which they repose, is on the north side of the choir, and is nearly filled with cumbent figures and mural monuments.—The following are the Villages and Townships in this Parish:—

BAILEY; 8 miles N. of Blackburn.

CHAIGLEY; 5 miles NNW. of Clitheroe.

HURST GREEN, a village in the township of Aighton, &c.; 4½ miles NE. of Ribchester.

RIBCHESTER PARISH.

RIBCHESTER is a village, township, and parish, in the hundreds of Blackburn and Amounderness, in the deanery of Amounderness, and the archdeaconry of Richmond; 5 miles NNW. of Blackburn. This parish contains four townships, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821; and the estimated annual rental of all the lands, messuages, and other buildings in each township in the parish:—

* The population of Old Laund Booth is returned in Whalley Parish.

Ribchester, though now an obscure village, ranked in the time of the Romans, amongst the first cities of Britain. Camden preserves a "Lame rhyming proverb," used by the inhabitants two hundred and fifty years ago, which says—

"It is written upon a wall in Rome—

"Ribchester was as rich as any town in Christendom," and the remains of Roman antiquity, temples, statues, coins, columns, capitals, altars, marbles, and inscriptions, which have in succeeding ages been dug up here even to the present time, give confirmation to the assertion. The parish church is dedicated to St. Wilfrid, and the living is a discharged vicarage, valued in the Liber Regis at £39 9s. 9d. of which the Rev. James Quartley, A.M. is the incumbent, and the Bishop of Chester the patron. The townships and villages in this parish are—

DILWORTH; 7 miles NE. of Preston.

DUTTON; 7 miles NNW. of Blackburn.

HOTHERSALL; 6½ miles NE. of Preston.

LONGRIDGE, a populous village situated upon Longridge-fell, partly in the township of Alston-with-Hothersall, and partly in the township of Dilworth. A festival or guild is held on St. Lawrence's day.

STIDD, an extra parochial chapelry, within the township of Dutton and parish of Ribchester, from the latter of which place it is distant three-quarters of a mile. There is here a chapel, "The Hospitale subtus Langrig," of very ancient date, in the patronage of the vicar of Ribchester, who is also incumbent. The living is of the annual value of £25, to preserve which, service has been performed twice a year ever since the reformation, under the ivy festoons that wind their way through the unglazed windows of this interesting piece of antiquity.

* Generally the Ribble forms the Lancashire boundary of the archdeaconry of Chester and Richmond, the former lying to the south and the latter to the north of that river, but Bowland-with-Leagram, being in the parish of Whalley, that township forms an exception, and is in the archdeaconry of Chester, though situated on the Richmondshire side of the river.—See vol. i. p. 128-9.

† Returned in other townships.

Of the 15,872 families in this parish, 1433 of them are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 13,388 in trade, manufacture, or handicraft, the remaining 1051 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed.

The parish of Whalley is of Saxon formation, and vast as is its present extent, it is little more than a moiety of the ancient parish. Originally the parishes of Blackburn, Rochdale, Ribchester, Chipping, Mitton, and Slaidburn,* formed part of Whalley, at which time this parish was 50 miles in length, and upwards of 400 miles in superficial dimensions: at present it is 30 miles from the extremity of Bowland on the north, to the extremity of Cliviger on the south; and 15 miles from the eastern limit of the Forest of Trawden to the western limit at the junction of the Calder and the Ribble, in the township of Little Mitton.

WHALLEY is a village chiefly celebrated for its Cistercian abbey, founded by Henry Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, which has been already shortly described.† The ruin is still amongst the most interesting monastic remains of the country. The parish church, dedicated to All Saints, which, according to Dr. Whitaker, the learned historian of this parish, is nearly coeval with the first introduction of christianity into the north of England, was rebuilt during the incumbency of Peter de Cestria. The living is a vicarage, valued in the Liber Regis at £6 3s. 9d. in the patronage of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and of which the Rev. Richard Noble is the incumbent. Eighteen ancient stalls, removed from the Abbey, ornament the interior of the church, and in the large eastern window are emblazoned the armorial bearings of all the ancient families of the parish.—The townships in this parish, inserted above, are situated as follows:

HUNDRED OF LEYLAND.

GAZETTEER

OF THE TOWNSHIPS, VILLAGES, AND HAMLETS, ARRANGED ALPHABETICALLY UNDER THE HEADS OF THEIR RESPECTIVE PARISHES, WITH LISTS OF THE CLERGY, GENTRY, MANUFACTURERS, AND OTHER PRINCIPAL INHABITANTS IN EACH PARISH.

This Hundred, since the last division of the parish of Croston, contains eleven parishes, namely,—

BRINDLE PARISH.

BRINDLE is a Village, Township, and Parish, (without any dependent township,) in the Hundred and Deanery of Leyland, and in the Archdeaconry of Chester; 7 miles SW. of Blackburn, and 6 miles SE. of Preston. This parish contains 248 houses, occupied by 256 families; of these families 34 are employed chiefly in agriculture, 204 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft, and the remaining 18 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed. In 1801, the population amounted to 1271; in 1811, to 1425; and in 1821 to 1574. The annual rental of the parish, according to the estimate for the county rates, amounts to £4582. The church is a small structure, dedicated to St. James. The living is a discharged rectory, valued in the Liber Regis, at £12 8s. 4d. of which the Duke of Devonshire is the patron, and the Rev. Charles Edward Kendal, B. A. the incumbent. The workhouse, about a mile from the village, is for the support of the poor of any township that may choose to contribute towards the support of the house. There are about eighty townships in England that send hither their poor. For many years this was used as a general receptacle for pauper lunatics, and the idle and refractory poor of other townships were sent here. A severity of discipline was thus introduced, which, in consequence of the building of the county asylum at Lancaster, and the subsequent interference of several magistrates, has been done away.

CHORLEY PARISH.—[See Vol. I. p. 589—607.]

CROSTON PARISH.

CROSTON is a Village, Township, and Parish, in the Hundred and Deanery of Leyland, and in the Archdeaconry of Chester; 6 miles W. of Chorley, 9 miles SSW. of Preston, and 9 miles NNE. of Ormskirk. This parish contains five townships, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821; and the estimated annual rental of all the land, messuages, and other buildings of each township in the parish:—

Of the 660 families in this parish, 225 of them are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 406 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft; the remaining 29 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed.

Croston is one of the ancient parishes of Lancashire, and was originally one of the most valuable of the church benefices in the county. In the Valor Beneficiorum of Pope Nicholas IV. when this parish was in its integrity, the valuation fixed upon the living amounted to nearly as much as the revenue of all the other four parishes in the deanery of Leyland. For many ages the limits remained unaltered, but it has since been divided by the authority of parliament, into six separate (entire) and independent parishes, namely,

The parish of Croston.

 of Chorley, } separated in 1793.
 of Rufford, } of Tarleton, }

The living of Croston is a rectory and vicarage, in the patronage of George Smith, Esq. valued in the Liber Regis at £31 11s. 10d., and the Rev. Streynsham Master, A. M. is the incumbent. The church, which is dedicated to St. Michael, stands in the vale of the Yarrow, upon the banks of the river, and was rebuilt, by a brief, in the year 1743, at a cost of £1834. Though now only a village, Croston was formerly a market town, and Leland, speaking of it in the reign of Henry VIII. says, "Ther is beside Chorle, Crosseton, a market towne in Lelandshire. It is a iij miles from Chorle, and Latham is a iij from hit." An indifferently endowed Free School, founded in 1660, by the Rev. James Hiet, rector, is situated in the church-yard. There are also several other charities, yielding an annual income of £68 a-year (in 1825). An annual Fair is held on the Monday before Shrove Tuesday, principally for cattle. The townships and villages in this parish are:—

BISPHAM; 5 miles NE. of Ormskirk. There is here a Free Grammar School, founded in the year 1692, by Richard Durning, with an estate of the value of £200 per annum.

BRETHERTON, 9 miles SSW. of Preston; there is in this township a Free School, found-

MAWDESLEY; 8 miles WSW. of Chorley.

ULNES WALTON; 5 miles WNW. of Chorley.

Leyland, as it imparts the name to one of the great divisions of Lancashire, was, no doubt, anciently of more relative importance in the county than it is at present. The lordship was in Saxon times a royal possession of great extent, as appears from the Domesday Survey, and it was held by King Edward (the Confessor). At a subsequent period, it formed part of the ample domains of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and afterwards passed into the family of the Farringtons of Shawe Hall. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, like Westminster Hall, is built without a single pillar, and consists of one arch, containing an area of sixty-five by thirty-three feet. The benefice is a vicarage, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. N. Rigbye Baldwin, M.A. The other villages and townships in this parish are:—

CLAYTON GREEN; 4 miles N. of Chorley.	CUERDEN; 4 miles SSE. of Preston. Rd.
CLAYTON-LE-WOODS; 3½ miles NNW. of Chorley.	Kuerden, M. D. the antiquary and topographer, was born in this township. (See vol. i. p. 507.)

HEAPEY; 2 miles NE. of Chorley.

OLLERTON, a hamlet, in the township of Withnell; 5 miles SW. of Blackburn.

WHEELTON; 3 miles NNE. of Chorley.

WHITTLE-LE-WOODS; 2 miles N. of Chorley. This township contains four valuable millstone quarries.

PENWORTHAM PARISH.

PENWORTHAM is a village, township, and parish, in the hundred and deanery of Leyland, and in the archdeaconry of Chester, one mile and a half SW. of Preston. This parish contains five townships, including one chapelry, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821:—

PENWORTHAM (Parish.)		POPULATION.					Estimated Annual Value.
		1801. Persons.	1811. Persons.	1821.
				Houses.	Families.	Persons.

Of the 787 families in this parish, 191 are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 538 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft. The parochial chapel, is a plain Gothic building, dedicated to St. Mary, and probably built in the sixteenth century. The living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of Lawrence Rawstorne, Esq. of which the Rev. Wm. Birkett, A.M. is the incumbent. The other townships and villages in this parish are—

FARRINGTON, 3½ miles S. of Preston.

HOWICK, 2½ miles S.W. of Preston.

HUTTON, 3½ miles S.W. of Preston. The Free Grammar School of Penwortham, founded by Christopher Walton, of Little Hoole, in the reign of Edward VI. and endowed with lands, then of the yearly value of four marks and twopence, is situated in this township. The income arising from these lands is now very considerable, and it is understood that measures are in contemplation for rendering this charity more efficient.

LONGTON, 5 miles S.W. of Preston.

MIDDLEFORD GREEN, a ham. in the twp. of Penwortham, 1½ mile SW. of Preston.

Of the 1300 families in this parish, 34 are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 988 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft. Small as is the hundred of Leyland, this division of the county contained two of the twelve ancient castles of Lancashire, namely, the castle of Penwortham and the castle of Standish. Both these monuments of baronial power have now disappeared, and it is difficult to ascertain even the site of Standish castle. The parish church dedicated to St. Wilfrid, is a handsome structure, of the Tuscan order of architecture, and was built in the year 1584, by the first Protestant rector, the Rev. Rd. Moodie, a Franciscan monk, converted to the reformed faith. The living is a rectory in the patronage of Chas. Standish Esq. of which the Rev. Richd. Perryn, A.M. is the incumbent. There is here a free grammar school, with an endowment of about £90 a year, which was founded at the beginning of the 17th century. The following are the other villages and townships in this parish:—

ADLINGTON, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. of Chorley.

Of the 144 families in this parish, 114 of them are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 12 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft; the remaining 18 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed. Aldingham has almost disappeared under the incursions of the waters, but the church, which is of the age of the early Harringtons, lords of the manor, has survived the wreck of the village. This edifice is dedicated to St. Cuthbert, and the living which is a rectory, in the patronage of the king, is at present enjoyed by the Rev. John Stonard, D.D.—The following are the villages and townships in this parish:—

BAYCLIFFE, a village in the township of Upper Aldingham; 4 miles S. of Ulverstone.

DENDRON, a village in the township of Gleaston; 2½ miles SE. of Dalton.

LEECE; 3 miles SSE. of Dalton.

HAWKSHEAD PARISH.—VILLAGES, &c.

[For History and Directory of HAWKSHEAD—see vol. I. p. 650 to 654.]

CLAIFE; 2 miles SE. of Hawkshead. This township is bounded on the east by Eastwaite Water, and on the west by the beautiful lake of Windermere. Here is a large and commodious hotel, for the accommodation of visitors, called the Ferry Inn, where boats are constantly in readiness to convey horses and foot passengers over the lake, which at this point is only a quarter of a mile in breadth.

CONISTONE (Monk), with Skelwith, a township; 3 miles W. of Hawkshead, most

SKELWITH; 2½ miles N. of Hawkshead.

SATTERTHWAITE; 4 miles S. of Hawkshead. Graythwaite Hall, once the seat of the pious and benevolent Edwyne Sandys, Archbishop of York, in the reign of Elizabeth, constitutes a prominent ornament of this township, and is still occupied by a descendant of that excellent prelate.

The church is dedicated to St. Cuthbert, and the living is a peculiar, under the Dean and Chapter of York,* who is rector and patron, and the Rev. Thomas Pearson is the vicar. The township of Kirkby Ireleth is famous for the production of excellent dark coloured blue slate, and upwards of 10,000 tons of this article is annually raised from the quarries upon Kirkby-moor, where about 270 workmen are employed in the different departments. Lord Geo. Cavendish, who is lord of the manor, derives an income of upwards of £3,000 annually from these quarries. This sum is raised by the manor royalties, or rent, chargeable upon the three qualities of slate, in the following proportions, viz.—On the best, or London, 10s. per ton; seconds 8s. and Tom 4s. The following are the villages and townships in this parish:—

CLAUGHTON PARISH.

CLAUGHTON is a village, township, and parish, (without any dependent township) in the hundred of Lonsdale, (South of the Sands) in the deanery of Kirkby-Lonsdale, and in the archdeaconry of Richmond; 7 miles ENE. of Lancaster. Of the 19 families in this parish, 14 are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 5 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft. The whole rental of this parish, according to the estimate for the county rates amounts to £1551. This is the smallest parish in Lancashire, considered as to its population; but even here the ratio of increase is considerable; in 1801 the number of inhabitants was 71—in 1811 they had swelled to 92, and in 1821 to 123. The church is dedicated to St. Chad, and the living is a rectory, of which Thomas Fenwick, Esq. of London, (lord of the manor) is patron. The Rev. Henry White, of Kew-green, Surrey, is incumbent. The principal inhabitants are—

Bibby John, farmer, hall	Lund Wm 'Hare & Hounds'	Sawrey Rev. James

COCKERHAM PARISH.

COCKERHAM, is a village, township, and parish, in the hundred of Lonsdale, (South of the Sands) in the deanery of Amounderness, and in the archdeaconry of Richmond; 7 miles S. of Lancaster. This parish contains two townships, one of which is a chapelry; and the following is the return of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821; with the estimated annual rental of all the lands, messuages, and other buildings:—

HEYSHAM PARISH.

HEYSHAM is a village, township, and parish (without any dependent township) in the hundred of Lonsdale, South of the Sands, in the deanery of Kendal, and in the archdeaconry of Richmond; 4 miles W. of Lancaster. This parish contains 110 houses, occupied by 106 families, consisting of 540 persons. The rental of the parish, according to the estimate for the county rates, amounts to £3851. The population of this parish is increasing somewhat rapidly; in 1801, the number of inhabitants amounted to 365; and in 1811, to 464. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, placed on the summit of a rock, the base of which is washed by the Irish sea. Heysham is a place of fashionable resort for sea-bathing, but the visitors are more select than numerous. The church living is a rectory, in the patronage of the Rev. Thomas Yates Ridley, A.M. who is also the incumbent. Within a few yards of the church and the cliff stand the antique remains of St. Patrick's chapel, supposed to have been a monastery in connection with Furness Abbey. A variety of ancient stones are lying in the old burial ground, amongst which are a number of stone coffins, principally excavated from the solid rock.

GLASSON, a small village on the river Lune, in the township of Thurnham, 5 miles SSW. of Lancaster. Here is a spacious dock, which was built in 1787, capable of receiving about 25 large merchant vessels, which discharge their cargoes, to be forwarded by lighters to the port of Lancaster. A canal is also nearly completed, (July, 1825,) which connects this dock with the Preston and Lancaster canal.

STAINALL, 4 m. N. of Poulton in the Fylde.
 STALMINE, 5 mls. NNE. of Poulton (Fylde).
 STODDAY, 2 miles S. of Lancaster.

SUNDERLAND, a village in the township of Overton, 7 miles SW. of Lancaster, situated on the extremity of a tongue of land, which ends in a narrow point in the Irish sea, where it forms the termination of the estuary of the Lune.
 Cotton wool was introduced here before its use was known to our manufacturers, and indeed before that article was imported at Liverpool.
 The inhabitants of the neighbouring country came many miles to inspect it as a curiosity, but no one knew its use. The first supply lay, in consequence, in the warehouse of the merchant who imported it (Mr. Robert Lawson), upwards of a year before he could find a purchaser.
 After the building of the dock at Glasson, Sunderland, in consequence of the removal of the shipping and the custom-house officers, soon afterwards became nearly a 'deserted village;' and, under these circumstances, it was frequently called by the sailors, Cape Famine; but it has of late years been rapidly advancing in repute as a fashionable sea bathing-place.

THURNHAM, 4½ miles S. of Lancaster.—

TORRISHOLME, 2 miles NW. of Lancaster.
 WARDLESS, a small sea-port on the river
 Wyre, where vessels of 300 tons burden may discharge their cargoes, situated in the township of Stalmine with Stainall, in the hundred of Amounderness, 4 miles NNE. of Poulton.

WYERSDALE (OVER), 7 miles SE. of Lancaster. The river Wyre has its sources at and near the eastern extremity of this township, on the Yorkshire boundary.—See vol. i. p. 46, and
 vol. ii. p. 29.

Of the 443 families in this parish, 225 are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 146 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft, the remaining 72 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed. The parish church, situated in the village of Melling, is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Peter. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of the King, and the Rev. John Tatham is the incumbent. The following are the townships and villages in this parish:—

ARKHOLME; 5 miles SSW. of Kirkby Lonsdale.
CAWOOD; 5 mls. SSW. of Kirkby Lonsdale.
BOLTON; 10 miles ENE. of Lancaster.
FARLETON; 8 miles ENE. of Lancaster.
HORNBY, an ancient market town and chapelry; 9 miles NE. of Lancaster. The principal object of attraction in the parish of Melling is Hornby Castle, built by Nicholas de Mont Begons soon after the conquest. The Longvilles followed, and they were succeeded by the Nevilles, whose successors were the Harringtons. Sir Edward Stanley, a younger son of the first Earl of Derby, became Lord of Hornby, by marriage with Anne, the daughter and heir of John Harrington. This gallant knight commanded the left wing of the English army in the battle of Flodden Field, fought in 1513, and for his services on that day was created a peer of the realm, under the title of Lord Monteagle, in allusion to the family crest. (See vol. i. p. 40.) To Wm. Lord Monteagle, the grandson of the hero of Flodden Field, the mysterious letter was sent which led to the discovery of the gunpowder treason. (See vol. i. p. 54.) The castle honour and estates of Hornby have been since possessed successively by the Earl of Cardigan and the Earl of Wemyss, from the latter of whom they were purchased by John Marsden, of Wennington Hall, Esq. the present owner. A Saxon fortification, in ruins, stands in this honour, which has also to boast the remains of a Premonstratensian priory. The ancient weekly market of Hornby, held on Friday, has become obsolete, & has been superseded by a flourishing fortnight fair for cattle, held on Tuesday. There is also an annual cattle fair, held on the 30th July. The scenery, as viewed from Hornby castle, is delightful; the picturesque and fertile vales of the Lune and the Wenning are spread before the spectator, and in the distance is seen the hills of Ingleborough, Wharfedale, and Pennine.

WENNINGTON; 6½ mls. S. of K. Lonsdale.
WRAY; 10 miles ENE. of Lancaster.
WRAYTON; 5 miles S. of Kirkby Lonsdale.

ASHTON-UNDER-LINE PARISH.—VILLAGES, &c.

[For the History and Directory of the town of ASHTON-UNDER-LINE—see Vol. I. p. 491.]

AUDENSHAW, a division of Ashton; 4½ miles E. of Manchester. A great reservoir is forming here, and now nearly finished, into which the neighbouring streams will pour their contributions to supply the town of Manchester with water.

KNOTT LANES, a division, 2 miles NNW. of Ashton-under-Line.

LEES, a populous and improving village, in the division of Knott Lanes, 1½ mile E. of Oldham, situate on the turnpike-road leading from Oldham to Saddleworth and Huddersfield. About a quarter of a mile from this village is the chalybeate spring called Lees Spa, the virtues of

MEDLOCK VALE, a hamlet in the division of Audenshaw, 4 miles E. of Manchester.

MOSSLEY, a populous village in the division of Hartshead, 3 miles NE. of Ashton. The manufacture of woollen and cotton is here carried on to a considerable extent. Two annual fairs for cattle were established in the year 1824; one on the 21st of June, and another on the last Monday in October.

SMALLSHAW, in the division of Knott Lanes, 1 mile N. of Ashton.

BOLTON-LE-MOORS PARISH—VILLAGES, &c.

[For the History and Directory of GREAT AND LITTLE BOLTON—see Vol. I. p. 529 to 559.]

ANGLEZARK, 3 miles E. of Chorley. Here was first discovered the carbonate of barytes; and lead mines are now worked in this township with advantage; the stone of the quarries is got in great quantities for the roads.

ASTLEY BRIDGE, a village in the township of Sharples, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile N. of Bolton.

BELMONT, a hamlet in the township of Sharples, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles NNW. of Bolton. Several large reservoirs are making near this place for supplying the town of Bolton with water. After the completion of which it is expected that the print works, which have long been deserted, will be again put in motion.

BLACKROD, an ancient Roman station, the Cocctum of Antoninus, and the Rigodunum of Ptolemy, is now a populous village, pleasantly situated on elevated ground 5 miles SSE. of Chorley. A fair is held on the first Thursday after the 12th of July, for toys, pedlery, &c. An ancient Free Grammar School, re-built in the year 1799, exists in this place, endowed in 1568, by John Holme, who left property of the value of £8 per annum to the school, and £5 per annum for the maintenance of a scholar, at the college of St. Mary, now Pembroke hall, Cambridge, which property yields at present £80 pounds per annum; and an estate, bequeathed to the school by Eliz. Tildesley, in Bedford, lets now for £120 a year.

BRADSHAW, a village and township 2½ miles NE. of Bolton.—See Bradshaw Hall, Vol. I. p. 540.

BRIGHTMET, 1½ mile ENE. of Bolton.

BURNDEN, a village, partly in the twps. of Tonge with Haulgh & Gt. Lever, 1 SSE. of Bolton. CHAPEL TOWN, a village in the township of Turton, 5 miles NNE. of Bolton. See Turton.

EAGLEY BRIDGE, 3 miles N. of Bolton.

EDGEWORTH, 5½ miles NNE. of Bolton.

ENTWISLE, 6 miles N. of Bolton.

FIRWOOD, a hamlet in the township of Tonge with Haulgh, 1 mile NE. of Bolton.

GILLNOW, a small hamlet in the township of Little Bolton, 1 mile W. of Bolton.

HAULGH, 1 mile SE. of Bolton.

HIGHER FOLD, 5½ miles NE. of Bolton.

KNOB-END, a hamlet in the township of Little Lever, 3 miles SE. of Bolton. At this place the vessels navigating the Canal from Manchester, are raised into the Bolton and Bury Canal by six locks.

LEVER DARCY, 2 miles ESE. of Bolton. Here is a stupendous aqueduct of three arches over the Irwell. This place abounds with coal.

LEVER LITTLE, 3 miles ESE. of Bolton.—See Lever Hall, Vol. I. p. 540.

LOSTOCK, 4 miles W. of Bolton.—See Lostock Hall, Vol. I. p. 541.

QUARLTON, 5 miles NNE. of Bolton.

RIVINGTON, 4 miles SE. of Chorley. Chas. and John Shaw, gentlemen, now living on their own estates in Rivington, are the surviving nephews of the late Right Hon. Lord Hugh Willoughby de Parham, which title is now extinct.

SHARPLES, 2 miles N. of Bolton.—See Astley Bridge and Belmont.

TONGE, 1 mile ENE. of Bolton. A noted feast is held at Tongefold on the 29th of May, in commemoration of the restoration. The ancient sport of the bow and quiver prevails here, and an archery ground has recently been established by subscription.

TOOTLE BRIDGE, a small hamlet in the twp. of Tonge with Haulgh, 1½ mile E. of Bolton.

TURTON, 5 miles N. of Bolton. In this large chapelry the villages of Chapel Town and Walmsley are situated; the former on the eastern, and the latter on the western side of the township. A Roman road passed formerly through the township, and several antique relics have been found here, among which are, the copper head of an old British standard, and the ruins of a barbit, or druidical temple. A fair is held on the 4th and 5th of Sept. for horses, cattle, &c.—See Vol. I. p. 541.

WALMSLEY CHAPEL, a village in the township of Turton, 4 miles N. of Bolton.—See Turton.

DEAN PARISH.

DEAN is a village and parish, (without any township bearing its own name,) in the hundred of Salford, in the deanery of Manchester, and in the archdeaconry of Chester; 2 miles SW. of Bolton-le-Moors. This parish contains ten townships, including four chapelries, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821; and the estimated annual rental of all the land, messuages, and other buildings of each township in the parish:—

DEAN, (Parish.)		POPULATION.					Estimated Annual Value.

CHEQUER-BENT, a hamlet, in the township of Westhoughton; $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles SW. of Bolton.

DAISEY HILLOCK, a hamlet, in the township of Westhoughton; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles SW. of Bolton.

DIXON GREEN, a hamlet, in the township of Farnworth; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles SSE. of Bolton.

DOFFCOCKER, a hamlet, in the township of Halliwell; 2 miles WNW. of Bolton.

FARNWORTH, 8 miles SSE. of Bolton. A large church is now building on Halshaw Moor, in this township, under the million act. Here is also an Independent chapel, built in 1807. At Farnworth bridge are the extensive paper mills of Messrs. J. & T. Crompton, the sole proprietors of the paper drying machines.

FOUR YATES, a hamlet, in the township of Westhoughton; 6 miles WSW. of Bolton.

HALLIWELL, a pleasant village and township; 2 miles WNW. of Bolton. In this township stands the ancient structure called Smithills Hall, now the residence of Peter Ainsworth, Esq. who has repaired it at considerable expense. See vol I. p. 539-540.

HALSHAW MOOR, in the township of Farnworth; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles SSE. of Bolton.

HORWICH, a large village and township; 5 miles WNW. of Bolton.

HULTON LANE ENDS, a hamlet, on the road from Bolton to Leigh, in the townships of Middle & Over Hulton; 4 mls. SSW. of Bolton.

HULTON (Little), $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. of Bolton.

HULTON (Middle), 4 miles SSW. of Bolton.

HULTON (Over), $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles SSW. of Bolton. Hulton park, in this township, is the residence of Wm. Hulton, Esq. who is the sole proprietor of the soil.

KERSLEY, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles SSE. of Bolton.

MOSES GATE, a hamlet, in the township of Farnworth; $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles SSE. of Bolton.

PEEL CHAPEL, a hamlet, in the township of Little Hulton; $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. of Bolton. Sir Joseph Yates, Justice of Common Pleas, formerly resided at Peel Hall.

RUMWORTH, in which the village and parish church of Dean is situated, on the high road from Bolton to Liverpool; $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile SW. of Bolton.

SMITHELLS HALL, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles NNW. of Bolton. See Halliwell, and vol. I. p. 539.

WESTHOUGHTON, 5 mls. WSW. of Bolton. This populous manufacturing village contains 3 places of worship, a free school, and 7 benefit societies, 8 of which consist of females. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in weaving fancy muslins and jaconets. This place, like Middleton, was a scene of popular excess in the year 1812, when the Luddite system prevailed, and the manufactory of Messrs. Wroe & Duncuft was burnt down by rioters. For this outrage, the offenders were brought to trial under a special commission on the 27th of May, at Lancaster, and 4 of them executed for the offence.

WIN-YATE, a hamlet, in the township of Westhoughton; $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles WSW. of Bolton.

BURNAGE, 5 miles SSE. of Manchester.

CHEETHAM, adjoining to Manchr. on the N.

CHEETHAM HILL, a village in the townships of Cheetham, Broughton, & Crumpsall, 2 miles N. of Manchester. Humphrey Cheetham, founder of Manchester College, was born at Crumpsall-hall, near this village.

CHORLTON-WITH HARDY, 4 mls. SSW. of Manchester.

DENTON, a chapelry 6 mls. ESE. of Manchr. Here is a free school, supported by the voluntary subscriptions of the inhabitants of Denton and Haughton, at which about 300 poor children are taught. This village is famous for its manufacture of hats.

DIDSBURY, 5½ miles S. of Manchester, a parochial chapelry, consisting of Didsbury, Withington, Heaton Norris, and Burnage. There is here a school endowed with £45 per annum; also a Church Sunday School, at which 100 boys and 120 girls attend. Two recently established fairs for cattle are held annually in Didsbury, on the 30th of April, and 22d of October.

FAILSWORTH, a vill. 4 mls. NE. of Manchr.

FAIRFIELD, a beautiful village, 4 miles E. of Manchester, in which there is a large establishment of the followers of Nicholas Lewis, Count of Zinzendorf, usually called Moravians. The ground-plot of this establishment is laid out with considerable taste, and forms a large and commodious square. The front consists of several large well-built brick buildings with the chapel in the centre. Rows of dwelling-houses run on each side of the back front of the chapel, which are terminated by another row to complete the square. A broad paved street, with flagged foot-paths, passes round the square, and at the outer side of the street is another pile of excellent buildings, which surrounds three sides of the square, while in front there is a succession of gardens, in which the residents take air and exercise, and from which they draw a considerable share of vegetables for their tables. Opposite the chapel there is a burial ground, in which the sexes are separated, even in death. The inhabitants form an industrious, well-regulated and religious community; and it is to the honour of the Moravians that they have, by their zeal and self-devotion, done more towards propagating the gospel in heathen lands, in proportion to their number and their means, than any other religious society.

GORTON, a chapelry, 3½ miles ESE. of Manchester. A reservoir of water, covering 71 acres, has recently been formed in Gorton vale, by the Water Works Company, to increase the supply.

HAUGHTON, 6 miles ESE. of Manchester, famous for its extensive manufacture of hats.

HEATON NORRIS, 6 miles SSE. of Manchester. This township is so intimately connected with Stockport, that it has been thought necessary to give the information relating to it under the head of Stockport.

HEATON MERSEY, a hamlet in the township of Heaton Norris, 2 miles NW. of Stockport. A large Sunday School was founded here by the late Robert Parker, Esq. A.D. 1805, who at his death in 1815 bequeathed £500 for its perpetual support.

HULME, adjoining to Manchester on the SSE.

KERSAL MOOR, 3 mls. NNW. of Manchr. The races held here annually in Whitsun week, are not unfrequently attended by 150,000 persons! KIRKMANSHULME, 3 mls. SE. of Manchr.; an insulated part of the township of Newton.

LEVENSULME, 4 miles SE. of Manchester.

MOSS SIDE, 2 miles S. of Manchester.

MOSTON, 3½ miles NE. of Manchester.

NEWTON, a chapelry, 3 mls. NE. of Manchr. This chapelry contains 5 townships, viz. Bradford, Droylsden, Failsworth, Moston, & Newton.

OPENSHAW, 3½ miles E. of Manchester.

REDDISH, 5 miles SE. of Manchester.

RUSHULME, 2½ miles SSE. of Manchester.

SALFORD, an ancient market town and chartered borough WSW. of Manchester, and separated from it by the river Irwell. See Manchr.

STRETFORD, 4 mls. SW. of Manchr. This place is famous as a mart for fat pigs, the average number killed during the season being from 600 to 700 weekly, chiefly for the Manchester market.

WITHINGTON, 3½ miles S. of Manchester.

RADCLIFFE PARISH.

RADCLIFFE is a village, township, and parish, (without any dependent township) in the hundred of Salford, in the deanery of Manchester, and in the archdeaconry of Chester; 3 miles SSW. of Bury. This parish contains 517 houses, occupied by 589 families; of these families 13 are chiefly employed in agriculture, and 403 in trade, manufactures or handicraft; the remaining 173 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed. The rental of all the lands, messuages, and other buildings in the parish according to the estimate for the county rates, amounts to £4,382. The Church is of ancient date; the living is a rectory, of which the Earl of Wilton is patron, and the Rev. Thomas Foxley, the incumbent; here is also a Chapel of Ease, dedicated to St. Thomas, and opened in 1821.

RADCLIFFE BRIDGE, a populous village, partly in the townships of Pilkington and Radcliffe, and parishes of Prestwich-cum-Oldham, and Radcliffe; 3½ miles SSW. of Bury.

SADDLEWORTH.

THE tract of country bearing this name lies on the south-eastern confines of the county of Lancaster, stretching into Yorkshire, and is pierced by the tip of the great horn of Cheshire. It is 7 miles in length and 5 miles in width at the broadest part. Several Druidical remains on the hills and in the groves of Saddleworth, near to Greenfield, indicate that before the light of Christianity had beamed on this country, the followers of DRUIDS worshipped here with the firmament for the roof of their temple, huge blocks of stone for their altars, and human victims for their sacrifices. The Romans next traversed this alpine tract, in their line of communication from Mancunium to Campodunum,* the Castrum of Castleshaw serving for their halting place between the two stations. The Saxons followed, and gave names to the Tame, the Diggle, and the Chew; and, according to tradition, SÆWNO, the Danish monarch, in his desolating career, harangued his invading army on their march over these mountains from the summit of "Hill-top." At this time, and for many centuries afterwards, Saddleworth was little more than a forest, and the places which are now the "busy haunts of men," were then the abodes of the wolf and the wild-boar. Then it was, if ever, that these mountains and vallies sold for a saddle, obtaining from thence the name of "Saddleworthe." At the period of the conquest, this district was constituted a manor, and about the year 1200, the chapel of Saddleworth, dedicated to St. Chad, was built for the use of his tenants, by William de Stapleton, lord of the soil, subject to "St. Chedde, of Rachedam." Ever since that time the Vicar of Rochdale has had ecclesiastical jurisdiction over Saddleworth, so far as the church patronage is concerned, but he has no other claims upon the parishioners. In monastic times the abbot and monks of Roche Abbey, in the West-Riding of Yorkshire, were great proprietors here, and that part of the district called Friar-mere belonged entirely to the abbey, to which it was presented by the Ramsdens. On the dissolution of the larger religious houses, about 1542, the site of Roche-abbey was granted to William Ramsden and Thomas Vavasor, but the Saddleworth possession was granted by deed, dated the 5th of June, in the 35th year of the reign of Henry VIII. to Arthur Ashton, of Rochdale, gentleman, for the sum of £361 7s. 4d. paid to the treasurer of his majesty's court of augmentation, to be held in the same full and ample manner and form as it was held by the respective abbots. In the 7 Edward VI. this property was granted by Arthur Ashton to Roger Garside, of Rochdale. The manor of Saddleworth-cum-Quick was at a subsequent period sold by the Stapletons to the Ramsdens, by whom it was re-sold to the Farrars; and the trustees of James Farrar, Esq. of Bamboro'-grange, conveyed the manor in 1792, to thirty-one lords, freeholders in the parish, for the sum of £6297 15s. in which purchase was included two small estates, divided into 828 shares, which have been re-sold to the freeholders at large (amounting to from five to six hundred) some of whom hold only one, and others as many as fifty shares. As early as the year 1694, Saddleworth is described as a parish, in a deed relating to Rochdale school, and in several local acts it is designated by the name of "the parish of Saddleworth-cum-Quick;" but in the population returns made to parliament, it is included in the wapentake of Agbrigg, in the West-Riding of the county of York, and called part of Rochdale parish. This parish or chapelry is divided into four parts, called Meres, namely, Friar-mere, to the NE.; Quick-mere, to the W.; Shaw-mere, to the SW.; and Lord's-mere, to the SE. The tithes of Saddleworth, like those of the parent parish, were enjoyed by the see of Canterbury, from the time of Archbishop Cranmer, till the year 1813, when they were sold under the authority of an act of parliament, by the present primate, the Right Rev. Manners Sutton, D.D. to the freeholders. The proprietors of the lands of Friar-mere, presuming upon the privilege of the Cistercians to exonerate them from tithes, did not purchase, nor do they pay, though the claim of the Archbishop upon their estates is not formally abandoned. The parish contains about 20,000 statute acres of land, of which 12,500 acres are inclosed. Though a very mountainous district, there is a great deal of fine grazing land in the vallies and on the declivities of the hills. To this land, trade has imparted a high value, and it is no uncommon thing for the proprietors of the soil to obtain a rent of £6 per acre annually, though the average, probably, does not exceed £4. The Huddersfield Canal, passing from NE. to SW. affords water conveyance to the raw materials and manufactured articles of Saddleworth, and the tunnel of that canal, the largest excavation of the kind in the kingdom, is here carried under the pile of hills called Stanedge. The Tame gives motion to the machinery in a large proportion of the mills, and a reservoir, to contain 250,000 yards of water, is projected as an auxiliary to the mountain streams. The chapels subject to the parochial chapel of Saddleworth, of which the Rev. Charles Zouch is the incumbent, are St. Thomas's, at Friar-mere;† the Holy Trinity, at Dobcross‡ and St. Ann's, Lidgate.‡ The meeting-houses are at Delph, Upper Mill, and Springhead. Sunday schools are attached to almost all the places of public worship in Saddleworth. A flourishing Branch Bible Society, in connexion with the Huddersfield Auxiliary Society, has existed here since October, 1819. Population does not increase so fast in Saddleworth as in many other manufacturing parishes; in 1801, the number of inhabitants amounted to 10,665; in 1811, to 12,579; and in 1821, to 13,902; this last number consists of 2,365 families, of whom 2,132 are employed in trade, manufactures, and handicraft businesses, and 28 in agriculture. The trade of the district, which has increased more rapidly than the people, consists principally of the woollen manufacture, to which have been added several cotton manufacturing establishments. Many of the principal manufacturers are merchants, carrying on extensive commercial transactions with the Continents of Europe and of America, where many of the younger branches of these enterprising families have established themselves with good success.

PRINCIPAL VILLAGES IN SADDLEWORTH.

AUSTERLANDS, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. of Oldham.
 BLACK HEY NOOK, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile E. of Delph.
 BOARSHURST, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile SSE. of Dobcross, with a good school, built in the year 1811, and endowed with twenty acres of land, granted by the inclosure act of Saddleworth-cum-Quick, in 1807, and now about to be inclosed.
 CASTLESHAW, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile NE. of Delph, the site of a Roman castrum.
 DELPH, a considerable village, 1 mile NW. of Dobcross, with an Independent chapel, built in 1746, and a Sunday school, containing 150 scholars; and a Methodist chapel, built in 1800, with a Sunday school, containing 500 scholars; also a good school which was rebuilt by subscription, in 1819. There are here three annual fairs, namely, on the 24th of April, the 9th of July, and the 24th of September.
 DELPH NEW, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile S. of Delph, and the central stage between Manchester and Huddersfield, from each of which it is 12 miles distant. The name Delph is supposed to be derived from the famous bakestone quarry, now worked at Hull, about $\frac{1}{2}$ a mile to the E. of this place.
 DIGGLE BRIDGE & MILL, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles NNE. of Dobcross. That stupendous work, the tunnel of the Huddersfield canal, under Stanedge hill, $3\frac{1}{2}$ mls. in length, makes its southern entrance here.
 DOBCROSS, a considerable village, 5 miles

ENE. of Oldham; in which is Holy Trinity Chapel, and a Free School, founded about 1740, by Ralph Hawkyard.

FRIAR-MERE CHAPEL, 1 mile N. of Delph.
 GRASSCROFT & CLOUGH, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile SSW. of Dobcross.

HOLLINGROVE, 1 mile SE. of Dobcross.
 JUNCTION, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. of New Delph; 12 mls. W. of Huddersfield; 5 mls E. of Oldham; 6 miles SE. of Rochdale; 12 miles SW. of Halifax; 11 miles SE. of Bury; 12 miles E. of Manchester. Messrs. Buckley, Roberts & Co. bankers, Dobcross, gave, in 1824, a large plot of land at Denshaw, on which a school, and a house for the master, have been built by subscription.

LIDGATE, 2 miles W. of Dobcross.

SADDLEWORTH FOLD & CHURCH, 1 mile SE. of Dobcross.

STONEBREAKS, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles SW. of Dobcross.

UPPER MILL, 1 mile S. of Dobcross. This village is well situated for trade, having the Huddersfield canal, and a good road passing through it. Two fairs are held here, namely, on Wednesday in Whitsun week, and the first Wednesday in October.

GAZETTEER

OF THE TOWNSHIPS, VILLAGES, AND HAMLETS, ARRANGED ALPHABETICALLY UNDER THE HEADS OF THEIR RESPECTIVE PARISHES, WITH LISTS OF THE CLERGY, GENTRY, TRADERS, AND OTHER PRINCIPAL INHABITANTS IN EACH PARISH.

This Hundred contains fifteen parishes, and two extra-parochial places, namely,—

ALTCAR,	HUYTON,	PRESCOT,	WARRINGTON,
CHILDWALL,	LIVERPOOL,	TOXTETH-PARK, E.P.	AND
CROXTETH-PARK, E.P.	NORTH MEOLS,	WALTON-ON-THE-	WINWICK.
HALESALL,	ORMSKIRK,	HILL,

ALTCAR PARISH.

ALTCAR, is a village, township, and parish (without any dependent township) in the hundred of West Derby, in the deanery of Warrington, and in the archdeaconry of Chester; 7 miles WSW. of Ormskirk. When the census was taken in 1821, this parish contained 70 houses, occupied by 78 families, consisting of 499 persons; of these families 42 are chiefly employed in agriculture, 28 in trade, manufactures or handicraft; and the remaining 8 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed. In 1801, the aggregate amount of the population was 271, and in 1811, it had increased to 408. The annual rental of the parish according to the estimate for the county rate, is £3893. The parish church is dedicated to St. Michael; the living is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the Earl of Sefton, and the Rev. Thomas Garratt is the incumbent.

Of the 1163 families in this parish, 579 are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 341 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft; the remaining 243 are either engaged in professional pursuits, or unemployed. The parish church is dedicated to All Saints, the living is a vicarage in charge, in the patronage of the Bishop of Chester, and the Rev. Augustus Campbell, A.M. is the incumbent.

At Hale in this parish, is the seat of John Blackburne, Esq. M.P. who has occupied the distinguished situation of representative for the County of Lancaster, in what is called the independent interest, ever since the year 1784. The hall is an ancient structure; built by Sir Gilbert Ireland, Knight, and finished in the year 1674. There is here a valuable collection of Botanic plants, and a museum stored with natural curiosities, coins, and valuable books. The salt works at Dungeon, are situated at the south-west point of this township, on the banks of the Mersey.

Speke or Espeak, formerly belonged to the family of Sir John Molineux, of Sefton, but was given as a portion to Joan Molineux, on her marriage to William Norreys or Norris, Esq. a member of an ancient family that came over to England with William the Conqueror. Speke Hall deservedly ranks amongst the antiquities of Lancashire.

Sir Edward Norris distinguished himself in the battle of Flodden Field, and for his achievements on that day he was allowed to bring from the palace, the library of the deceased king of Scotland, many books of which are now at Speke, particularly some very large folios, said to contain the records and laws of Scotland at that time; he also brought from the same place the wainscot of the king's hall, and put it up in his own hall at Speke; wherein are seen all the orders of architecture, and round the top of it this inscription:—"Sleep not til thou hast well considered "how thou spent the day past; if thou hast well done thank God for't, if otherwise, repent."

This house has been suffered to fall into a state of partial dilapidation, but the great hall has been repaired and restored by its present owner, Richard Watt, Esq. (of Bishop Burton, Yorkshire,) who occasionally resides here. The following are the villages and townships of this parish:—

AIGBURTH, a hamlet in the township of Garston, 4 miles SE. of Liverpool.

ALLERTON, 5 miles SE. of Liverpool. In this township, close by the farm on which the famous Allerton Oak stands, and just at the point where four ways meet, are a quantity of remains called Calder Stones. They have the appearance of those stones which are usually regarded as Druidical remains. They bear traces of rude characters which have never been deciphered, and from the circumstance that, in digging about them, urns, made of the coarsest clay, containing human dust and bones, have been discovered, there is reason to believe, that they indicate an ancient burying place—but to what people, or what age it belonged has never been ascertained. Some of these urns were dug up about 60 years ago, and were in the possession of Mr. Mercer, of Allerton.

DUNGEON, a ham. in the township of Hale, 10 miles SE. of Liverpool. Here is situated the large salt refinery, belonging to Nicholas Ashon, Esq. of Much Woolton.

GARSTON, 6 miles SE. of Liverpool. The extensive works for refining salt, belonging to Messrs. Blackburne & Co. are in this township. The rock from which it is made is brought from Northwich, in Cheshire, and about 100 persons are employed here, chiefly in the simple process of dissolving this rock in salt water and afterwards boiling the brine, which then becomes salt.

GATEACRE, a hamlet in the twps. of Much & Little Woolton, 6 miles ESE. of Liverpool.

HALE, 11 miles SE. of Liverpl. The gigantic John Middleton, commonly called the Child of Hale, nine feet six inches high, was born here.

HALE BANK, a hamlet in the township of Hale Wood, 6 miles S. of Prescot.

HALE WOOD, 5 miles S. of Prescot.

OGLET, in the twp. of Speke, 9 mls. SE. of Lvpl. SPEKE, 8½ miles SE. of Liverpool.

WAVERTREE, 3 miles ESE. of Liverpool. Here is a well at which charitable contributions were anciently collected, bearing the following monkish inscription in antique letters—

"Qvi non dat quod Habet"

"Doemon Infra Ridet." Anno 1414."

Which may be thus freely translated:—

"He who here does nought bestow

HALSALL PARISH.

HALSALL is a parish, township, and village, in the hundred of West Derby, in the deanery of Warrington, and in the archdeaconry of Chester; 3 miles WNW. of Ormskirk. This parish contains five townships including two chapelries, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821; and the estimated annual rental of all the land, and buildings in each township in the parish :—

Of the 618 families in this parish, 391 are employed chiefly in agriculture; 160 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft; the remaining 67 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed. The parish church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is an ancient edifice, with a lofty spire, and has lately undergone some considerable repairs. The living is a rectory in charge, in the patronage of two ladies, Bridget and Alice Blundell; and the Rev. Richard Loxham, B. A. is the incumbent. A piece of curious stone sculpture, consisting of two figures in a recumbent posture, supposed to be Sir Edw. Halsall and his lady, and another monument on the north side to the memory of St. Cuthbert, shed an air of antiquity over the chancel. A beautiful marble monument records the virtues of the late Rev. Thomas Blundell, the pastor and rector of the parish. In this parish there is an interesting ruin, which seems never to have been completed, called Lydiat Abbey. Its date is in the reign of Henry the Eighth, when the Reformation probably suspended the labours of its Catholic builders. The neighbourhood abounds with Catholic families, and mass is regularly performed in the Old hall, where a priest now resides, and where successive ecclesiastics of the Catholic persuasion have lived ever since our eighth Henry condescended to take the national faith under his protection. The lords of Lydiat have been successively Lydiat, Blackburne, Ireland, Anderton, and Blundell. The following are the villages and townships of this parish :—

HASKAYNE, a hamlet, in the township of Down Holland, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles SW. of Ormskirk.

LYDIAT, 4 miles SW. of Ormskirk. Here are several estates left by Mr. Gore, worth about ninety pounds per annum (in 1825), to be distributed to the poor in money, on Tuesday before Christmas and on Tuesday before Easter.

Of the 536 families in this parish, 327 are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 139 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft; the remaining 70 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed. The parish church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, and formerly belonged to the dissolved monastery of Burcough, founded by the owner of Latham, Knowsley, and Roby. Since the dissolution, the patronage has passed into various hands, and is now in the possession of the Earl of Derby. The living is a discharged vicarage, and the Rev. Ellis Ashton, M. A. is the incumbent. A branch of the ancient and knightly family of the Harringtons resided at their mansion, called Huyton Hey, in this parish, for many generations, but the neglect of 150 years has reduced the house to a state of dilapidation.

Since the period of the civil wars, when Latham-house suffered so severely from the siege it endured, Knowsley, in this parish, ($\frac{1}{4}$ mile W. of Prescott) has been the principal seat of the Earls of Derby, and the dignity of the noble and ancient House of Stanley is here supported in a manner worthy of the first family in the county. Till the visit of Henry VII. to his mother, the Countess of Thomas the first Earl of Derby, (see vol. i. p. 34) Knowsley was a house of inferior note, but it was then enlarged by the erection of the stone buildings, with its two round towers, and it has undergone still further enlargements by the late and the present Earls. Knowsley has also to boast a choice collection of paintings, by some of the first masters of the Italian and Flemish schools, selected abroad by Hamlet Winstanley, a native artist, under the patronage and at the cost of James, the tenth Earl of Derby.

In addition to these rare foreign productions of the pencil, there is here also a fine gallery of family paintings, embodying a history of a family more closely interwoven with the great events in the annals of their country than any other in the kingdom. As early as the fourteenth century, we find the name of STANLEY amongst the heroes of Poitiers; in the contests between the houses of York and Lancaster, particularly on the field of Bosworth, when those contests were happily brought to an end, (see vol. i. p. 31); at Flodden-field (see vol. i. p. 39, 40); at the reformation (see vol. ii. p. 88); in the discovery of the gun powder treason (see vol. i. p. 54); in the civil wars of Charles I.; at the restoration of the Stuarts; and in the events of the glorious revolution of 1688, the members of this noble house are found bearing a distinguished part. According to Camden, the Stanleys sprang from the Barons of Audley, of Healey Castle, in the county of Stafford; but Bishop Rutter holds that they are of Saxon origin, and were seated at Stoneley, near the source of the Trent, from which lordship they took their surname. Without entering upon this dubious controversy, it may be sufficient here to remark, that their close connexion with the county of Lancaster is to be dated from the marriage of JOHN STANLEY, second son of William de Stanley, with Isabel, the daughter and heiress of Sir Thomas de Latham, the Lord of Latham and Knowsley, in the reign of Henry IV. (see vol. ii. p. 456.) The issue of this marriage was Sir John Stanley, whose son, SIR THOMAS, was created Baron Stanley, of Latham, in the county of Lancaster, by writ of summons to parliament, January 20th, 1455-6. This peer and his brother Sir William Stanley, by the seasonable reinforcements afforded to the Duke of Richmond, decided the battle of Bosworth-field, and greatly increased the possessions of the house of Stanley from the acquisition of the forfeited estates in Lancashire. The earldom of Derby was also added to Lord Stanley's rewards, October 27, 1485, but whether the title was taken from one of the extinct titles of the Duke of Lancaster, or from the hundred of the county of Lancaster in which the seat and principal possessions of the family are situated, is not very clearly ascertained. THOMAS, the son of that Lord Strange who had been surrendered as a hostage to Richard III. was the second Earl of Derby; he was succeeded by his son EDWARD, to whom Cardinal Wolsey was guardian; his successor was HENRY, the fourth earl, who was one of the commissioners that sat in judgment on and condemned Mary Queen of Scots, at Fotheringhay; FERDINANDO, his son, shone amongst the most accomplished men of his age, though he fell a victim to the imaginary power of witchcraft, the most vulgar of superstitions; he was succeeded by his younger brother, Sir WILLIAM STANLEY; whose son and successor, JAMES, Earl of Derby, was the champion of the royal cause in Lancashire and Cheshire, in the wars of Charles I. (see vol. i. p. 59 to 71), and whose military career was terminated on the block at Bolton, (see vol. i. p. 531.) CHARLES, his eldest son, the eighth Earl of Derby, contributed essentially to restore the ungrateful house of Stuart; WILLIAM RICHARD GEORGE, his successor, a nobleman of retired habits, dying without issue, was succeeded by his brother JAMES, the tenth earl, who had been bred up in martial discipline by the Prince of Orange, afterwards William III. of England, and served in the convocation parliament at the revolution in 1688-9, as member for Preston; dying without surviving issue, the earldom descended to EDWARD STANLEY, of Bickerstaff, a descendant of Thomas, the first Earl of Derby; his lordship married Elizabeth, only daughter and heiress of Robert Hesketh, of Rufford, the issue of which marriage was James, Lord Stanley (usually called Lord Strange) and several other children; Lord Strange married Lucy, daughter and co-heiress of Hugh Smith, Esq. of Weald-hall, in Essex, whose eldest son EDWARD SMITH STANLEY, the present earl, born Sept. 18, 1752, succeeded to the title and estates on the death of his grandfather, on the 24th of Feb. 1776, with the title of Earl of Derby, Lord Stanley, and Baronet; his lordship is also Lord-lieutenant, and Custos Rotulorum of the County Palatine of Lancaster, of which his eldest son, and heir, Edward Smith, Lord Stanley, born April 21, 1775, is one of the Knights of the Shire. The following are the villages and townships in this parishes:—

KNOWSLEY, a twp. 3 mls. NW. of Prescot.

TARBOCK, a township, 4 miles S. of Prescot.

Here are several coal mines belonging to the Earl of Sefton.

LIVERPOOL PARISH.—[For the History and Directory of this Parish see Vol. I. p. 149—489.]

NORTH MEOLS PARISH.

NORTH MEOLS, is a village, township, and parish, in the hundred of West Derby, in the deanery of Warrington, and in the archdeaconry of Chester; 9 miles NNW. of Ormskirk, situated on the south side of the estuary of the Ribble, and extending eight miles along the coast of the Irish sea. There were in this parish, in 1821, 604 houses, occupied by 548 families, and containing 2763 individuals; of which families 150 are employed chiefly in agriculture; 390 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft; and the remaining 8 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed. In 1801 the aggregate amount of the population was 1790; in 1811 it had swelled to 2496. The annual rental of the parish, according to the estimate for the county rate, is £7220. Formerly there was a fine bay here, seventeen fathoms deep, where vessels used to ride at anchor in safety, but the bay is now choked with sand, and the coast at this point is considered dangerous. The parish church is a small plain stone building, erected at different times, and was formerly subject to the Priory of Penwortham. It is dedicated to St. Cuthbert, and Peter Hesketh, Esq. is the patron. The living is a rectory, of which the Rev. Gilbert Ford, M.A. is the incumbent. This parish is famed for the longevity of its inhabitants. SOUTHPORT, the popular sea-bathing place, is in the parish of North Meols. MARTIN MEER, the ancient lake of that name, now partially drained, is also partly in this parish.

An annual fair is held here on the nearest Monday and Tuesday to the 20th of August, for horned cattle on the Monday, and sheep and horses on Tuesday.

Of the 603 families in this parish, 373 are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 133 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft; the remaining 97 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed.

The parish church of Sefton, which, for the beauty of its interior, exceeds perhaps any church in the county, is dedicated to St. Helen; and the living is a rectory in charge, (valued in the Liber Regis at £30 1s. 8d. yearly,) of which the Rev. Richard Rainshaw Rothwell, M.A. is both the patron and the rector. The ancient church was erected in the year 1111, but the present edifice is of the time of Henry VIII. built by Anthony Molyneux, rector of the place, a celebrated preacher, distinguished for acts of piety. The chancel is divided by a magnificent screen from the body of the church, and contains sixteen stalls of elegant sculpture. The sepulture of the "noble and knightly family of Molyneux," as Camden styles them, has been here for a succession of ages, and the chancel exhibits numerous monumental memorials of this ancient and noble race.

The mansion of the Molyneux family, situated at Sefton, in the time of the Conqueror, has disappeared, and its site is now occupied as a farm-house. This noble family has been distinguished in arms; Sir William Molyneux fought under Edward the Black Prince, and was made knight banneret at the battle of Navaret, in 1367. A monument in Sefton church records that Sir Richard Molyneux distinguished himself in the battle of Agincourt, and received the honour of knighthood from Henry V. Sir William Molyneux performed signal service in the memorable battle of Flodden Field, and was one of the heroes to whom Henry VIII. addressed the gratulatory letter inserted at the 40th page in the 1st volume of this work. Caryl Lord Molyneux was an eminent but unsuccessful loyalist, in the time of Charles I. Sir Richard Molyneux was advanced by Charles I. to the peerage of Ireland, in 1628. Till the middle of the last century the family was Catholic, but Viscount Charles William Molyneux having conformed to the established faith, on the 5th of March, 1769, was created Earl of Sefton on the 30th of November, 1771. The present head of the family is William Molyneux, Earl of Sefton, Viscount Molyneux, of Maryborough, a baronet of England, and Vice-admiral of Connaught in Ireland, M.P. for Droitwich; born 1772, and succeeded his father, the first Earl, December 30, 1794. The family residence is at Croxeth Park.

INCE BLUNDELL, 9 miles SW. of Ormskirk. Ince-hall, in this township, the seat of Charles Blundell, Esq. is richly stored with works of art, and contains a collection of ancient statuary, which may be safely pronounced of unrivalled merit and value in this country. Attached to the house is a new building called the Pantheon, exactly resembling the edifice of that name in Rome, though one-third less in size, erected by the late Henry Blundell, Esq.

for the purpose of containing and displaying the magnificent collection accumulated by his taste and liberality, of which some idea may be formed, when it is stated that it consists of about 100 statues, 150 busts, 110 bass reliefs, 19 sarcophagi and cinerary-urns, and 40 ancient fragments, besides marble pillars, tables, and other antiquities, with about 200 pictures.

TOXTETH PARK.

TOXTETH PARK adjoins to Liverpool on the south, to which town it forms a populous suburb. Though extra-parochial, this place pays tithes to Walton-on-the-Hill, to which parish it formerly belonged. In 1801, the population of this place amounted to 2069 individuals; in 1811, they had increased to 5864; and in 1821, to 12,829, forming 2580 families, of which 34 are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 99 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft. Since the last parliamentary census was taken, the inhabitants have considerably increased in numbers, and many new streets have been formed and completed. In 1814, the estimated annual value of the lands, messuages, and other buildings was £27,320. This place was anciently a park belonging to the Dukes of Lancaster. It afterwards passed into the Molyneux family, and has proved a source of wealth to the Earls of Sefton. Delightfully situated on the banks of the Mersey, and almost adjoining to Liverpool, it unites the benefits of the country to the conveniences of the town, and has become a favourite residence of the merchants and opulent traders, many of whom have here elegant mansions.

St. MICHAEL'S, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles SSE. of Liverpool. The church, which gives name to this hamlet, forms a distinguished and pleasing object from the river Mersey, in the sail from Runcorn or Eastham. The learned Jeremiah Horrocks lived in this place, and the house in which he was born in 1619, is yet standing. He died on the 3d of January, 1640.

WALTON ON THE HILL PARISH.

WALTON ON THE HILL is a village, township, and parish, in the hundred of West Derby, in the deanery of Warrington, and in the archdeaconry of Chester; 3 miles N. of Liverpool. This parish contains nine townships, including four chapelrys, of which the following forms the enumeration; with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821; and the estimated annual rental of all the lands, messuages, and other buildings in each township:—

Of the 2477 families in this parish, 978 are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 971 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft; the remaining 528 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed. The parish church is dedicated to St. Mary; the patronage of the living was originally in the Abbot and Monks of St. Peter, Salop; it afterwards passed by purchase, in the year 1470, into the family of Molyneux, who, in 1747, sold it, along with the advowson of Sef-ton, to Sir William Heathcote, Bart. Two members of Sir William's family have since enjoyed the rectory, and the Rev. Samuel Heathcote, M.A. is now the rector, and the Rev. Thomas Moss, M.A. the vicar of this parish. In 1810 the advowson of this church was purchased by John Leigh, Esq. of Sand hills, near Bootle, for £10,000, and the patronage of the living is now in that gentleman. The church is situated upon a fine eminence, affording a very extensive prospect in all directions, and serves as a sea mark for mariners. Formerly Liverpool was a member of this parish, and up to the year 1698, the church of St. Nicholas was a chapel of ease under the vicar of Walton. The following are the other villages and townships in this parish:

BOOTLE-CUM-LINACRE, 3 miles N. of Liverpool. This pleasant marine village is much resorted to in the summer season, as a sea-bathing place; a copious spring of fine soft water, rising in the township, supplies a large portion of the inhabitants of Liverpool with that invaluable article.

EVERTON, a chapelry, situated on a bold eminence, about 1 mile NE. of Liverpool, opposite to the bay of Bootle. This village has become a very favourite residence of the gentry of Liverpool; and for the salubrity of its air, and its vicinity to the sea, may not inaptly be called the Montpelier of the county. An ancient beacon, supposed to have been erected by Ranulph de Blundeville, Earl of Chester, in 1220, stood here till the year 1803, when it was blown down in a violent gale of wind.

FAZAKERLEY, a twp. 4 mls. NNE. of Livrpl.

FORMBY, a chapelry, 8 miles W. of Ormskirk. This township had anciently a chartered market, which has fallen into disuse. The hall is occupied by the Rev. Richard Formby, B.D. the incumbent curate of the chapel.

KIRKBY, a chapelry, 8 mls. NE. of Livpl.

KIRKDALE, 2 miles N. of Liverpool.

LINACRE, with Bootle, 4 miles N. of Liverpool.

SIMONS WOOD, 4½ miles SSE. of Ormskirk.

WEST DERBY, an ancient village and township, which gives name to the Hundred, 4 miles ENE. of Liverpool. When the Domesday Survey was taken, there stood here "a certain ruined castle," which had belonged to Edward the Confessor, who held the manor of West Derby.

WINWICK PARISH.

WINWICK is a village, township, and parish in the hundred of West Derby, in the deanery of Warrington, and in the archdeaconry of Chester, 3 miles N. of Warrington. This parish contains ten townships, including three chapelries, of which the following forms the enumeration, with the returns of the number of inhabitants in 1801, 1811, and 1821; and the estimated annual rental of each township in the parish:—

WINWICK, (Parish.)		POPULATION.					Estimated Annual Value.

Of the 3027 families in this parish, 463 are employed chiefly in agriculture, and 2458 in trade, manufactures, or handicraft; the remaining 106 are either engaged in professional pursuits or unemployed.

Camden describes Winwick as one of the richest livings in England,—he might have said, the richest of its kind. It is now of the estimated value of upwards of £3000 a year; and, in the time of Henry VIII., when the Liber Regis was compiled, it was returned as of the clear yearly value of £102 9s. 9d. The church is dedicated to St. Oswald, and the living is a rectory, of which the Earl of Derby is the patron, and the Rev. James John Hornby, A. M. the incumbent. The rector is lord of the manor, and has a glebe worth £1500 per annum; indeed the whole township belongs to the church, except a small estate, which is the property of the school. The church is an ancient pile, with a lofty spire. The period of its erection is unknown, though an opinion prevails that it is of an antiquity coeval with the introduction of the Christian religion into this country. Archbishop Usher, in his notes on the twenty-eight cities, wherewith Gildas says, this island was strengthened in the time of the Britons, is of opinion that Cair Guintguic was Winwick; and Bede, in his ecclesiastical history, expressly says, that Oswald was slain here, in 642. Several divines, eminent in their day, have held the benefice of Winwick: The Rev. C. Herle, prolocutor of the Westminster Assembly of Divines, was rector of this parish, in 1654. Subsequently Dr. Sherlocke, grandfather of the bishop of that name, held the living; and the last rector was the venerable Geoffry Hornby, who rebuilt the parsonage house.

There is a free grammar-school, founded and endowed by Gwalter Legh, about the middle of the sixteenth century, free to all the boys of the parish of Winwick.—See Vol. II. p. 433.

On an eminence, between Winwick and Newton, called the pass of Winwick, or Redbank, probably from the blood shed upon it, the Scots, in 1648, made a resolute stand for many hours, against the victorious army of Oliver Cromwell, who, with great loss on both sides, beat them from the ground; and the next day made himself master of all their remaining infantry, which, with their commander, Lieut.-Colonel Bayley, surrendered, on the bare condition of quarter, (see Vol. I. p. 69). This condition was either not faithfully fulfilled, or it was liable to some exceptions, for a number of the combatants were hanged in a field near the scene of action, which still bears the name of Gallow's Croft; and a large stone was fixed near the place, as a monument of the victory.

A laudable custom exists in this parish, of allowing a certain number of poor labouring people, of exemplary piety, industry, and good behaviour, one year's rent of their cottages; and hence a board is seen over the doors of those cottages which are thus honoured, with the year painted upon them in which they were free. This grant is made every year to six of the cottagers, by the Rev. James John Hornby, the present rector, and the benefits of the donation are very manifest in his parish. The following are the villages and townships in this parish:—

ARBURY, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles SSE. of Newton.

ASHTON IN MACKERFIELD, otherwise ASHTON IN THE WILLOWS, 3 miles NNW. of Newton. This large and populous village forms the centre of a brisk manufacturing district, where the poor are industrious, and their employers prosperous. In addition to the episcopal chapel, there are here a Friends' meeting house, a Methodist chapel, and a Roman Catholic chapel.

CROFT, 3 miles ESE. of Newton.

CULCHETH, 6 miles NE. of Warrington.

GOLBORNE, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile N. of Newton.

HAYDOCK, 2 miles NW. of Newton.

HOUGHTON, $2\frac{1}{2}$ mls. NNE. of Warrington.

KENYON, 2 miles ENE. of Newton.

LOWTON, 2 miles NE. of Newton.

MIDDLETON, 3 miles NNE. of Warrington.

PESFURLONG, 4 miles NE. of Warrington.

RISLEY, 4 miles NE. of Warrington.

STOCKPORT.

THOUGH not strictly within the prescribed limits of this work, Stockport is so closely connected both by trade and local situation, with the county of Lancaster, as to claim a brief notice. The Lancashire township of Heaton Norris, though separated from Stockport by the Mersey, is generally considered as a component part of the town, in the same way that Salford is considered as a part of Manchester. Nearly three centuries ago, William Smith, Rouge Dragon, speaking of this town, says "Stopford (commonly called Stopport) and I find it also written Stokefort and Storefort, extendeth on the south side of the river Mersey, which there parteth Cheshire from Lancashire, and is 6 miles NE. from Altringham. It hath a market every Friday, and yearly three fairs; that is to say, on Ascension Day, on Corpus Christi Day, and St. George's Even. This town, in times past, belonged to one of the same name, Baron of Stopford, who had a daughter and heir married to Sir ——— Warren, Knt. about the days of King Henry IV. and therefore Mr. Warren, of Poynton, is called Baron of Stopford."

It is true, that this town was held by the Warrens, but they held of the Despensers, who themselves were probably the successors of the de Costentyns. Rising still higher, Stockport was a Roman station, the site of whose citadel stood upon the Castle-hill. Here the Saxons erected a baronial castle, which communicated its name to the town, and both were denominated Stock-port, because the former was a port or castle in a wood.* Mr. Ormerod conjectures that Stockport was laid waste at the Norman conquest, and in this way accounts for the name not occurring in Domesday Book. The town gathered round the castle in the time of the Despensers, and was made a free borough by Robert de Stokeport, with the permission of Edward I. Earl of Chester. The same baron had a grant in 1260, of a fair for seven days at the festival of St. Wilfrid, and of a market on Friday. The manorial rights became vested in the Bulkeleyes, Lords of Bulkeley, in Cheshire, in virtue of the marriage of the late Lord Bulkeley with Elizabeth Harriet, daughter of the late Sir George Warren, K.B. and Lady Viscountess Warren Bulkeley, at present inherits this her paternal possession.

Formerly the town was incorporated, and even now a mayor is appointed, but the office is nominal, the government of the town and the direction of its police being in the hands of the resident and neighbouring magistrates,† and three constables, who in turn sit daily at the police-office, and once a fortnight hold a petty sessions. The lord of the manor (or the lady, as at present) holds a court leet and a court baron twice in the year. The jurisdiction of the leet is co-extensive with the township of Stockport; and at the Michaelmas court, the mayor, constables, and other officers of the town are annually appointed. The lord or lady of the manor appoints the two constables; but the mayor is chosen by the jury at this court, out of four burgesses, nominated by the head of the manor, and by him or her returned to the jury who appoint the other officers to the number of fifty, all of whom are sworn into their respective offices by the steward at an adjourned court for that purpose.‡

In the time of the civil wars, Stopworth, as it was then called, was occupied by the parliamentary forces from Manchester, but Prince Rupert, after a smart conflict, carried the town at the point of the sword, and made the garrison prisoners.¶ On the advance of Prince Charles and his forces from Manchester, in the year 1745, Stockport-bridge, like the bridge at Warrington, was broken down to impede the march of the rebels, and the prince was obliged to ford the Mersey at this place, immersed to the waist in water.§

The parish church of Stockport, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern building, erected under the authority of the act of George III. cap. 165, on the site of the ancient edifice, which being built of friable stone had become ruinous. The living is a valuable rectory, in the patronage of Lady Viscountess Bulkeley, and the Rev. Charles Keurick Prescott, M.A. is the incumbent. St. Peter's church is a plain but handsome brick building, erected at the sole expence of Wm. Wright, Esq. in the year 1765; the new church dedicated to St. Thomas, built by the commissioners under the million act, at a cost of £16,000, was begun on the 7th of September, 1822, and is now nearly finished.

The Wesleyan Methodists have three chapels here: Hillgate chapel, built in 1762, rebuilt in 1778, and enlarged in 1790; Park chapel, built in 1807; and Edgely chapel, built in 1817. This community have also a new and commodious chapel now erecting in Tiviot-Dale, which will be opened in the course of the present year, 1825. The New Methodist Connexion have a chapel in London-place, called Mount Tabor, built in 1798. The other places of worship are a Baptist chapel in Heaton-lane; three Independent chapels, namely, one in Heaton Norris, a second in Waterloo-road, and the third called the Tabernacle chapel, in Hillgate; the Unitarians have a chapel in High-street; the Catholic chapel is in Edgeley; and the Friends' meeting-house in Hillgate. To every church and chapel in Stockport a Sunday school is attached, and the emulation and zeal manifested in this place for the education of the children of the poor is highly exemplary, as will appear from the subjoined returns of those schools in May, 1825:—

A spacious school house of brick, four stories high, 132 feet long, and 57 feet in width, was erected by subscription for the use of children of all denomination in 1805 at a cost of £6500; which is said to be the largest in the world.

The Free Grammar School of Stockport was founded in the year 1487, by Sir Edmund Shaa, goldsmith and alderman of London, and is free "to al maner person's children, and other that woll come to lerne."* The Dispensary, of which Lady Viscountess Warren-Bulkeley, is patroness, was established in 1792, and the small handsome edifice in which it is now held was erected five years afterwards. To this institution a House of Recovery has been added, and the expenditure for the support of both amount to about £1000 per annum. Of the benefit it confers some estimate may be formed from upwards of 2000 patients having been admitted from the 25th March, 1824, to the 25th March, 1825, the principal part of whom were discharged cured.

Silk was the original manufacture of this town, and the first mills in England for winding and throwing silk on the Italian principle, are said to have been established here. The superior advantages of the cotton trade, induced the proprietors, at a subsequent period, to turn their machinery to the spinning of that article, and cotton is now the staple manufacture of the place. There are indeed, a few silk spinners still, but there is not one silk mill in the parish, while in the town of Stockport, including Portwood and Heaton Norris, there are 47 cotton factories, worked by 62 steam engines and water wheels, of the aggregate power of 1880 horses; exclusive of 4 steam engines used in calico printing, 1 in grinding corn, and 3 in machine-making, forming a total of 70 engines of the power of 1960 horses. Within the same limits there are 5730 power looms, chiefly worked by steam engines. A woollen manufactory, unique in its kind, has been recently established here, by Peter Marsland, Esq. wherein woollen cloth is woven by machinery, and the fabrics, which have not been thought unworthy of the royal countenance, are said to be equal in texture to the finest and most silky of the French cloths. There is also an immense calico-printing establishment, connected with blue-dye works, said to be the most extensive in Europe. Some idea may be formed of the magnitude of this establishment from the average duty paid on the goods printed, amounting, at each six weeks sitting to from 11 to £12,000, estimated at 1,270,000 yards. The concern is carried on by Messrs. T. Marsland and Son. The manufacture of hats has long been a considerable branch of business in Stockport; and all these various trades and processes are much facilitated by the abundance of coal brought from Worth, Poynton, Norbury, and the neighbouring districts on the Manchester and Ashton canal, which joins the Peak Forest canal, and a branch of which extends to Stockport, thus opening a water communication with all the principal trading towns of the kingdom. (see Map of Inland Navigation.) An attempt was made some years ago, to establish a Muslin Hall in this place, and a large circular brick building, erected by the late Sir George Warren, on the site of the ancient castle was appropriated to that purpose, but the project failed and the building is now an Inn.

The population of Stockport attained an increase of one-third within the first twenty years of the present century: in 1801 the numbers were 14,830; in 1811 they amounted to 17,545, and in 1821 to 21,726, and the ratio of augmentation has by no means diminished during the last four years. Wealth and numbers give rise to public improvements; during the session of parliament of 1825, an act of parliament was obtained for incorporating a Coal Gas Light Company in Stockport, and another act was obtained by Peter Marsland, Esq. for the better supply of the inhabitants of that place with water. A very important improvement is also now in progress, involving an expense of £30,000, by which the Manchester and Buxton road will be carried from Heaton Chapel, half a mile north of Stockport, over a bridge at an elevation of 47 feet above the Mersey, with arches over several streets, extending to Rowcroft Smithy, at the southern extremity of the town, a mile beyond the bridge, thereby avoiding the narrow, precipitous, and dangerous road through the streets of Stockport.

On the 29th of March 1822, a vehicle of public communication was established by Mr. J. Lomax, called the Stockport Advertiser, which newspaper continues to be published weekly by him on the Friday.

The ancient chartered market is still held on Friday, at which a large quantity of cheese, the staple product of the County of Chester, is sold, and the market continues till Saturday night for butchers' meat and other provisions. There are now four annual fairs, namely, on the 4th of March, the 25th of the same month, the 21st of May (for cattle), and the 23d of October.

Stockport has all the characteristics of a manufacturing town; it is close built and irregular; in some parts very precipitous, with an ascent from the north which renders it difficult of access. At a distance the houses on the hill seem piled upon those in the valley, the base of the one ranging with the roofs of the other. The surrounding scenery is however, bold and beautifully picturesque. The prospect on every side is rich in wood and water. The Tame and the Goit are seen winding through the valley at the east of the town to their confluence a little below Portwood Bridge, where their united stream takes the name of the Mersey—the ancient boundary of the Saxon kingdoms of Mercia and Northumbria, and the continually expanding division line between Lancashire and Cheshire, till it is lost in the Irish Sea. The town stretches along the south bank of the river in the form of a large amphitheatre; and the manufactories rising in tiers above each other, when lighted with the brilliant gaseous vapour of modern discovery, present in the evenings of the winter months a towering illumination of the imposing grandeur of which it is difficult to convey an adequate idea.

MANUFACTURING VILLAGES.

CHEADLE.—This parish consists of three townships, viz. Cheadle-Moseley, Cheadle-Bulkeley, and Handford-cum-Bosden, and contained, at the taking of the last census, 6508 souls. The village of Cheadle is 3 miles W. of Stockport, partly in Cheadle-Bulkeley and partly in Cheadle-Moseley. There is here an ancient parish church, and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. The church living is a rectory, in the patronage of the Rev. Henry Delves Broughton, of Broughton Hall, in Staffordshire, who is also rector; and the Rev. Matthew Dunn is curate. This village is remarkable for the beauty of its situation, and for its very clean and neat appearance.

The populous village of Edgeley, and that of Brinksway, both in contiguity with Stockport, are in this parish, and the names in both are incorporated with the Stockport Directory.

AND ABOUT 100 COLLIERIES.

Making upwards of 500 Establishments; the principal part of which are worked by Steam, and to supply the deficiency there are many Steam Engines in other concerns not enumerated above. Assuming, then, that there are 500 additional Steam Engines, at an average of 15 horse power each, the numbers will stand thus :—

In the Manufacturing towns as quoted above 1041 Engines of 23,335 horse power.

Of the above mechanical force the power of 20,000 horses is probably employed in the spinning of cotton, each horse power yielding, with the aid of machinery, as much yarn as 1066 persons produced 50 years ago without it; so that the quantity of yarn now spun daily in Lancashire, by steam, is as much as could have been spun with the distaff and the spindle by 21,320,000 persons—an amount equal to the total population of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

Estimating the consumption of each horse power at 180lbs. of fuel daily, and the working days at 300 in the year, the result will be, that the Steam Engines at work in this County consume 743,344 Tons of Coal.*

* By an error of the press, the annual consumption of Coal, mentioned at p. 134 of this Volume requires to be corrected by the above statement.

FINIS.

David & Charles are leading publishers of new books on industrial, economic and transport history and allied subjects, and also publish reprints of outstanding old books and maps. New works of Lancashire interest include The Industrial Archaeology of Lancashire (1969), The Canals of the North West, The Lancashire & Yorkshire Railway (1969), and Brindley at Wet Earth Colliery. The Lancashire sheets of the reprint of the entire first edition of the one-inch ordnance survey will be of special interest. Lancashire topics are also prominent in the quarterly journal, Industrial Archaeology. These and many other works are listed in the David & Charles catalogue available on request from South Devon House, Newton Abbot, Devon.

A DESCRIPTION OF THE COUNTRY FROM THIRTY TO FORTY MILES ROUND MANCHESTER

By J. Aikin

This very substantial work totalling nearly 800 pages with numerous engravings and several maps was published in 1795, at a particularly interesting stage of the Industrial Revolution. Aikin describes the rise of the waterway system in the North West, the increasing range of industries in the Manchester region. He gives particular account of the towns and chief villages of the area, their history, population, commerce and manufactures. He also comments on buildings, government and other matters relevant at that time.

MISS WEETON'S JOURNAL OF A GOVERNESS

Miss Weeton's Journal was warmly received when discovered and first published in two volumes in 1936 and 1939, and has often been referred to and quoted for its useful source material since then. But with growing interest in the industrial revolution, particularly as it affected the lives of individual men and women, this new edition (with an introduction by J. J. Bagley) seems assured of a wider readership.

Miss Weeton reports objectively on social and economic conditions and provides fascinating details about many everyday things, such as the conditions under which governesses worked, life in Liverpool while the city was taking root, passenger travel on canal boats, and early tourism. Most of the action takes place in Upholland, Liverpool and Wigan, but there are also visits for work or pleasure to the Lake District, North Wales, the Isle of Man, and London – and the reader quickly discovers that Miss Weeton was no ordinary traveller or visitor.
